Knox Draws First Number Tonight in 2d Draft Lottery

Historic 'Goldfish Bowl' to Be Used To Give Serials To 21-Year-Olds

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox will reach into a big glass bowl at 7 p. m. today, shifting into motion the Nation's second peacetime Selective Service lottery.

The drawing in the Departmental Auditorium, expected to take about two hours, will determine order numbers—and consequently the conscription destiny—of 5,518 new Washington candidates for the Army and 750,000 over the country.

They are men who have become 21 since October 16, original registration day, and who signed up for possible service July 1.

Doors of the big hall on Constitution Avenue, between Twelfth and Fourteenth Streets, will be thrown open at 6 p. m. Admission to the public is free, national selection officials said.

Capsules Well Shaken

An unusual precautionary move yesterday completed arrangements for the draw. Selective Service officials placed the 800 capsules to be used tonight on a tarpaulin, then mixed them thoroughly by vigorously raising and lowering the canvas. There were complaints after the October lottery that the capsules were not adequately mixed because many high numbers were drawn early.

An armed guard of Secret Service men will carry the all-important capsules, now in a Treasury vault, into the hall at 6:45 p. m. They also will deliver the historic "goldfish bowl," used in the first World War and last October. It was brought here from Independence Hall, Philadelphia, by a police escort last night.

Col. Charles Morris, U. S. A., retired, who blindfolded Newton D. Baker in 1917 and Secretary Henry L. Stimson last October, will tie the band over Knox's eyes tonight.

The second capsule will be drawn by Assistant Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, representing the War Department in the absence of Secretary Stimson. He will be followed by Army Chief of Staff George C. Marshall, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, chief of the Navy Bureau of Navigation; Senator Robert Reynolds, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee; Representative Andrew J. May, House Military Affairs Committee head, and Representative James W. Wadsworth, coauthor of the Selective Service Act.

Patriotic and veterans' organization representatives next will plunge their hands into the goldfish bowl. The bulk of the drawing, however, will be performed by 50 noncommissioned officers from nearby camps, who entered the Army via the draft route.

Eight hundred of the salmon-colored, noninflammable capsules which contain serial numbers will be drawn. This number is more than sufficient to assign order numbers to registrants in all of the Nation's local boards. Heaviest registration on July 1 was at the Sparrows Point board in Baltimore where 661 men signed certificates.

Majority to Be Called

The new order numbers will be integrated with those on the master lists of older selectees and it is believed that most of the 21-year-olds, considered prime Army material because of their youth, will be sworn in in the next 12 months.

Washington draft headquarters said, however, that none of the new registrants need expect calls before the latter part of September. The July call here is almost complete and men to be inducted in August are already taking physical exam-

The pretty, blonde wife of a Camp Meade selectee, was chosen the winner last night at the end of The Post contest on what the wives and sweethearts of men in the armed services should do about the "good times" their menfolk allegedly are having with imported models and "selected cuties."

To Mrs. Priscilla Chandler, of 114 East Bradley Lane, Chevy Chase, goes the $25 prize. She is a stenographer in the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the Justice Department while her husband is serving with the 110th Field Artillery.

Her answer was picked from more than 100 letters received by "the puzzle editor" in the contest which began a week ago. To all the contestants. The Post expresses thanks.

Mrs. Chandler has an unusual idea for disposing of the $25 she won. That's part of her answer. Read on. . . .

Justice McReynolds 'Adopts' 33 Youthful War Victims

James C. McReynolds, retired associate justice of the Supreme Court, has "adopted" 33 child victims of the "blitz" on Britain, it was announced last night by Henry J. Allen, chairman of the British Child Aid Committee of the Save the Children Federation.

McReynolds has offered to become the first of a thousand donors of $10,000 each in order to raise a $10,000,000,000 fund for the relief of the young war victims.

The Reynolds "adoptees" include 14 little girls ranging in age from 1 to 11 years, and 19 boys from 1 to 14 years old. They are English, Welsh and Scottish, with the exception of one child who is a Belgian refugee in England. The little Belgian is Willy Viamynck, age 4 years, whose parents escaped with him under a rain of German bombs on one of the last ships to leave Ostend.

Of the British group, four are from a family of six children in the "distressed" area of South Wales, three are children of a father reported missing in action since the evacuation of Dunkirk, two who were orphaned by that action, and four whose fathers now are serving with British forces at the front.

The children are cared for in Britain, with the American "godparent" providing $30 a year for each child's maintenance. Usually the sponsor is supplied with the child's picture and "an occasional priceless letter, in the child's handwriting."

Allen, former Kansas Governor and Senator, said 9,000 of the children already have been "adopted" by Americans.

Allen is leaving by clipper plane Saturday for London on a first-hand survey of child welfare under war conditions.

Meeting the Emergency

First Lady Favors Big Families To Prevent National Decay

By the United Press

Cambridge, Mass., July 16.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt tonight gave qualified support to the suggestion of Professor Carle C. Zimmerman of Harvard that married couples produce three or four children to prevent National decay.

Zimmerman, a sociology professor, said the declining birth rate constitutes a "real crisis" and charged that "America is hampered in a war era by a weakened and decadent familism."

Mrs. Roosevelt, speaker of the evening at the New England conference on tomorrow's children, agreed there was a need for repopulation. However, she insisted babies should not be produced when the parents cannot provide sufficient food to feed them or where they came so close together that it had a bad effect on the health of both the children and the mother.

In his talk Zimmerman had suggested that girls marry when they are 18, so they can have their fourth child by the time they are 25. "A mother," he said, "should figure on having her last child ready for high school by the time she is 40."

He urged married couples to have more children because "parents of one or two children not of military age must make up for the shortage of births that will occur during the next ten years because of delayed marriages of soldiers."

Mrs. Roosevelt also told the conference that as long as democracy moves forward in this country "you have no need to fear for the future of the United States." Unless democracy moves forward, she said, it is worth no more than any other form of government and would not be worth fighting and dying for. "The minute we lie down is the time when the Fascist form of government will begin to make its first impression by propaganda."

Accent on Youth

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

A shakeup in the Army high command, designed to bring younger and more vigorous officers to major posts in the Nation's new military machine, was announced yesterday by the War Department.

New chiefs were appointed for the armored force, the vitally important Caribbean defense command, and four Army corps. Twenty generals in all were affected.

Besides the emphasis on youth and physical and mental vigor, added significance was seen in the selection of an airman, Maj. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, for the Caribbean command.

Andrews, husky former General Headquarters Air Force chief, who is 57 but seems much younger, will succeed 62-year-old Maj. Gen. Daniel Van Voorhis. He now heads the Caribbean Air Defense Command as Van Voorhis subordinate.

Devers Heads Armored Troops

New commander of the Army's panzer units will be Maj. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, now heading the Ninth Division. The selection occasioned great surprise in military circles, not only because the War Department went outside the armored force in choosing its new chief, but also because Devers has never held a tank assignment before.

The 53-year-old former artilleryman, however, is considered one of the Army's most able leaders and has been long marked for high rank.

Maj. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, present armored force chief and the Army's leading tank expert, has

D. C. Lawyer Found Dead On Hotel Roof

The nude body of Alden S. Bradley, 33-year-old lawyer, of 620 D Street Northeast, was found last night on a first-floor roof of the Cairo Hotel, 1615 Q Street Northwest, and another lawyer, T. D. Puckett, was being questioned by police early today.

Bradley is believed to have plunged to his death from Puckett's seventh-floor room, where he was visiting yesterday afternoon.

Big German Break-Through Perils Moscow, Reds Admit; Only 110 Miles Away, Nazis Say

Advance Continues On Soviet Capital, Kiev Threatened, Berlin Declares

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Thursday), July 17. A German dispatch from the eastern front today said German speed troops cleared a battlefield of Russians at a point only 110 miles west of Moscow two days ago and since then had pushed on eastward.

The account, carried by D. N. D., official news agency, said the Germans successfully completed an engagement with "several thousand" Russians encircled in the forests near Gorodishche.

Although there are several Russian towns of this name, an authorized spokesman gave assurance that the one near Rzhev on the Riga-to-Moscow railway was the one meant.

(Maps show a Pogoreloe-Gorodische in that location and show at least four towns named simply Gorodische. One of these is east of Moscow, another 70 miles west of Minsk, a third 50 miles southwest of Novgorod, and the fourth on Lake Peipus, east of Leningrad.)

Advance Continues

The D. N. B. dispatch, which was given no special prominence, said German units following the first assault troops made a cleanup of the battlefield and took 500 prisoners, then "quickly followed the advance, which already had pushed rapidly eastward."

Pressing forward after a heavy aerial bombardment of rail lines in the vicinity of Lepel, the German troops were reported by D. N. B. last night to be advancing rapidly on that second largest Russian city.

The German forces pushing northwestward have made such speedy progress, the agency said, that the Russians had been forced to make a stand in unfavorable positions with "considerable losses" resulting.

From the air, meanwhile, the Luftwaffe is raining heavy blows on the Russians who "no longer are fighting under a unified command," it was asserted here. German commentators expressed pleasure at the work of the air force.

Disorganized Retreat Claimed

D. N. B. declared the German air force now had disrupted hundreds of miles of Russia's most vital railways, and that "as a result of this destruction large troop units cannot be moved to the rear in orderly

Japanese Cabinet's Resignation Viewed Here as Blow at Soviet

Naval Man Predicts End of Pact With Reds

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

A high naval authority declared last night that the resignation of the Japanese cabinet clears Nippon's hands for renunciation of its nonaggression pact with Russia and an excursion into Soviet Siberia, in case the Red armies are overwhelmed by German military might.

This source, a veteran observer of Far Eastern affairs, expressed the view that the fall of the cabinet of Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye would be construed in Tokyo as freeing the Japanese government from its contract of April 13 to "respect the territorial integrity" of Russia and to "observe neutrality" toward the Russo-German conflict.

The informant declined to permit use of his name.

Disagreement Expressed

Other qualified war observers told newsmen during the first week of the Russo-German war, however, that there was little prospect of a Japanese clash with the Soviets. They pointed out that there were only 11 Japanese divisions in Manchoukuo facing 83 divisions of the Soviet Siberian army, with 56 other Japanese divisions tied up by the war in China.

As official Washington tensely awaited formation of a new Jap-

By the United Press

Tokyo (Thursday), July 17.—Japan's basic international policy will not be changed as result of the resignation of the cabinet of Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye, the Domei news agency said today, quoting authoritative government circles.

Emperor Hirohito hastened here from his summer home to deal with the formation of a new cabinet which is expected to be dominated by army and navy leaders.

The authoritative circles quoted by Domei said there will be "no change in the government's basic policies regarding the domestic and international situation," including Japan's basic policy established in Japan's peace treaty with the (Japan-controlled) Chinese government at Nanking."

(In London responsible British quarters believed one result of the cabinet's resignation would be imminent threat of a large-scale Japanese thrust into the Netherlands East Indies or French Indo-China.)

British Hammer Ships at Rotterdam In Daring Foray

By the Associated Press

London, July 16.—The Royal Air Force reported bomb hits on a 15,000-ton ship and many other vessels in a daring low level raid on Rotterdam Harbor today but acknowledged loss of four planes to increasing swarms of German fighters believed to have been shifted from the Russian front to defend the western air.

The official account of the Rotterdam raid said several squadrons of Blenheim bombers made direct hits "on many ships, including one vessel of over 15,000 tons and a number of others between 2,000 and 10,000" and caused heavy damage to warehouses and stores.

Bombers and fighters striking out on northern France reported meeting German fighters in force.

The Germans were declared to have made the move to strengthen the defense of their homeland and occupied territories against increasingly heavy British day and night assaults.

Shore watchers on the English southeast coast saw R. A. F. planes sweep across the Channel early tonight apparently heading for targets between Calais and Boulogne. Then they heard a long burst of firing and a short time later British Spitfire fighters were seen returning, apparently from combat.

Nazis Seek To Rush Troops Across Turkey

Aim at Soviet Caucasus; Ankara Stalls for Time

By the Associated Press

Ankara, July 16.—A German bid for the right to send troops across Turkey into the Soviet Caucasus was reported today as a large item in military, diplomatic and economic stresses pulling this country into a new tug-of-war between Germany and Great Britain.

German Ambassador Franz von Papen was reported to have sounded out Turkey on the transport of troops and supplies contingent on a decisive German victory over Russia by September.

Turkish officials were said to have replied that such a question was premature.

Turkey is a non-belligerent ally of Britain but signed a 10-year friendship pact with Germany on June 18, four days before the German-Russian war began.

In addition to the transport request, the Germans were reported striving to double their commercial dealings with Turkey and to be seeking at premius prices the vital Turkish chrome ore which now goes to Britain.

Countering, the British were said to be plugging loopholes in their contract to take all Turkish chrome ore production and to be telling the Turks that United States deliveries of war materials make it more likely that Turkey can get arms from Britain than from Germany.

Red Gains in South

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Thursday), July 17. Germany's armored troops now have reached the Smolensk area 90 miles east of battle-scarred Vitebsk and 230 miles from Moscow on the road to the Soviet capital, the Soviet information bureau announced today.

(This was the first time that the Russians have mentioned Smolensk, and this would appear to be the most serious threat yet to Russian defenses on the central front protecting the capital. It admitted a German break-through some 50 miles deeper than any previously acknowledged. Smolensk is an important rail and communications center and already has been heavily bombed by Nazi planes.)

At the same time, the Soviets said a German tank battalion retreating from Rogachev, on the Dnepr River to the south, had been surrounded and destroyed.

Heavy Fighting

The Germans apparently have been hurled back from the Dnepr 50 miles to the Bobruisk sector, where heavy fighting was reported still going on.

Mention of Pskov, 150 miles south of Leningrad, as another important battle area indicated Red troops still were holding up the German drive on Leningrad from the south.

On the southern front, Red troops were reported still resisting the Germans at Novograd-Volynski, 130 miles west of the Ukraine capital, Kiev.

It was in this area that the Russians yesterday claimed the counterattacking Red army had kept German infantry from catching up to support advance Nazi mechanized units which apparently had swept around Novograd-Volynski in the attempt to reach Kiev.

The Soviet communique said the Red air force again bombed the Rumanian oil center of Ploesti, and the Rumanian ports of Sulina and Tulcea.

Successful attacks on German motorized units and Nazi planes on the ground also were reported, the Red airmen particularly concentrating on Nazi troop concentrations gathered to cross Russian rivers.

The Red counteroffensive in the Rogachev area, which roughly is 150 miles southwest of Smolensk, first was reported by the Soviet newspaper Izvestia.

(Should the Germans be successful in the Smolensk area they would threaten the rear of these Red forces fighting along the southern course of the Dnepr River in the Rogachev sector.)

Belgian Airmen Secretly Recondition Old Plane Almost Under Nazi Guns, Escape to England

Youths Worked by Shaded Flashlight in Barn While German Sentries Paced 400 Yards Away

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, July 17.—Two youthful Belgian airmen are being hailed as heroes of one of the most daring exploits of the war after their escape to England in an old single motor airplane they reconditioned almost under the guns of German sentries.

Demobilized from the Belgian air force when King Leopold capitulated before the German march last year, the airmen spent months seeking a way out of Belgium.

Finally they found the obsolete plane for which they had searched. Once used as a Belgian army training plane, it was stored in a barn.

They found it at night by peering through a keyhole while German army sentries paced their beat 400 yards away.

Working by the light of a shaded flashlight, they took impressions of the lock and made keys. Once inside they examined the plane and found it intact except for instruments which had been removed by the Germans.

They separated to find materials for instruments and then, working at night,—sometimes hiding in attics of British sympathizers—they manufactured a few crude instruments such as an air speed indicator.

There was oil in the plane but the big problem was gasoline. And that problem had an easy solution, according to the younger of the two, who is 24.

"The Germans wanted money and we had money, so we got the gasoline," he said. "They always want money."

Fuel and instruments were hidden in the barn and for 12 nights the fliers made trips to ready the plane for its flight.

Sometimes as they worked they heard "the sound of the R. A. F. bombing the Ruhr—it made us feel better."

Sometimes they lay silent in the gloom of the barn as heavy footfalls of German sentries sounded.

Once when they were testing oil, some spilled on the floor. "We didn't want to leave any so we soaked it up," they said. "That took an hour of our time and the nights are short."

When the night for the escape came, they found the lock on the door had been changed. They made new keys and crept into the barn only to find their fuel had been stolen.

They got more but this time they stole it from the Germans—and discovered it was ordinary fuel unsuitable for use in an airplane motor. So they distilled aircraft gasoline in retorts hidden in the hay in the barn.

Finally, they were ready. They trundled the aircraft out of the barn in the still of the night. The engine wouldn't turn over! A feverish inspection disclosed the carburetor was badly regulated.

They fixed the carburetor and when the motor roared to life they took off from the meadow. They didn't take time to warm the motor because they didn't want the Germans to get close. After what seemed to them an eternity, they said, the plane lifted from the ground and just managed to clear the trees which ringed it.

Barely Missed Treetops in Night Take-off Almost Forced Down at Sea by Engine Trouble

"It was very close," said the 25-year-old elder of the duo. "We caught branches from treetops with our undercarriage."

As they left they saw lights on the field below and thought they heard the crack of German rifles.

Wheezing mightily, the ship climbed to about 9,000 feet and headed for England. German searchlights probed the skies, but never caught the ship in the beams. The German antiaircraft batteries did not open fire.

As the fugitives reached the sea, the engine began to cough and the plane lost altitude, dropping to about a quarter of a mile above the dull gray waters of the Channel. The fliers had no lifebelts or parachutes.

Feebly at first, the motor picked up. When they neared England an R. A. F. patrol forced them down but didn't open fire because the two airmen had painted the red, gold and black cockade of the Belgian air force on the side of the machine.

In the craft they carried various documents including news of the imprisonment of the burgomaster of Brussels, who they said had defied the Germans and posted a proclamation calling on loyal Belgians to resist the invaders.

"It is bad in Belgium, very bad," the elder airman said. "You do not look at little children because it will hurt. They are starving. They have no future. That is why we came. To fight the Germans. Now we join the Belgian air force, with pleasure."

Tobruk Uncrushed By Hourly Blitzes

By Godfrey H. P. Anderson
British Journalist

Inside Besieged Tobruk, Libya, July 14 (Delayed)—Here in the most blitzed town in Africa you can almost set your watch by the daily and nightly Stuka raids.

A thousand tons of bombs have been unloaded on this battered white-walled town and the arid acres surrounding it, yet Tobruk still is far from tottering.

After more than three months it still is holding out, though many of its buildings are crumbled to dust, though the masts and funnels of sunken shipping dot the harbor like tombstones in a marine graveyard, though the sons of Australia still keep vastly superior numbers of Germans and Italians at bay 8 miles from town.

The navy keeps the sea route open to assure supplies for Tobruk's men and guns.

No Comfortable Jobs

There are no comfortable jobs in this blitzed base. Here work which generally is done in a sheltered position well back of the fighting line has to be carried out under front line conditions.

It is estimated that some kind of air raid is in progress over Tobruk almost every hour day and night.

Some times a big shell from German long-distance cannon—"Peeping Tom"—screams into town and lops off another roof or topples another tottering wall.

"Lucky we like fresh air," says an Aussie and he and his crew plug a new hole in their draughty billet.

A phonograph grinds out the "Blue Danube Waltz" grotesquely from a half-wrecked house on a square which someone has renamed Piazza Brown.

The Britons' "Little Audrey" barks a defiant reply to "Peeping Tom." And work goes on full speed in a town without women, without civilians, without even a drop of beer.

75 Tons of Stores

Down at the ordnance depot where they can supply you anything—well, almost anything—from an engine for a tank to a new cork for your water bottle, clerks calmly issue some of the 75 tons of stores the navy ran through the blockade this week.

Cobblers with their mouths full of tacks hammer repairs to another 60 pairs of worn army boots and make new rubber-soled shoes for patrol work out of old inner tubes with the Aussies' felt hats for uppers.

Mechanics practicing what the C. O. (commanding officer) calls "cannibalism" do marvels making one good vehicle from several damaged ones.

The bakers shove another thousand loaves into their ovens, the postoffice on "London Street" sells more stamps for letters home and another issue of the mimeographed newspaper "Tobruk Truth" appears for circulation with rations.

No Food Shortage

A camouflage unit finds there are more ways of disguising things than with paint and improvises materials from captured Italian coffee, condemned tomato sauce and flour paste.

Which indicates that Tobruk is not short of food.

Along battered streets of the blitz base, men meet old comrades resting out of the line. They have lived within a few yards of each other in their holes in the ground at the front but many have not met for months.

"Hullo you old desert rat," cries a man from south Australia to a pal.

Besides Germans and Italians, the desert rat has had to fight torrid heat of the Libyan mid-summer which puts a man in a bath of sweat at the slightest physical effort; endure frequent dust storms when a yellow coating of sand covers the body from head to foot, smothers food and grits between the teeth; experience myriad hungry fleas and mosquitoes and slake a raging thirst with brackish water.

Prisoners Morale Low

Yet the only evidence I saw of low morale was among Italian prisoners when bombers roar overheard the Italian wounded in the hospital.

"Don't worry," quips a cheery cockney orderly. "Them square-headed beggars couldn't hit pins in a pin cushion."

COL. MOELDERS

Nazi Honored For Knocking Off 101 Planes

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 16.—Lieut. Col. Werner Moelders, leader of this war's version of Baron Manfred von Richthofen's World War "flying circus," received from Adolf Hitler today Germany's highest decoration for bravery, the oak leaves with swords in diamonds on the knights cross of the iron cross.

In a special communique issued by the Fuehrer's headquarters on the eastern front, Moelders was credited with shooting down 101 planes since the start of the war, 21 more than were claimed for Von Richthofen, heretofore Germany's ace of aces.

(Von Richthofen was shot down on the Somme front in 1918.)

The communique said:

"In the course of fighting on the east front Lieut. Col. Moelders, commodore of a pursuit squadron, yesterday shot down five Soviet planes. Thus in this war he has attained a total of 101 planes shot down and, including his 14 bagged in the Spanish war, has won a total of 115 air victories.

"The Fuehrer and commander in chief of the armed forces has bestowed on this heroic symbol of the air force and most successful pursuit flier of the world, as the first officer of the German armed force to receive it, the highest decoration for bravery—oak leaves with swords in diamonds on the knights cross of the iron cross."

Germany's iron cross, second class, has been awarded to 27 Catholic field chaplains, and four others have received the decoration, first class, for their part in the Nazi Balkan and eastern campaigns, D. N. B., official German news agency, said today.

D. N. B. said 1,700 iron crosses have been given Protestant clergymen since the war began.

Australian Flies Back Plane Virtually Wrecked by Nazis

By the Associated Press

London, July 16.—A young Australian pilot flew home from battle today in a bomber almost literally shot out from under him in a raid over German-held territory.

His rear gunner was dead and his radio operator was injured, but he landed with:

1. Elevators shot away.
2. One rudder useless.
3. Wings bullet-riddled.
4. Gasoline tanks and oil tanks bullet-riddled.
5. Fuselage heavily gashed by shellfire.
6. Undercarriage damaged.
7. Radio useless.

The air ministry news service, describing the exploit as "one of the most remarkable flying feats of the war," said the bomber was first caught by German shellfire which killed the rear gunner and sent the plane into a vertical stall because of damaged controls.

Then came a 7,000-foot spin and while the pilot was trying to get back an even keel another German fighter attacked. The plane was riddled with tracer bullets and cannon shell from nose to tail.

The Australian could not get higher than 7,000 feet, so he had to fly through a hail of antiaircraft fire until he was over the North Sea.

Upon landing the pilot found one more bit of damage.

He had a flat tire.

anese cabinet, the United States took active steps of further protection against any extension of hostilities.

The Navy announced that water approaches to the Far Eastern stronghold of the Philippines had been mined, warning shipping that navigation would be hazardous in Manila and Subic Bays, fronting the islands' main fortifications. Traffic through Manila Bay would be permitted only in daylight hours henceforth, the Navy said.

The Japanese Embassy here sent urgent inquiries to the State Department concerning reported delays in clearing three Japanese vessels from Eastern ports through the Panama Canal. They were told, said Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles, that the delays arose from local circumstances, including repair work on the canal.

At the same time, Naval district headquarters in Los Angeles announced that three new naval air stations on the Far Pacific islands of Midway, Johnston and Palmyra, will be commissioned for use within the coming month.

Welles declined to give an official interpretation of the meaning of the Japanese cabinet crisis, but other officials saw these possibilities:

1. Japan, as The Post's informant said, may be preparing to renounce the pact with Russia and attack Siberia, to eliminate the threat of the Russian stronghold at Vladivostok.

2. A "wait-and-see" cabinet may be installed in Tokyo, to side with whichever group of nations appears to gain the upper hand in the next few weeks. Supporting this possibility, it was pointed out that Japan has not yet made public the decision regarding the Nazi-Soviet war which was arrived at in Tokyo a fortnight ago.

3. Japan may swing toward more friendly relations with the United States. President Roosevelt, by refraining recently from verbal attacks on Japanese policies, has left the door open to such an eventuality.

4. The Japanese military may succeed in bringing to power a regime that will favor an attack on French Indo-China, already honey-combed with Japanese influence.

Reds to Fight Behind Urals if Routed in West

By the Associated Press

London, July 16.—A pledge that even if disaster befell in the West the Red armies would retire behind the Ural Mountains and fight on from the vast, remote spaces of Asiatic Russia was made today by Russian Ambassador Ivan Maisky.

"For years," he said in an interview, "we planned dispersal of heavy and light industries vital to the war effort to guard against air attack.

"Should Moscow fall, a catastrophe which I do not believe will occur, we will fight on supplied by these factories and growing industries hidden in the Urals.

"The British have a song, 'It's a Long Way to Tipperary.' Well, it's a long way to the industries which will maintain the Red army against Germany, a long hard way by air or land."

For example, he said that while the Leningrad industrial section was threatened by the German offensive the area was not in any case vital to Soviet war production.

Some air observers here supported him in the contention that Russia has plants which are for practical purposes simply beyond effective Nazi reach. For, they recalled German reports had never claimed the sort of heavy attacks on Russian industries as had been accomplished in the far more accessible British Midlands.

During the day it was disclosed that the British military mission to Moscow had reported morale was high in the Red air fleet and its men were holding their own with the Nazis, showing a willingness to take on the best the invaders could send over.

The Russian air arm was described as powerful and intact.

table oils, meat and fish and textiles, clothing, shoes, stockings and soap for the residents of Moscow, but how the rest of the country will be affected was not immediately made known.

This was done, it was stated, for "the establishment of firm order and organization of continuous supplies" for the people of the metropolis.

All Night Sea Battle

Pravda, newspaper of the Communist Party, published a detailed description of a Baltic Sea battle in which the Soviet had announced that two German destroyers, 13 troop transports and a tank-laden barge were sunk and 13 other transports and another destroyer set aflame.

"On the evening of July 12," the paper said, "Baltic Fleet pilots detected a large convoy of German transport ships escorted by warships and fighter planes. The first blow was dealt the Germans by the well-aimed and crushing fire of coastal batteries. This fire grew in intensity each minute.

"Meanwhile, torpedo cutters suddenly were thrust at the enemy, catching him unaware. Fires broke out on many enemy ships. The battle continued all night long."

By morning, it was added, Soviet torpedo vessels and bombers had "completely demoralized" the Nazis. "The entire convoy lost direction. Flaming vessels shifted places and part of the ships sank. The others ran aground.

"The enemy destroyers attempted to escape, but were overtaken by the fire of Soviet warships and bombs."

Red Fleet Shells Riga

London, July 16 (AP).—Soviet warships have shelled Riga, capital of former Latvia, Reuters, British news agency, reported tonight. The report, picked up in Stockholm from the Moscow radio, also said Russian planes simultaneously bombed the city while German bombers unsuccessfully attacked the Red Fleet.

fashion" and the Russians cannot form a new line of defense.

German reconnaissance fliers reported the Red armies, in retreat, were deteriorating into disorganized masses crowding and blocking roads to the east, D. N. B. said. It was indicated that Russian troops now "are only partially able to resist the constant German attacks," the agency added.

The Germans reported the destruction of a large Russian artillery concentration concealed in a hide-out south of Vitebsk in the gateway to Moscow between the wide Dvina and Dnepr rivers.

The Russians were knocked out and several thousand of them were captured, German press dispatches said, in a brief, bitterly fought battle. Because of the large territory covered by the two great armies, the dispatches explained, it is possible for the Russians to conceal large forces such as these which are apt to attack the Germans by surprise.

The high command said only that operations on the Russian front were "proceeding favorably," adding that the Germans had repulsed desperate Soviet counterattacks in several places "with bloody losses for the enemy."

To the south, where the high command has reported the Germans were closing in on industrial Kiev, capital of the Ukraine, the Germans were acknowledged to be encountering bitter resistance.

German press and military commentators agreed that from a military point of view "the way to Kiev is open," but there was no indication as to whether actual occupation would be attempted within a matter of hours or days, and it was acknowledged the city's defenses were highly effective.

The Germans said many bunkers were camouflaged as houses and barns, and the area had to be occupied house by house. The Russians were said by military authorities to be putting up a determined defense, with artillery and machine-gun units concealed in woods opening fire unexpectedly on German motorized colums in territory which presumably had been cleaned up. The Germans used flame-throwers to dislodge these Red forces, it was said.

The battle with the Russian artillery forces in the hide-out south of Vitebsk began last night when the Russian units opened a concentrated bombardment of German motor columns.

German heavy artillery swung into action, the German reports said, and the big guns of both forces fired throughout the night. Immediate contact with the Russians was said to have been made by a German tank unit.

This morning fresh German infantry arrived, it was stated, and the tanks withdrew. The Russians, assuming there was a German retreat, started pursuit, but almost immediately ran into the German infantry, the German accounts said.

This pocket of Russian resistance was reported cleaned up by noon.

D. N. B. reported one clash occurred on the northern flank at Bjelaja, 37 miles east of Pskov, and said Russian units were wiped out by German artillery and infantry. Many Russian ammunition cars were exploded, the account said, destroying many Red tanks and other vehicles.

The German air force indicated 148 Russian planes were destroyed yesterday, 42 of them in air battles.

Prince Konoye's Cabinet Resigns

Fumimaro Konoye whose government resigned in a body yesterday.

There were reports that the army and navy would dominate the new government.

Konoye went to the imperial summer villa at Hayama to present the resignation last night, and Yonai journeyed to Hayama today. Konoye will remain in power until the emperor releases him.

The emperor is to return to Tokyo late today. Meanwhile, Marquis Koichi Kido, lord keeper of the privy seal, arrived in Tokyo.

The course Japan would take was obscure, but Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka, who directed Japan's present tie-up with the Axis and her neutrality accord with Russia, was known to have been the first to agree to the en bloc resignation.

The Yonai cabinet resigned July 16 last year.

A conference of former premiers and prominent Japanese was called late today to recommend a new premier. The sentiment, it was reliably reported, was strong to rename Prince Konoye.

Canadians See Tests Of Trucks at Meade

Holabird Quartermaster Depot, Md., July 16 (AP).—A small group of Canadian officers today watched the army put its latest types of combat cars and trucks through a series of rigid tests designed to show their maneuverability and durability under simulated field conditions.

The Canadians, members of a group now studying at the Holabird Motor Transport School, and a contingent of United States officers just entering the school saw the vehicles subjected to stiff punishment at the depot's testing ground.

A quartet of Canadians got a chance to study the Army's small quarter-ton combat car—the so-called jeep—at first hand as they raced it through water and mud baths and over corduroy roads made of widely spaced railroad ties.

Also subjected to the mud hole test was a two and one-half-ton general cargo truck, which plowed through mud and water up to the tops of its wheels.

Paraded at the demonstration was a series of trucks on half-ton chassis, but with different bodies for the various needs of warfare—reconnaissance cars, ambulances, weapon carriers and general carryalls.

Men 'Toughened' at Meade On Steeplechase Course

Fort Meade, Md., July 16 (AP).—A steeplechase course "to toughen the men and give them trained agility in crossing all types of obstacles" was opened today by the 115th Infantry Regiment.

One of the first to circle the 250-yard course with its 14 obstacles, including a water jump and a 12-foot barrier, was Col. John D. Markey, regimental commander. The water jump proved just as tough for him as for many of the other men, and when he grabbed a rope to swing himself across a creek he was unsuccessful and had to try again.

Col. Markey said the steeplechase, suggested by the Chief of Infantry of the United States Army, should create special interest among the men because it is an "innovation in physical military training."

Shortly after the course opened Company E of the Second Battalion, under the command of Lieut. Col. Harry E. Flook, was traveling over it, first at a walk and then at a run.

Both officers and enlisted men will be given an opportunity to go over the obstacles.

864 Hike 20 Miles; Only One Weakens

Fort Meade, Md., July 16 (AP).—Eight hundred and sixty-four officers and men of the 115th Infantry Regiment, cammanded by Col. D. John Markey, started on a standard Army marching test of 20 miles this week and 863 of them marched the full distance, regimental headquarters disclosed today.

Many of the men who took the hike were selectees who volunteered for it even though they had been in camp only 10 weeks. The hike was the third 20-mile march undertaken by members of the regiment, the first being about six weeks ago in scorching hot weather.

Although all but one of the 864 men who took the test marched back into camp, four others failed to complete the distance officially in that they were unable to carry full field equipment part of the way.

Fort George G. Meade, Md., July 16 (AP).—An hour was cut off the daylight training schedule of the 115th Infantry Regiment today so that an hour of training movies could be shown after dark.

Movies will be included at compulsory formations for the regiment twice weekly. Explaining that he has "great faith in the effectiveness of training movies," Col. D. John Markey, regimental commander, pointed out that more men will be able to attend them at night than in the daytime.

44th Going Through D. C. Friday Night

Fort Dix, N. J., July 16 (AP).—Men of the Forty-fourth Division got their fighting gear in order tonight on the eve of their second training trip in six weeks to the A. P. Hill Military Reservation at Caroline County, Va.

The division, of approximately 15,000 men, will start moving out by truck at 5:30 p. m. tomorrow, the 2,500 vehicles splitting in two columns under the command of Brig. Gen. Ralph K. Robertson and Brig. Gen. Edward C. Rose.

The Robertson column will proceed by way of Trenton, Philadelphia and Oxford, Pa., arriving at Fort Meade, Md., for a bivouac at approximately 2:45 a. m. Friday.

The Rose column will go by way of Camden, Philadelphia and Wilmington, Del., arriving at Meade at about 3:23 a. m.

Both columns will move through Washington, D. C., on the second night, with arrival in Virginia on Saturday morning.

Alcoa Blamed In Minority House Report

Copyright by New York Times

Two members of the House Military Affairs Committee replied in a minority report yesterday to a majority of their colleagues who recently criticized the failure of various defense agencies to procure an adequate supply of strategic materials and absolved the Aluminum Co. of America of blame for the alleged shortage of aluminum.

Representative John J. Sparkan, of Alabama, and Overton Brooks, of Louisiana, contended that the Aluminum Co. had exhibited a "shortsighted monopolistic" policy toward the Nation's supply of the metal. They disputed the majority's report that the Aluminum Co. had cooperated wholly with the defense program and asserted that the committee heard no witness intimately connected with the defense program.

The minority quoted testimony given before the temporary national economic committee by I. W. Wilson, vice president of the Aluminum Co. company.

"He stated emphatically that the Aluminum Co. could not only supply all aluminum needed for national defense, but also 'ordinary domestic requirements and normal requirements.' In other words, the Aluminum Co. was serving notice on prospective competitors that the Aluminum Co. by itself could take care of all civilian requirements and national defense and still have a substantial surplus for the British.

"If the Aluminum Co.'s short-sighted monopolistic policy had prevailed, the country today would be without the two new plants which have been built in record time by the courageous management of the Reynolds Metals Co. at Listerhall, Ala., and Longview, Wash."

The minority also denied the majority report that the accumulation of stockpiles of strategic materials had failed.

It said that "With a goal of a stockpile of two years, today, as to the three most important materials, tin, manganese and rubber . . . we now have on hand about a 14-month suply of ferro-manganese with domestic production anticipated. As to tin, it was testified that our condition was very good and that we had about a 15-month supply on hand. As to rubber, the testimony showed that we had approximately a years' supply on hand and had a schedule of buying more than two-thirds of the world's entire production during the next 12 months."

Meant No Insult To Congress, Says British Laborite

New York, July 16 (INS).—Col. Josiah C. Wedgwood, British Parliament member who urged America to enter the war soon and made remarks none too complimentally to Congress, expressed regret today after apparently being silenced by his government.

After a two-hour session with officials of the British information service, the Laborite M. P. disclosed he was returning to England on Sunday and intimated there is little likelihood that he would be permitted to return to America.

Col. Wedgwood said he was sorry he had called Senator Wheeler, Montana Democrat and leader of the noninterventionist group, a "wretched appeaser" and advised him to "go soak his head." But he wouldn't retract other parts of an interview in which he said that the "best people" do not go into Congress.

"I would like to deny again that I ever said your Congress is not sensible. What I said and meant was that it is not sensible of you to have a Congress which has no executive power such as Parliament has. I would like to appear before Congress personally to explain that I intended no insult."

Resolution Could Extend Selects' Time

Copyright by New York Times

A movement developed within the Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday to have Congress extend the service of selectees by passing a simple resolution declaring that the national interest would be imperiled if they left the Army at the end of their year's training.

The movement, started by Senators who declined to be identified with it at this time, is expected to find expression during discussion of two War Department bills in Senate Military Affairs Committee hearings which start today with Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, as the first witness.

The two bills would extend the service of selectees, National Guardsmen and members of the Regular Army until after the end of the national emergency. The Senators who are supporting the resolution method argue that there is no necessity for the Administration to bring in these new bills since the Selective Service Act provided a simple way for Congress to take the steps now recommended by Gen. Marshall and supported by President Roosevelt.

The language of the Selective Service Act was as follows:

"Each man inducted under the provisions of Subsection A shall serve for a training and service period of 12 consecutive months, unless sooner discharged, except that whenever the Congress has declared that the national interest is imperiled, such 12-month period may be extended by the President to such time as may be necessary in the interests of national defense."

The opposition to a straight discussion on this resolution is that it might develop into a war or peace debate. The Administration's most ardent supporters are inclined to oppose the simple formula because they say the isolationists might defeat the bill by asserting that the admission by Congress that the "national interest is imperiled" might be interpreted as authorization for the President to take direct action that would lead the country into war.

[International News Service said last night that while Administration leaders were claiming gains and eventual passage of the legislation, a poll of available Senators by the I. N. S. showed 27 against holding the selectees, 16 in favor and 24 undecided.—Editor's note.]

Taken Against Will, Bride Says; Impetuous Husband Jailed

LYNN V. BOWMAN LENORE BALES BOWMAN

By the Associated Press

Wichita, Kans., July 16.—Playsuit-clad Lenore Long Bales Bowman, 18, departed for her home in Kansas City today, leaving in jail an impetuous bridegroom whom she accused of bringing her here against her will.

Two court appearances await the 19-year-old husband, Lynn V. Bowman, upon his return to Kansas City. First he must answer to a charge of car theft filed on complaint of his wealthy father-in-law, Walter J. Bales, jr. Still to be set for hearing is an annulment suit filed two days after the couple eloped to nearby Olathe, Kans., July 1.

The auto theft charge grew out of Bowman's appearance at the Bales' fashionable Southside residence in Kansas City yesterday. There the youth brushed by a servant, went to his bride's bedroom, waited until she put on the playsuit, then led her, barefoot, to a green station wagon parked in the driveway.

They drove away as the dark-haired girl called to the cook to notify her father, an insurance executive. It was the first time the couple had been together since the night of their elopement.

A two-State search ended here 12 hours later when police encountered the two sitting in the machine in front of a hotel.

Police Lieut George W. Shepard gave this account of the girl's story:

She accompanied Bowman from her home because "he was red-headed, hot-headed an dmean to me" and she was afraid to resist. Several times on the drive to Wichita, however, she attempted to break away or attract the attention of passing cars only to be thwarted by her husband.

At filling station stops she remonstrated with Bowman and asked attendants to notify officers or her father, but the youth dissuaded the attendants by telling them she was a mental patient en route to a hospital.

At one stop Bowman forced her to write a note professing her love for him and denying that she wanted their marriage annulled. This she did but ended it, "I sign this according to my will and with force against me involved."

Bowman had dictated "no force" but she omitted the "no" on the assumption he would not notice it.

She reaffirmed her father's previous statement that she and Bowman never had lived together as man and wife.

Bowman, however, disputed this, likewise his bride's contention that she accompanied him under force. He said the girl told him where he could find the keys to the station wagon and added he thought the machine belonged to his wife.

"I love her or I wouldn't be fighting to keep her," he asserted. "If everything had worked out we were going to live together and dad was going to pay our way through school."

The two are students at the University of Kansas City. Bowman's father owns a plumbing supply company.

Poindexter Improved

Gov. Joseph B. Poindexter of Hawaii, who Tuesday underwent a major surgical operation at Walter Reed Hospital, was in "very good shape" yesterday, according to the adjutant at the hospital.

The President's Day

HANGOVER: The White House was suffering from an acute hangover of too much Hopkins in the middle of the night and went about its business wearily. Steve Early, having spent the small hours acting as Mr. Roosevelt's spokesman on dozens of after-midnight queries on Hopkins' secret departure for England, had little to say yesterday morning. The President was up at his usual hour, at his desk in time for an 11 o'clock appointment.

POWER: Preceded by five minutes and Power Commissioner Leland Olds, Secretary Ickes, Ben Cohen, Abe Fortas, Arthur Goldschmidt, Commissioner John C. Page, Senator Norris and Tom Stewart marched single file into the President's office for a half-hour discussion of power, the control of power and its relation to national defense.

BLESSINGS: Representative Thomas H. Cullen (Democrat), of New York, brought in Alfred Klein, possible candidate for the late Representative Edelstein's seat on the Democratic side of the House, for official blessing from the President.

RELIEF OR NO?: Former Ambassador to Russia and present coordinator of all foreign war relief, Joe Davies popped in to see the boss, discuss whether 'tis wise to relieve certain conquered countries and what to do with accumulated war relief for Finland, Poland, etc.

MEDICAL DEFENSE: Dr. Vannevar Bush, director of the National Research Council, carried in his recommendations for a committee on medical research—stayed 15 minutes and walked quietly out. Late in the afternoon the President announced the establishment and membership of the Medical Research Committee. One o'clock found the President at his desk, deep in work which, as usual, he combined with his high-noon lunch tray.

EARLY QUIET: The "lid" was plopped gently on the White House early and a concentrated quiet settled down over the offices as the secretariat, the President and his aides took a deep dive into a mountain of paper work, phone calls and memo writing and answering.

AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT!

The Management of the American Stores Company and Acme Super Markets announce today that a five-day work week for retail store employees will be further extended throughout the system, about the middle of September, upon completion of the employees vacation schedule.

Instead of having one-half day off each week, as at present, under the new plan, store employees will enjoy a full day off each week, in addition to which weekly work hours will be reduced to forty-eight, with wages continuing at the six day level.

While this further betterment of working conditions for our employees will necessitate a considerable readjustment of working schedules and operating conditions, our stores, nevertheless, will be open SIX DAYS WEEKLY.

We have been gratified to note the general approval that has attended the introduction of this plan in a part of our system, and we feel confident that its wider adoption now will prove equally acceptable to our employees and customers.

Maj. Gen. Charles E. Bonesteel, 56, now commander of the Sixth Corps Area, Chicago, will become commander of the Fifth Division. He succeeds Maj. Gen. Joseph M. Cummins, 60, who will relieve him in Chicago.

General Van Voorhis, who is due for retirement for age next year, will become commander of the Fifth Corps Area.

The assignments follow recent policies laid down by the War Department. Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, has said that the Army must put younger men of more stamina in its field commands and use the brains and experience of older generals in administrative and training posts.

He has also announced that the command of forces involving both ground and air units will go to an officer of the arm most affected.

Deputy Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey, who will officiate at the drawing, will welcome the 50 soldiers preceding the lottery. They will be entertained at banquets sponsored by patriotic groups before the ceremonies.

Five Washington area men are among the soldier drawers. They are Corpl. Ralph M. Odegard, Seventy-first Coast Artillery, Fort Myer, Va.; Sergt. Walton Jackson, colored, Ninth Quartermaster Regiment; Corpl. Michael A. Belensky, Twenty-first Engineers, Langley Field, Va.; Corpl. Nicholas Orem, Third Battalion, Fort Belvoir, Va., and Corpl. George Willis, Headquarters Company, Fort Belvoir.

Twelve selects at Fort Meade, Md., who have earned chevrons since their induction, also will help draw the capsules. The 12, selected on recommendation of their commanding officers, are:

Sergt. Victor R. Karlson, of the 1302d Service unit, recruit reception center; Sergt. Fred R. Sheldon, Sixty-first Surgical Hospital; Sergt. Edward H. Wheeler, medical detachment, 1302d Service unit; Sergt. Byron O. Long, Tenth Ordnance Company, Twenty-ninth Division; Corpl. Jack A. Gainer, 1302d Service unit, recruit reception center; Corpl. Deveau, 110th Field Artillery, Twenty-ninth Division; Corpl. John Krupa, 175th Infantry, Twenty-ninth Division; Sergt. Gerald D. Burke, First Evacuation Hospital, and Sergt. John R. Musser, Fifty-first Medical battalion.

An elaborate system of recording the drawing has been aranged. As each number is drawn, it will be handed to an announcer, who will call out the number. It will then be photographed and announcer's voice will be recorded on a sound track.

Recently Brig. Gen. Henry W. Harms, an air officer, was put in charge of the Newfoundland defense command, containing both Air Corps and ground troops. Gen. Andrews' assignment to the Caribbean post, therefore, recognizes that the defense of this strategic area, soon to be strengthened by new air bases in Trinidad and other British-leased sites, rests primarily on aviation.

Selectee's Wife Wins Contest; She's Serious

wives the selectees left behind should do with themselves now that some of the boys in Uncle Sam's uniform are being publicized as having fun with movie stars, Powers' models and sundry "selected cuties." Most of those letters which you have published have been amusing.

It's all been good fun, Mr. Editor, but I think it's time to inject a serious note into the contest. One can crack a lot of jokes about 2,000,000 men in service with girls and wives waiting for them to return. But the problem is fundamentally a serious one and it calls for a serious answer.

In the first place I'm not at all convinced that many of the men in the services have been entertained by beautiful girls. Of course pictures have appeared in the papers, but the man in uniform always looked a little startled at being found with a beautiful girl—as if a press agent had placed her in his arms.

Furthermore, if pictures of enlisted men with "selected cuties" do appear in the papers I can't see why that's a cause for us girls back home to shriek. I don't think we should thereupon set out to find a handsome male, just to make the boys in uniform jealous.

They want to be with us as much as we want to be with them. But they've been called to enlist in a cause that's bigger than the emotions of any one of them. And they've gone willingly.

The thing for us women who are left behind to do—and I am a draft widow myself—is to enlist ourselves in the same cause as our husbands and sweethearts. There is no sense in our asking more of the Government: to give us free transportation, etc., to our men in the camps. We should, instead, give more to the Government just as our men have given their very ways of living.

Regular means of doing this have already been established. There is chiefly the United Service Organizations. There also exists the opportunity to sign up to attend dances for enlisted men at nearby camps and cantonments.

By doing this we are getting behind our men, giving them more opportunities of good, clean fun. And by getting behind our menfolk, instead of sulking over some pictures we have seen of them, we are getting behind Uncle Sam, who, after all, is behind all of us.

So come on out, girls, and show that while American women don't step out in uniform like those in some European countries, they carry the image of only one uniform and one cause in their hearts. Join the United Service Organizations and so join your menfolk.

Sincerely yours,
MRS. PRISCILLA CHANDLER.

P.S.—If by some strange chance I should win the $25 you advertise, please turn it over to the United Service Organizations.

Dear Mrs. Chandler:

"By some strange chance" you have won the contest on what the wives and girls at home should do when their menfolk are in the service. Your answer, in our judgment, is the most sincere and the most thoughtful of any of those received—and we've received many score responses.

We'll take you up on the offer of presenting the $25 to the USO. The organization is having its final report luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel today at 12:30 p. m. Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox will speak, and at some time during the program the check will be presented to you from The Post. Sidney F. Taliaferro, chairman of the general campaign committee, will be pleased to add that amount to the final figure, he says.

Thank you, Mrs. Chandler.

Sincerely,
THE PUZZLE EDITOR.

Oelrichs Mansion Sold for $21,000

Newport, R. I., July 16 (AP).—Rose Cliff, the ornate white marble mansion which reputedly cost $2,000,000 when it was built for the late Mrs. Herman Oelrichs by Architect Stanford White back in 1902, was sold at auction today for $21,000, about a seventh of the assessed valuation.

U. S. Planes Giving British Control of Air

American fighting planes "within the next few months" will "place Britain in a dominant position for the rest of the war," according to the Aircraft Year Book for 1941, being published today.

Already American and British production is superior to Germany's in such "highly important categories as fast pursuits, long-range and medium bombers and patrol flying boats," the volume says, and shortly should "end German air supremacy."

The book, edited by Howard Mingos and published by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America here, says:

"The increase in American aircraft production under the national defense program is recognized by all informed persons to be an industrial miracle and one destined to become a decisive factor in ultimately ending the cataclysmic struggle between democracy and totalitarianism."

This year, says the Year Book, American industry will turn out 18,000 planes, and next year, under present programs, 30,000 will be produced.

Since July, 1940, 7,000 war planes were constructed, and during the 20 months of the war so far, 3,500 American military planes—once considered a formidable air force alone—have been ordered by the British and delivered, the Year Book says.

Here are the Year Book's statistics on increased production: 2,141 war planes built in 1939; 5,800 in 1940; 1,131 in January, 1941; 1,216 in March; 1,427 in April.

The Year Book forecasts that air power will play an even more decisive part in the war from now on than it has during the past 12 months. So far Germany has had the advantage of numbers, and has been able to defend her own bases while using air power to the fullest extent in attacks on England. A reversal of air power is now taking place, and the R. A. F. has taken the offensive with raids deep in German territory, the Year Book states.

Volunteers Face Trying Duties—LaGuardia

Mayor F. H. LaGuardian of New York, national civilian defense chief, yesterday warned District civilian defense volunteers they must be prepared for duties under "trying, difficult and dangerous conditions."

He spoke in the National Press Club auditorium before some 150 volunteers and leaders of the District Defense Council, outlining plans for the aluminum collection drive which starts here Tuesday.

"No Defense Council—here or anywehre else—is worth its salt unless it is willing to work," said LaGuardia, adding that the collection of aluminum "is the easiest and most pleasant" assignment the volunteers will have.

"Duties of defense workers," said the dynamic mayor, "will hereafter not be so pleasant or easy. There is some real serious work coming up and we must be prepared to give much effort and a great deal of labor."

Defense volunteers in Washington—as well as in other sections of the country—must remember that they are not "attending a clambake or participating in a pinochle game," he said.

"They must," he said, "be ready to answer the call to duty when the emergency presents itself."

He stressed the importance of training volunteers, pointing out that Great Britain had little or no chance to prepare its defense workers for active duty.

Although LaGuardia said the national aluminum drive would start next Monday and continue for eight days, he said the District should be able to complete its collections in three days.

P. Y. K. Howat, local businessman and civic leader, chairman of yesterday's meeting, announced that approximately 7,000 local volunteers would start solicitations Tuesday. Collections of the precious metal will be made the following day and Wednesday will be devoted to "clean up" work.

Divided in 235 Areas

The city will be divided into 235 areas. Solicitations will be made by Boy Scouts, policemen, firemen, American Legion members and regular civilian volunteers.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways and executive officer of the District Defense Council, stressed the need for one collection truck for each area and urged owners to donate the necessary vehicles.

Collections of scrap aluminum—household and kitchen utensils especially—will begin at 8 a. m. Wednesday after solicitations have been made the day before, it was announced.

Mayor LaGuardia emphasized that his office is not requesting housewives to donate utensils essential to their everyday needs.

"All we want," he said, "are articles of aluminum which have outlived their usefulness."

Must Do Bit

Although there is considerable need for aluminum in defense activities, LaGuardia reported that the country is in no danger of a serious shortage. He said new plants are being erected rapidly to manufacture the metal, but until they begin substantial production citizens must do their bit to provide for the demand.

Howat, introducing Mayor LaGuardia, estimated that more than 20,000,000 pounds of aluminum are lying idle in American homes and commercial establishments—"enough," he said, "to construct 2,000 fighting planes."

It was announced that firehouses and police stations would be used as community depositories for the aluminum collections. A central depository will be erected on the lawn in front of the District Building.

Commissioner John Russell Young, J. B. Gordon, sanitary engineer and director of the aluminum collections and other municipal and civic leaders, also attended the meeting.

At 5 p. m. today LaGuardia will participate in ceremonies officially opening the District Defense Council's information booth at Pennsylvania Avenue and E Street Northwest. The program will be broadcast.

Bankers to Lead Red Cross Roll Call

Two Washingtonians identified with banking activities have been appointed to head the District Red Cross Roll Call among financial groups, Chairman of the Roll Call Committee Edgar Morris announced yesterday.

T. Stanley Holland, vice president and trust officer of the American Security and Trust Co., was named chairman of the financial unit for the forthcoming drive. Donald W. Larson, secretary of the District Bankers Association, was named vice chairman. Both have been active for several years in other Red Cross roll calls and civic affairs.

Unions, OPM Join in Plans To Boost Aluminum Output

OPM, C. I. O. and A. F. of L., united in common concern over the problems of aluminum shortage, yesterday proposed the following steps to meet the serious situation:

1. In an offer of support to the forthcoming aluminum scrap collection campaign, OPM chiefs William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman blasted as harmful and misleading recent statements that there is no shortage in the vital metal for defense requirements. Their statement, obviously directed at finding earlier this week of Walter Fuller, National Association of Manufacturers, president, said that there will be "an urgent problem" in supplying enough fabricated aluminum parts and found "at this moment," a severe shortage of scrap aluminum.

2. In an elaborate plan submitted to President Roosevelt, the C. I. O. Aluminum Workers of America proposed the construction of plants and rationing of electric power in order to develop production capacity of three billion pounds of aluminum a year, an amount almost double that now proposed by the OPM.

Sharply critical of past Government and business efforts to alleviate the shortage, the union declared that only by an industry council, comprised of labor, industry and Government representatives, with full power to plan and eliminate bottlenecks, could the desired goal be reached.

3. William Green, A. F. of L. president, proposed a five-point program to deal with dislocation of labor due to priorities which divert materials from, and hence curtail operations of non-defense industries. In a letter to Hillman, Green used the aluminum fabricating industry as a "pilot case," and said that the situation "has now reached the proportions of an industry-wide crisis."

The Knudsen-Hillman announcement conceded the bare accuracy of "certain statements," presumably including that made by Fuller, that lack of aluminum has not yet caused substantial curtailment of defense operations.

"However," the defense chieftains added, "tthese recent statements tend to carry the implication that there is no problem involved in the supply of sufficient quantities of aluminum of defense work. This is a false implication. . . ."

They estimated direct and indirect military demands for the last six months of this year at 400,000,000 pounds, with supply of virgin aluminum and secondary scrap barely reaching this figure.

The Aluminum Workers' plan, "More Aluminum Today," called for full priorities in all construction materials for new plants, expansion of domestic bauxite operations, rationing of nondefense and luxury power, immediate construction of new steam generating plants, a labor training program to be conducted by the union, promotion of industrial peace by collective bargaining agreements, and the creation of a labor - management - Government aluminum industry council, to plan and operate the entire expansion project.

In another place, the report said that "organized labor is not going to stand idly by and watch business fumble and fuss while the industry goes from bad to worse. . . . Today is already late, tomorrow may be too late."

$125,000 Asked For Naval Air Towers

The Navy asked Congress yesterday for $125,000 to build three 150-foot radio towers near St. Elizabeths Hospital for the Naval Air Station in Anacostia.

Rear Admiral Ben Moreell, chief of the bureau of yards and docks, made the request in connection with the Navy's new $300,000,000 shore base expansion program. The towers are needed for simultaneous transmission and receipt of radio messages in accordance with a recent decision of the Navy Department that all of its air stations must have two-way radio facilities.

Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, said the proposed Anacostia site had been carefully surveyed and was considered safe.

The committee will continue with consideration of the $300,000,000 measure this morning. Nearly $7,500,000 in authorizations for naval building projects around Washington are included in the bill.

2,000 Ship Workers Strike At Galveston

Two labor disputes flared yesterday, one rendering 2,000 workers idle in Galveston, Tex., but at the same time work was resumed upon settlement of two short-lived strikes involving defense steel mills.

In Galveston, workers left their jobs at the Todd-Galveston Dry Docks, Inc., after failure of the company and A. F. of L. unions to reach an understanding in conformity with the master stabilization agreement of Gulf Coast shipyards, the Associated Press reported. The company is repairing vessels for the Maritime Commission. Issues in dispute are the closed shop and apprentice system.

In Cleveland, the Paterson-Leitch steel fabricating plant closed down after fist fighting between C. I. O. and A. F. L. unionists, battling over recognition as bargaining agent.

The company said 90 per cent of its work was for the Government shell-loading plant at Ravenna, Ohio.

U. S. Occupation Hinted

In Washington, the Defense Mediation Board sent back to Alton, Ill., disputants in the Western Cartridge Co. case, after failing to obtain an agreement on issues between the company and the A. F. of L. Chemical Workers Union, seeking to bargain collectively for 550 workers of the company's smokeless powder subsidiary.

A board spokesman said the union agreed not to strike pending the formulation and promulgation of board recommendations on the issues of the controversy. Frankly skeptical of future acceptance by the company of the forthcoming recommendations, other board officials privately hinted that Government occupation of the plant was a possible eventuality.

Another knotty case on which the board began hearings yesterday involved the Wisconsin Steel Coal Co., in "bloody" Harlan County, Ky. C. I. O. United Mine Workers, who were to receive a closed shop under terms of the newly negotiated Appalachian soft coal contract, have struck against the company, reducing operations to about 60 per cent of capacity. The company has a contract with the A. F. of L. Progressive Miners of America, which was certified by the National Labor Relations Board as collective bargaining agent.

Propeller Strike Voted

Other labor developments:

In Caldwell, N. J., the A. F. of L. United American Machinists announced that members had voted to strike next Tuesday at the aircraft propeller plant of the Curtiss Wright Corporation to enforce union recognition. The union claims 80 per cent of the 1,300 workers at the plant.

The two steel strikes settled, both previously declared unauthorized by the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee, involved the Great Lakes Steel Corporation, at Ecorse, Mich., and the Copperweld Steel Co., Warren, Ohio.

WPA Estimates Jobless for 1942 At 5 Millions

The WPA estimated yesterday five million persons would be unemployed during the fiscal year 1942.

And, Corrington Gill, assistant WPA commissioner, told a House committee investigating defense job migration, the Federal agency will be able to provide jobs for only one million.

"Before the end of this summer," said Gill, "we may expect to find one-third of American industry faced with the grim reality of guns versus butter."

He told the committee most of the defense workers had been drained from nondefense industries, had not been replaced, and there had been no resultant increase in general employment.

"As the tempo of the wartime economy gains increased momentum," he added, "you may expect to find for a time not less, but more unemployment, not less, but more idle machines."

Pay Increase Granted New York Bus Workers

New York, July 16 (AP).—Wage increases ranging from 2 to 8 cents an hour were awarded to all classifications of employes of the Fifth Avenue Coach Co. and the New York City Omnibus Corporation and its subsidiaries tonight by William H. Measure to Stabilize Prices Goes to Congress Next Week

An Administration price-control bill, providing a formula for stabilizing prices, rents and other costs during the period of the emergency, will be introduced in both Houses next week.

House and Senate leaders said they were nearing "a meeting of minds" on the legislation following a conference late yesterday with Price Administrator Leon Henderson, Vice President Wallace and Speaker Rayburn.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley and House Majority Leader McCormack said tentative provisions of the bill were discussed and suggestions made for consideration in the final draft.

Indications were that the bill would provide for determination of costs on a base period standard, rather than freezing of prices as they stood on a given day, but leaders said no final decisions were reached and other talks may be held later this week.

Barkley said there would have to be a certain amount of executive discretion. He said he believed the problem was one for "over-all determination," and the legislation would not specifically name the commodities to be affected.

The Senate leader said both the question of freezing wages and setting parity floor for farm prices had been "mentioned." But McCormack advised reporters not to speculate too freely on wage freezing. The President at his press conference Tuesday said the question was under consideration.

The leaders said definite decisions will not be reached for several days and identical House and Senate bills then will be whipped into shape. Details may be made public by the President himself.

Farm Bloc Opposition

Yesterday's conference, held in Vice President Wallace's office off the Senate floor, was one of a series that have been held on the measure. Henderson, who conferred with the President Tuesday, was accompanied yesterday by two assistants from his office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply. His original draft of the plan, carried to the Capitol several days ago, was said to have been unacceptable to leaders.

Earlier yesterday, Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, said the Senate farm bloc would give "strenuous and determined opposition" to any effort to fix prices of major farm crops at or below present levels.

going to find it hard to get accommodations."

Simpson gave a section-by-section explanation of the bill, pointing out that it provides for hearings for any protestant against acts of the administrator with appeal to the District Court of Appeals, that the administrator would be authorized to investigate violations and summon witnesses according to the terms of the Federal Trade Act, that provision is made for tenant recovery of excessive rents, "There is not the slightest doubt of the Constitutionality of the bill" he declared.

In response to a question from Randolph, he said that "circumstances will force" transfer of Federal agencies from Washington.

Mrs. Hoffman declared rent control legislation to be necessary to insure availability of an adequate supply of dwellings at reasonable rentals. In covering principles the association believes should be embodied in control legislation, Mrs. Hoffman gave indorsement to many of the provisioons of Simpson's bill.

She insisted, however, that appeals from decisions of the rent administrator should be taken to the Municipal Court, because this is the poor man's tribunal. The act, she said, should terminate December 31, 1944, to be extended by Congress if necessary.

Mrs. Hoffman listed 12 specific instances in which rents recently have been increased for low-income tenants. The increases ranged from $2.50 to $8 a month in one-family dwellings and as much as 20 per cent in a rooming house.

Treasury's Tax Plan Backed By Roosevelt

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A request from the President that the House Ways and Means Committee substitute the Treasury's invested capital plan of excess profits taxation for its own composite proposal today will be laid before the committee.

This was learned last night as word reached the Capitol that the President was not only backing the Treasury formula but had personally interceded with Chairman Doughton to resubmit the question to his group.

The suggestion from the White House revived the old issue between the Treasury and Congress over whether excess profits levies should be computed mainly on capital investment or an alternative average earnings method allowed.

Congress overruled the Treasury in last session's tax bill and the Ways and Means Committee last month voted 20 to 4 against limiting the new excess profits plan to the invested capital plan. Instead it again gave the taxpayers the alternative to choose the more popular average earnings plan.

Disliked Formula

The President was said to be dissatisfied with this composite formula, believeing it would inequitably permit some corporations to profit unduly from the defense stimulus to business.

Not more revenue but tax policy was said to be the motivating force behind the request. But in one well-informed quarter it was said the Treasury's excess profits tax plan, coupled with the committee's proposal for disallowing corporate income tax as a deduction in computing excess profits net income, would raise more than three hundred million dollars additional.

This added revenue could be used as an offset against loss of the same amount in event the committee later reconsidered its action to require husbands and wives to file joint income tax returns.

Advocates of the committee's optional method of computing excess profits expressed doubt that the committee would overturn it in favor of the Treasury's invested capital plan, in view of the wide margin by which the latter formerly was defeated. Opposition to the Treasury plan was reported even stronger in the Senate Finance Committee.

To Committee Today

The Presidents' request for reconsideration of its optional excess profits tax plan is understood to have been made at Tuesday's White House conference, attended by Chairman Doughton, Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, and Treasury and budget officials.

Chairman Doughton agreed to submit the matter, with the arguments for it, at today's special meeting of the Ways and Means Committee.

The Treasury formula sets 10 per cent of invested capital as the maximum a corporation could earn without being subject to excess profits levies ranging from 33 to 65 per cent. In the main, corporations would be allowed a return of 6 per cent on the first $5,000,000 of invested capital and 4 per cent on the remainder.

The committee's optional plan allows a corporation an invested capital credit of 8 per cent on the first $5,000,000 and 7 per cent on the excess. Or, as an option, a corporation could claim as credit 95 per cent of its average earnings during the base period years, 1936 to 1939. The committee's excess profits tax rates would range from 35 to 60 per cent.

Flaherty Moves Cautiously First Day in New Job

Quiet-spoken Jeremiah Flaherty, 48-year-old grandfather, yesterday took over Washington's homicide squad, first official move to strengthen the Police Department's weakest link—the Detective Bureau.

Flaherty was temporarily appointed as acting lieutenant on Tuesday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, when the latter demoted George Darnall to the rank of detective sergeant on the check squad.

First move of the new squad chief was to remove a sign from his office door which said: "Chief of Homicide Squad." He substituted one, saying: "Homicide Squad."

"There's only one door to the squad room and we all are here together," he commented laconically.

It was hard to pin down the veteran of 19 years' police work on what he intends to do to increase the efficiency of the squad.

"Far Behind Times"

"I've been placed in charge temporarily," he explained. "Capt. Keck asked me to take over for a while until things get straightened out.

"I have some ideas about how the squad ought to be run. But I don't think it's my place at this time to make any great changes unless the captain (Capt. Keck) agrees with me about them.

"In my mind, we are far behind the times. I believe in modern methods and think that we should have a crime laboratory of our own to assist in investigations. The FBI, of course, can help us, but if we had our own men, to work with us, at the scene of a murder and in the laboratory, we would get a lot further."

Flaherty's record, which in nine years on the homicide squad has sent seven men to the electric chair, is studded with commendations from his superiors. He is credited with solving such brutal slayings as the Florence Goodwin case; the shooting of Frank Wushnack, a meat packing company driver, who was killed in a hold-up. Two men went to the chair in this latter crime and Norman Robinson, Negro, was electrocuted in the Goodwin murder.

Two Unsolved Crimes

Recently, Flaherty investigated the fatal shooting of Oscar Rush, in which crime his wife, Mary Sibley Rush, was sentenced to 15 years to life. He also was instrumental in obtaining the conviction of John Eugene Eckland, charged with the "sniper" slayings.

Two assignments in Flaherty's book, "and I still hope to break them," are the unsolved murders of Andrew Rice and Dr. Heinrich Simon.

Rice was slain on the Anacostia golf course in 1934 and Dr. Simon was beaten to death, apparently by street robbers, May 6 of this year.

Flaherty says he intends to seek at least twice as many men for his six-man squad so that he can pair the investigators as partners. He said he intends also to have two detectives on call each night instead of the usual one.

"And I intend to take assignments along with the other men. I'm on call tonight," he said.

Progressive Move

One progressive move, made by Flaherty yesterday, was the taking for investigation the assignments on all serious assault cases.

"Why wait until the victim is dead before beginning an investigation?" he asked. "I think, if it appears that a person is going to die, the homicide squad should investigate. Then if the victim dies, you know what you're up against."

It was the homicide squad which yesterday questioned Mrs. Elizabeth Carden, who signed a statement that she hit her husband over the head with a slipper. He is in serious condition at Casualty Hospital and he told police he had been attacked by bandits.

Flaherty lives with his wife and a 21-year-old son, Melvin, at 231 Concord Avenue Northwest. He has a married daughter, Mrs. Neil O'Brien.

Though Flaherty said he "is just filling in," Capt. Keck, acting chief of detectives, said Flaherty was picked because he is "an able investigator and a good executive."

"He will probably remain an acting lieutenant," Keck remarked, when questioned about Flaherty's reported "temporary" status.

Suspected Bandit Merely Wanted Free Train Ride

Postal Inspectors said yesterday that they did not believe a 200-pound Virginian, whose presence on a mail coach Tuesday night precipitated a train robbery scare in Eckington yards, had robbery in mind when he jumped into the car as the train pulled out of Union Station.

He told mail clerks at the time, it was learned yesterday, that he merely wanted to ride with them to Culpeper, Va., near his home town of Sperryville. He would not believe the train was headed for Chicago and fought with the clerks when they attempted to put him off.

The man, Strother Travis Brown, 40, of Sperryville, told one postal inspector that he did not remember anything that happened after he boarded a passenger train at Baltimore for Culpeper. The officers said they were inclined to believe him.

Brown is in Gallinger Hospital for mental observation and treatment of head injuries received when mail clerks and police subdued him as the train was delayed 25 minutes in Northeast Washington.

DAISY V. BROWN

Getting held up and robbed is becoming all in a day's work for comely Daisy V. Brown, 19-year-old clerk in a cleaning establishment at 1536½ North Capitol Street.

Three weeks ago a tall, broad-shouldered gunman entered the place and robbed the cash drawer of $17. Yesterday morning he returned, obtained nearly $5 from the drawer and, apparently uncontent with the small amount of loot, took her last $1.50 from her pocketbook.

The thief held a pistol in his hand, covered by a handkerchief, Mrs. Brown said.

An hour's search of the streets by the victim and police in a scout car failed to find any trace of the gunman.

The robber was almost 6 feet tall, wore a blue shirt with sleeves rolled up, a blue or gray hat and dark trousers.

Miss Brown, who lives at 2534 University Place Northwest, has been employed by the laundry since last May. Both robberies occurred in daylight.

Boy Snatches Gun, Fires on Officer, Civilian

Juvenile Court authorities last night granted police permission to lodge in the District Jail a 16-year-old boy who grabbed a policeman's revolver, fired twice at the officer and twice at a civilian yesterday.

The shooting occurred in the 200 block of A Street Northeast, after Policeman P. I. Wilson, Ninth Precinct, took the boy into custody for breaking a window and striking a child in front of 108 Third Street Northeast.

Wilson said the boy, a Negro, was pointed out to him by a group of children as having been the one who broke a window. When the policeman attempted to talk to the boy, he fled, only to be apprehended in the first block Fourth Street Northeast.

The policeman returned him to the Third Street address to have him identified and said he was going to take him to the station house.

"You're not going to take me anywhere," Wilson quoted his prisoner, and said the boy grabbed hold of a picket fence and hung on.

Wilson said he could not make the boy let go without hurting him and asked Charles T. Lewis, of 949 Longfellow Street Northwest, a laundry truck driver, to call the Ninth Precinct station for help.

When Wilson handed his key to Lewis, the boy grabbed Wilson's service revolver from its holster.

Wilson jumped behind a tree just in time to escape two bullets.

The truck driver, it was said, also ducked for cover as the boy turned the gun on him and fired twice. None of the shots was effective and Wilson disarmed the boy while the latter's attention was directed toward Lewis.

Capt. Richard Mansfield, commander of the Ninth Precinct, informed Juvenile Court of the boy's arrest. He was given permission to send him to the District Jail rather than the Receiving Home.

Ray L. Huff's Mother Dies

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Huff, 77, mother of Ray L. Huff, director of penal institutions for the District, died yesterday at the home of her son in Lorton, Va. She had been ill of heart disease for approximately one week.

Mrs. Huff had passed most of her life in Pittsburgh. She came to this area to make her home with her son several years ago. Surviving besides her son are two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at the home at 6 p. m. tomorrow with burial rites in Pittsburgh Saturday.

Husband Hit With Shoe, Skull Broken; Wife Is Detained

Mrs. Florence E. Craden, 29, was detained at the Women's Bureau last night pending some change in the condition of her husband, Wayne Carden, 22, who is in Casualty Hospital with a fractured forehead.

Carden, who lives at 237 Eighth Street Northeast, applied for treatment at the hospital Tuesday night near midnight. He collapsed in the emergency room and X-ray pictures disclosed a depressed fracture.

The injured man told police he had been beaten by footpads at Eighth Street and Maryland Avenue Northeast. Prompt investigation by Detective Sergt. Richard Cox, however, brought an admission from the man's wife that she hit him with a shoe.

Yesterday, police said Mrs. Carden signed a statement that she and her husband had argued when she returned home late from work and that she took off a slipper and struck him.

Holdup Slaying Accident, Defendant Says

William T. Mumforde, 20-year-old Negro cook's helper, seriously assured a District Court jury yesterday that it was an unhappy accident that his pistol killed an old woman after he went to rob her little store on U Street last February.

Mumforde took the stand in his own behalf—he had no other witness—in peril of the electric chair.

Before 12 impassive men, Assistant District Attorney William Hitz had placed the story of the crime, as told by circumstances and an eye witness. Climaxing the Government case was Mumford's confession that he set out to rob Miss Fanny Cohen, 62, in her dress shop, 1512 U Street Northwest, on February 15.

The confession said Mumforde fired one shot when his victim screamed. Upon these facts, the grand jury accused Mumforde of killing in the course of attempted robbery, a crime which is made first degree murder by a special law enacted a year ago.

Mumforde explained from the witness stand that he lost his nerve after he went into the store and abandoned his plan to rob Miss Cohen. When she saw that he had a gun in his pocket she started to scream. Then, said Mumforde, he drew the pistol, with the idea that a display of force might frighten her into silence.

As he drew the weapon, said Mumforde, it accidentally exploded. Then he fled.

Following this testimony, the jurors were excused until today, so that Hitz and defense counsel might state their views about instructions of law. Appointed to defend Mumforde were Attorneys Geoorge E. C. Hayes and Leonard Hayes.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, presiding, probably will complete his charge early this afternoon.

Ex-G. P. O. Worker Reported Missing

Malden, Mass., police last night were searching for James Conroy, formerly of this city, who disappeared while carrying $1,593, the Associated Press reported.

Albert C. Conroy, of Malden, a brother, told police he had been unable to find any trace of the man, a retired Government Printing Office employe, after he visited a Boston clinic for a physical examination Monday.

The brother could not account for the disappearance.

Cinema Problems Solved In Three Easy Answers

The Film Daily Thinks Up Another Puzzle; The Capital Fails to Aid Mr. Abbott; Vagrant Thoughts on World of Amusement

THIS CHESTER B. BAHN, editor of Jack Alicoate's Film Daily, can dream up the darnedest nightmares!

He starts every year off by wheedling the guys and gals of the press into choosing the "Ten Best Pictures of the Year."

VERA ZORINA

Not so long ago he launched a blanket something-or-other, the exact nature of which we have forgotten, designed for the eternal benefit of the cinema, and now he comes along with a revival of the Critics' Forum, calculated to remedy all the ills to which the motion picture industry is heir.

Happily, Mr. Bahn has boiled this recrudescent recapitulation of complaints down to three simple questions, with slop-over space for anything the victim may wish to jot down in the "Squawk Department." The questions and their hair-trigger answers follow:

1. What would you do to improve film entertainment if you were a producer?

(If we knew the answer to that one, we probably would be invited to write our own ticket as a producer.)

2. What would you do to improve film entertainment if you were an exhibitor?

(The correct answer to that no doubt would find us the overpaid operator of a national chain of Rockefeller Centers.)

3. What would you do to improve film advertising, publicity or promotion if you were an advertising-publicity director?

(The same things we did from 1917 to 1927, when we were one.)

I told you they were simple!

Being a grandstand jockey, of course, is the easiest thing in the world. It all comes down to the old business of the difference between hindsight and foresight. Any serious contemplation of how best to imbue the picture industry with the wisdom of Solomon, the patience of Job and the golden touch of a Midas will require more fingernail-gnawing and hair-pulling than we've had time, fingernails and hair to devote to it since Mr. Bahn so unfortunately remembered our name and address. Maybe more of this later. Then again, maybe not.

Talent Backward in Coming Forward

Nice of half of The Martins, best of the youthful mixed quartets, singing this week at the Earle, to stop by on a muggy afternoon to say hello and goodbye. With the music to write for a new musical comedy in which they also will appear, this will be their last vaudeville booking for a while. Ralph Blane hinted during the brief visit that the auditions of young singers and dancers for George Abbott's "Young Man's Fancy" are proving none too productive here in the Capital City. None of the applicants between 16 and 19 as yet has set the stage on fire with his dancing or the microphone ablaze with his singing—or hers, as the case may be. So we gave him a telephone number we thought might help in the search. Last auditions are being held in the Earle rehearsal hall today. All that is necessary for a whirl at it is to call up. First heard in "Three After Three, The Martins are as enthusiastic over our old friends Mary Brian, Mitzi Green, Marty May, Simone Simon, Stepin Fetchit, et al., as we always have been. They came along later in "Louisiana Purchase" and speak well of Victor Moore, Vera Zorina, Bill Gaxton and Irene Bordoni, too.

Speaking of "Louisiana Purchase," Buddy de Sylva, producer of the original and now production chief at Paramount, has been sagacious enough to retain Victor Moore, Zorina and Miss Bordoni in their original roles in his Technicolor picturization of the musical. Bob Hope will be in the chief comedy spot—if anybody can top the droll Mr. Moore—which won't hurt it any, either.

The shooting script of "Sergeant York" and all the research material collected by Jesse L. Lasky and the Warner Brothers to insure the authenticity of the production, will be sent to the York Institute, Jamestown, Tenn., to become part of its permanent archives. Frank Seltzer and Bill Brumberg, old Warner wheelhorses at this sort of thing, will be in town—are already, as a matter of fact—to assist the local Warner staff in preparations for the premiere of the picture at the Earle Theater the night of Thursday, July 31.

Personal-Aside-to-Secretary Ickes Note

Take a squint at that grass in front of the Commerce Department, around that "Treasure House," and see how lucky your lawn is!

KAAREN VERNE

blonde and beautiful and once a popular figure in German films, who fled the Nazi regime to Hollywood, via England. On the West Coast she was immediately recognized as potential star material and importantly cast in the Warner Brothers production of "Underground," now closing a two-weeks' engagement. You'll be seeing her again

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

That Sheridan 'Ride'

Hollywood, July 16 (INS).—Here's a tip for Harvard College in the fall after school is in session: Ann Sheridan, the girl the Harvard Lampoon lampooned so mercilessly, is going there to do some scenes for a movie called "Mississippi Belle." The action takes place in 1832, during the time Andrew Jackson was President of the United States. Some of it is laid in New Orleans and Nashville, but the historical buildings of Harvard figure and you'd know that Warners wouldn't miss this opportunity to send Annie, who will be the star, to Cambridge.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE

With all Hollywood searching for something new under the sun, Buddy de Sylva comes through with a fascinating idea. He is pondering over the possibilities of signing Shirley Temple, now 12, to make a picture called "Little Miss Marker Grows Up," a continuance of her first success, "Little Miss Marker." With Shirley would be her coplayers in the old film, Adolphe Menjou and Lynne Overman, both older of course. We can't help but think fans would love this idea, especially if a bit of the old picture were inserted to show just how this young lady has grown up. If the idea materializes it seems more than a guess that Damon Runyon, who wrote the original story that made the world Temple-conscious, will be asked to write the new "Marker" opus.

The quickest movie contract on record was given Inez Cooper at the M.-G.-M. studios. She was brought there by an agent and on her way to Bill Grady's office (M.-G.-M.'s casting expert) Director Mervyn Leroy met her. "Bring her over to the set," he ordered, "and I'll make a test." The test was made and before she ever reached the Grady office she was signed.

Fiorello LaGuardia, New York's genial little mayor, certainly knows how to get a rise out of Hollywood. Several years ago when he threatened to move the movie industry to his city, the hue and cry could be heard for miles. Now comes his challenge to our world-famous stylists that henceforth New York and not Paris will be the world's fashion center. Movie town is furious, claiming most South American women copy their clothes from movie stills. It looks as if Fiorello has another fight on his hands but he loves them.

HEDDA HOPPER

And Nowhere a Drop to Drink

Hollywood, Calif., July 16. When, oh when, will our producers learn to listen to the voice of the people as expressed in "gripe" letters?

JOHN BARRYMORE

Take this matter of "drinking" on the screen. No doubt there is such a thing as guzzling of alcoholic beverages among our more or less dissipated upper crust, but why should our 100 per cent American audiences be outraged by the spectacle of such gilt-edged elbow bending? In case you think this is just Hopper blowing off, I'll let the following letter speak for itself, and (I hope) for our great-hearted Peepul:

"There ought to be a law agin' people drinkin' in pictures, specially on hot nights! In the English scenes, 'twas scotch and soda. In the German scenes, 'twas seidels of beer and big seattles of brau. Three times I went back to the water cooler, and if there'd been a bar in the house I mighta gone agin' my deep-rooted convictions an' had me a beer!" There now, Mr. Picture Producer, don't say I didn't warn you!

Your hear competition is the life of trade. Somtimes it's also a boomerang. Janet Beecher was so good in the Irene Rich show that she's been written out entirely. . . . Tom Moore is off with his young son, Tom, jr., on a fishing trip to Jackson Hole, Wyoming. . . . Sir Charles and Lady Mend! go fishing in the wilds of Oregon next week with Johnny McMullin bringing up the rear in his trailer which is called "My Little Gay Home in the West," decorated by Jessica Barthelmess, and it has all the comforts of home, plus.

It's hard to believe, but Gene Fowler is just an old softie and left off swapping tales to go home and play with his grandchild. What a guy that is! Oh, boy! When we were doing a lovefest over Jack Barrymore, I asked why he didn't write Jack's life story. He replied, "Can't. Know him too well."

Looks as though Walter Wanger was doing for Gene Tierney in "Sundown" what he did for Lamarr in "Algiers." She's playing an Oriental with diamond—not gold—dust in her hair, and a dress, if you can call it that, so revealing that a natal birthmark had to be painted over. And, like "Foreign Correspondent," when the war caught up with the picture and the bombing of a radio station in England actually took place, Walter already had it on the screen, now he seems to be ahead of England in the African situation. I hope, for Walter's sake, the war goes the way his script writers are doing it.

As I always say, monkeys is the craziest people! Here Lya just found out that Olympe Branda was the highest paid child dancer on the French stage, and we've never even let her stub her toe in pictures! . . . When Cecil Kellaway, of "Bahama Passage," was asked what he thought of the Bahamas as a summer location, he replied "Nassau-good!"

It's about time Hollywood snaffled up Sidney Greenstreet, who's been distinguishing himself on our stage for years. If you were lucky you saw him with the Lunts in "There Shall Be No Night," and after he finishes "The Maltese Falcon" he goes back with them for another season. Believe me, he's what the studio calls a "little money saver." His first scene in the picture ran six and a half minutes, he talking incessantly. He did it in one take—never muffed a line.

Here we have Cecelia Calleja, Rosita Moreno, Mona Maris and Carmen Miranda, all popular with South Americans, and yet we keep on sending them pictures with girls like Betty Grable and Carole Landis. Why not show them their own favorites on our screen? The only one they ever get to see is Miranda.

Harry Sugarman, of the Tropics, tells us John Payne met an actor friend of his. "Isn't your son a surgeon?" Friend replied, "Yes, he opens at the Cedars of Lebanon tomorrow."

Rearing Juvenile Film Star An All-Time Job, Says Mother

By Charles R. Moore

Hollywood, July 16 (U.P.).—Raising a movie youngster, said Mrs. Ruth Elble Withers, is a simple job—just work at it 24 hours a day and overtime on Sunday.

Mrs. Withers is the mother of 15-year-old Jane Withers, a young lady who, during most of her screen career, has been such a brat that countless parental palms must have itched to whack her plumper portions.

Off the screen, as anyone who knows her can tell you, the Withers 'brat" is one of Hollywood's most charming and well-behaved juveniles.

She's not plump any more, either, having outgrown that stage to reach her present slim 5 feet 4.

Jane, wearing horn-rimmed spectacles, braces on her teeth and her hair in pigtals, was working today in Twentieth Century-Fox's picture "Small Town Deb."

Co-workers included Cobina Wright, jr., as big sister; Jane Darwell, and Jackie Searl, another screen baby who's still making a go of it in pictures, although he's getting along toward the voting age.

Off to one side, but near enough to see and hear everything that went on, sat Mrs. Withers, an attractive, still young, dark-haired woman with a trace of a Georgia accent.

Is Unspoiled Youngster

"We have tried," she said, "to bring up Jane as much as possible like any other youngster, not as a motion picture star.

"I think we have succeeded. Then, too, she has been in pictures so long that she regards her life as a perfectly normal one."

The Withers assault on the gates of Hollywood, Mrs. Withers recalled, began when Jane was 6. The youngster already was a veteran of three years in radio, having appeared many times on Atlanta stations.

"Mr. Withers," she said, "thought we should have purchased round-trip tickets. He still thought so for quite a few months after we came here. Then his firm transferred him to southern California and we've all been together since."

For two years Jane did nothing more important than extra parts, furnishing the voice for animated cartoons, and similar stray chores. Then in 1934 she got a part in the Shirley Temple picture, "Bright Eyes." The Withers team, mother and daughter, found that they'd finally hit the jackpot.

Although she is a very carefully supervised young lady, Mrs. Withers said, Jane has been given a personal part in all business negotiations almost from the start of her career. She knows where all the dollars come and go, and why, and could take care of everything herself if necessary, her mother said.

Saves Out of Allowance

"Jane gets $10 a week for spending money," she said. "That's a fortune to her. Out of that she saves money to buy things she especially wants, such as a horse. The rest goes into trust funds and annuities which are so arranged that she can never get more than a certain amount at any one time."

The financial arrangements, she said, have been made to be certain she will always benefit from her present earnings, and not wind up broke before 30, as some other child stars have.

The boy-friend problem, Mrs. Withers said, has been solved through converting a section of the Withers home into what is practically a young people's clubhouse, so Jane can do most of her entertaining at home.

LEONARD LYONS

Coals to Newcastle

New York, July 16.

DR. GEORGE GALLUP: This is what happened at the White House last week, at the conclusion of the conference between Wendell Willkie and President Roosevelt: The President revealed that his friends had suggested that the Administration retain the foremost psychiatrists in the country, to advise Roosevelt how best to ascertain and influence public opinion, during this crisis . . . "Mr. President," Willkie told him, "have you heard of the first meeting between your fifth cousin, Theodore Roosevelt, and Albert Lasker, the advertising man?" Willkie then related the story of that first meeting—when, with outstretched arms, Teddy greeted his guest and said: "Mr. Lasker, I've been told that you have the master mind in the country." To which Lasker replied: "It would be presumptious for any one to claim that, in your presence" . . . "And so," Willkie assured the President, "I think it would be presumptious of any psychiatrists to tell YOU how to influence Public Opinion."

SENATOR WHEELER—N. B. C., C. B. S. and Mutual have made much progress in the radio peace conferences you initiated to arrange a compromise for modifying the Federal Commerce Commission monopoly report. That's why the FCC probably will postpone the effective date of the report, now fixed at August 2 . . . JACK DEMPSEY—Come home from Texas. Your estranged wife, Hannah Williams, now has all the meals served at her home delivered from your cafe on Broadway

JOHN BARRYMORE—Sinclair Lewis, who will play your role in "My Dear Children" at the Stony Creek Playhouse, is sure that he'll give a good performance. "I may not look as debonair as Barrymore," says Lewis, "but I can ad lib better than he can, any day" . . . GERTRUDE NIESEN—The producers of "Separate Rooms" want you to play the Glenda Farrell role in that play. Miss Farrell left the show last week . . . BARRY BINGHAM—The White House again will call upon Mark Ethridge, general manager of your Louisville Courier-Journal. This time Ethridge will have an important assignment in the field of national defense.

IRA GERSHWIN—Thursday night 24,000 people—the season's record—crowded into Lewisohn Stadium, where Oscar Levant was the guest-soloist at the Gershwin Memorial Concert. After the concert, an admirer told Levant: "It was amazing—to see how quiet the audience was, while you played. There was no conversation at all." . . . "That must have been my friends," Oscar explained. "They don't even talk to ME."

DUCHESS OF WINDSOR—Canada expects a visit from you and the Duke, next month . . . ANDRE MAUROIS—Jules Romains is going to Middlebury College, as a lecturer . . . B'WAY ASSN.—The local Junior League has been supplying debutantes for the weekly dances for the soldiers at Fort Hancock, N. J. The blue-blooded lady in charge of the entertainment there couldn't find enough debutantes to go 'round, last week, and so she phoned New York for more girls. This proved a happy experience for the draftees—for the girls know how to entertain young men at dances. They were all hostesses employed at the Roseland Ballroom on Broadway.

HENRY LUCE—Col. William J. Donovan's first appointment as coordinator of intelligence will be that of St. Elmo Roper, of your Fortune magazine. Roper will work as Donovan's economist . . . FRANK CAPRA: Bob Riskin, your screen-writer associate, has been unable to obtain passage to London. CAPT. JAMES ROOSEVELT—Will you be assigned to the staff of Col. William J. Donovan—whose war-front trail you recently followed? . . . ALAN DINEHART—Lyle Talbot, you Broadway colleague, was hurt in an automobile accident a night or two ago . . . GARY COOPER—Last week, Frank Fay at last realized that, despite his wavy locks and flashing eyes, he no longer can play juvenile roles . . . Some years ago Fay starred in a movie called "Matrimonial Bed," in which a child-star sat on his knee and asked, in a baby voice: "Daddy, why do you call me Angel-face?" Last week Fay went to see "Sergeant York." In one scene he saw a young man walk up to you, and with an adult voice, command: "Come on. Maw wants you." The young man was Dickie Moore—the onetime child star who had sat upon Fay's knee and was called "Angel-face."

Sylvan and C. U. Groups in Plays

Two productions attracted summer theater enthusiasts last night. At the Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds, the Players Club of Central Community Center presented "After Wimpole Street" before an audience of 1,800, while at the University Theater, on the Catholic University campus, the Speech and Drama Department opened a three-night run of Oliver Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer."

The Sylvan Theater play, written by Wilbur Braun, concerns the financial and domestic life of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning. Marian Leigh and Remo Rubino played the leading roles for the single performance.

Hugh Franklin, a youthful professional actor who has appeared with the group in the play before, came down from New York for the Goldsmith comedy. Fred Horton, Mary Finnerty, Constance Haug, and Louise Fox top his support.

'The Mutiny of the Elsinore' Catches Jack London Flavor

By Richard L. Coe

"THE MUTINY OF THE ELSINORE." Argyle picturization of the Jack London story, adapted to the screen by Beaufoy Milton, with Paul Lukas, Lyn Harding, Kathleen Kelly, Clifford Evans, Michael Martin-Harvey, William Devlin, Ben Soutten, Conway Dixon, Pat Noonan, Tony Sympson, Hamilton Keene, Alec Fraser and Vivo Bonoya. Directed by Roy Lockwood. Previewed Monday morning. At the Little Theater.

Word counterfeits have tried often and with little conviction to ape robust, sea-loving Jack London. Film people try less frequently, but with more success. Latest of the Jack London yarns to reach a local screen is "The Mutiny of the Elsinore," at the Little, an exciting, lurid melodrama outstanding for its remarkable reality aboard a three-master on a fair sea or foul.

No studio back lot saw the making of this one—at least not its seascapes. All the action takes place aboard the sailing ship whose most conspicuous inhabitant is that autobiographical chap so much to the fore in London's stories—a writer chap with a yen for adventure to pack into his yarns. Through this ship, its rigging and its decks, its people and its hold, is brought back to reality a world now all but extinct.

In "The Mutiny of the Elsinore," London wrote of a mutiny much like any other, but peopled with such boldly drawn characters that his story races along with the wind. There is the discipline-minded mate, strong and fearsome. There is the sniveling "sea lawyer," and aging man who knows his "rights" and mocks those who don't know theirs. There is the quiet captain devoted to lawful order. There is the murderer whose past catches up with him. Their fellows are a rough lot, played with that fine attention to character detail so fundamental a quality of English films. (Yes, "The Mutiny of the Elsinore" is a British film, but it antedates this year's "The Sea Wolf" from the American Warners by a copyright mark of 1938.)

Our writer-hero, capably played by Paul Lukas, comes into the Elsinore's career at a critical time. Her voyage to San Francisco sees the murder of her captain, the unmasking of an old crime and a do-or-die struggle on and below decks between a handful and a mob. Forced to act, the writer saves his life and gets his story. Since this is a film, he also gets a girl.

While both Lukas and Lyn Harding, playing the stern, enormous first mate, are expert in their roles, Michael Martin-Harvey's whimpering seaman is the character drawing most likely to stick in your memory. He skirts the edges of hamming in this richly written role and makes Charles Davis sharp and vivid. The balance of the actors, most of them in villainous roles, include Clifford Evans, William Devlin, Ben Soutten, Pat Noonan and Tony Sympson.

For all its acting and gusty script writing, though, "The Mutiny of the Elsinore" is a picture to see for its remarkable fidelity to background, for its unbeatable sea scenes, for the spray that seeps into the camera when it's catching a storm from the top of a mast. That's when its makers have succeeded in making a sea story with the honest-Injun flavor of the unbeatable Jack London.

Rooney Pets

Andy Hardy had to play second fiddle to a couple of dogs on the set of M-G-M's new Hardy Family picture, when Mickey Rooney took two puppies—latest additions to his pet family—to the studio with him. One was a Llewellyn, given him by Norma Shearer, and the other a police dog, one of a brood of 12 fathered by Mickey's prize dog, Fritz.

Humorous Talents

Recognized as one of Hollywood's most versatile stars, Ginger Rogers displays her talents as a comedienne in "Tom, Dick and Harry," romantic comedy in which George Murphy, Alan Marshall and Burgess Meredith are leads.

Daylight Saving

There are many reasons in favor of daylight-saving time on a national basis. But President Roosevelt in his appeal to Congress for all-in observance rightly stressed national defense as the outstanding reason. He would go further and make it year-round and for the same reason. Year-round daylight saving, the President predicted, would result in a probable annual reduction of 736,282,000 kilowatt-hours in the use of electricity. Right now, according to the President, there is a serious power shortage in the Southeastern States, including the District, which is impeding the national defense program. Unquestionably the establishment of daylight time would lighten the "load" of power plants. Moreover, defense officials have estimated that power saved would be enough to operate, say, an aluminum plant of 700,000,000 pounds capacity. From the defense standpoint, therefore, daylight time is essential. But it can be successful only if substantial areas adopt it. For example, there would be obvious complications if the Capital adopted it and Maryland or Virginia did not.

As for year-round daylight saving, there is some doubt that daylight time in the winter would save as much power as may be estimated, inasmuch as people would be getting up in the dark and would have to switch on their lights. This consumption of power, nevertheless, would not be as great, it is felt, as that consumed toward the end of the day in winter, with communities on standard time. To farmers who oppose daylight time with the argument that you cannot get a hen to lay an egg by advancing the clock the best answer is: if you alter your own routine to conform with daylight time, how are the hens going to know about it? In metropolitan and suburban areas there will be less opposition, of course, than in the rural areas. Aside from the exigencies of defense, however, the country would welcome a uniform time standard if only to eliminate a number of nuisances, not the least of which is the customary headache involved in trying to catch a train.

Conserving Oil

Canada, it seems, is now 1-up on us in the campaign to preserve dwindling oil supplies, for the Dominion has banned night or Sunday sales of gasoline and lubricants. There are, of course, three obvious steps which can be taken to cut consumption. The first is to encourage motorists to use less motor fuel; to drive at reduced speeds, to eliminate "jack-rabbit" starts and racing pickups in second gear, and to adjust faulty carburetors. The second is to impose restrictions on the sale, delivery and distribution of fuel, as Canada has done. And the third—the ultimate step—is to invoke a rigid system of rationing. We are now fumbling along with the first step. It is not proving very successful. In spite of the best efforts of Petroleum Coordinator Ickes and of the District Petroleum Conservation Committee, their campaign to get the public to reduce voluntarily its use of fuel is falling short of expectations. This is apparently due in part to the public's unwillingness to acknowledge that there is a shortage. That there is such a shortage ought to be clear enough if it is realized that before we diverted 50 tankers to Britain's use we had barely enough in service between Gulf and East Coast ports to cover fuel requirements, which have risen 13 per cent in the past two years.

Even with full cooperation in the voluntary restriction program there is no assurance that fuel thus saved would carry us through the emergency. For Britain's requirements remain the greatest imponderable in the situation. If she needs more oil, she must have it—and tanker losses in the Atlantic and the increased use of fuel in ships and planes when she takes the initiative, as she is already doing in the air, point to further demands upon American oil supplies. If they are made, there will be no choice but to take our restriction program out of the "voluntary" stage and institute some form of rationing.

When Canada's oil controller, G. R. Cottrelle, was in Washington recently, he was told in no uncertain terms that the Dominion ought to take the lead in restricting oil consumption. This has now been done. Moreover, Canada has appealed to Canadian motorists to cut their normal use of gasoline by 50 per cent. The Dominion now thinks it is up to this country to follow suit, and Mr. Cottrelle said as much when he announced the new restriction order. As matters stand, we not only do not know how cooperative American motorists will be; we do not know whether oil saved through complete civilian cooperation will tide us through the months ahead, assuming greater British demand. In the circumstances, then, it seems clear that Federal authorities should allow just so much time to the voluntary restriction program, and if it does not get results, then there should be no further delay in Federally imposed restrictions. Too little oil too late is a reproach which Britain must never have reason to level at us.

Konoye Resigns

It would be rash to assume that the resignation of the Konoye government will result in any fundamental change in Japan's foreign policy of dominating all eastern Asia. It may, however, foreshadow a decision on the direction of that policy—a decision provoked by the Russo-German War. This war put Japan in a dilemma because such a disturbance in the Asian status quo and such a prospect of chaos in Siberia seemed to call for Japanese action. Japan's leaders were not able to make up their minds whether their aim could now best be furthered by an attack on Siberia or by a resumption of the temporarily suspended drive toward the Dutch East Indies.

From the standpoint of the Axis, with which Japan is allied, the wisest policy for Japan to pursue at this time is to continue moving south. Hitler wants Japan to try to keep the bulk of our fleet in the Pacific. This, however, is a risky venture, for our direct interests would immediately be touched by such a move. And, after four years of exhausting war on the mainland of Asia, Japan is in no position to take excessive risks, even though her navy has seen little action. However, the German attack on Russia has revived in Japan years-old yearnings for a drive to the north. This would be into the maritime provinces of Siberia and the Kamchatka Peninsula. But this venture, too, would also have its risks. The United States, to be sure, would be less directly concerned, but Japan, in view of past experience, can't underrate Russia, no matter if Hitler does. Russia has long maintained an autonomous force in the Soviet Far East and an air fleet within easy bombing distance of Japan's rickety cities. A northern move would likewise run counter to the recently concluded nonaggression pact with Russia. Both reasons may be why Yosuke Matsuoka, the outgoing foreign minister, who has been responsible both for Japan's adherence to the Axis and the pact with Russia, is said to be opposed to an attack on Siberia.

Only of one thing can we be sure in the new Japanese situation. If Japan does decide to march into Siberia, it would not be to carry out Hitler's wishes (which are much more concerned with a southward push), but to gratify Japan's own aims. In a sense, therefore, the struggle that has been going on in Japan and which led to the resignation of the cabinet is a struggle between the pro-Axis group and the group which believe in playing Japan's own game. It is not yet clear which side will win out. A strong indication will be whether Matsuoka succeeds himself at the foreign office or is replaced by one less identified than he has been with the policies of Berlin and Rome.

O'Daniel Comes

Senator Carter Glass used to say that a Senator should be regarded as a "special ambassador" from his State. Well, a very special embassy is about to come this way very shortly in the colorful person and musical staff of W. Lee O'Daniel. Mr. O'Daniel has just been elected junior Senator from Texas, and he threatens to appear before the Capitol with his hillbilly band and entertainers. It should be quite a show. For the music that the O'Daniel men make must be pretty powerful stuff. At any rate, this is the third campaign that the Senator-elect has won with it. He got elected to the governorship twice to its strains, or, rather, the strains seem to have got him elected. The hillbilly band likewise played him over the top for the senatorship against a field which included a Presidential nominee and Martin Dies. It must not be thought, however, that the Senator-elect left all the sounding off to be done by his instrumentalists. He used his own wind to good purpose while his entourage was nursing theirs. Mainly his own intermezzos had to do with bigger and better pensions, though in the recent campaign the Lone Star State seems to have resounded with his drubbing of "the politicians in Washington." Probably he had reason for this switch from promises to invective. Representative Lyndon B. Johnson, who was nosed out by only 1,311 votes, was the choice of the Administration. And "the politicians in Washington" are said to have worked with might and main for his candidature. But success is apt to assuage rancors, and the Senator-elect may now forget his threats to rub in his triumph, and leave his hillbilly band at home. That would be the part of wisdom. The music may be entertaining enough. It may woo Lone Star votes. But there is nothing to be gained out of the Capital from an exhibition showing the Texas Daniel as one of the lions. That is honor enough to stand without advertisement and responsibility, too. Service, not stunts, is what is now required of the Senator-elect—service to his great State and to the Union which in these troublous times requires a wider loyalty than is identifiable with the role of special ambassador.

Uncle Sam's Buying

It is axiomatic that the Government must set an example for the country in its policies. For instance, we are still relying in large measure upon the self-restraint of business in keeping prices under control. But, if the lumber business is any indication of the general tendency, business is handicapped in this regard by the competitive bidding for supplies by agencies of the Government itself. The lumber men complain that at least 12 different units of the Federal Government are buying forest products directly from manufacturers or wholesalers. It is bad enough to keep prices stable when the competition of private consumers is making a seller's market. But the situation is a thousand times worse when consumer competition is practiced by the Government.

Correlation of purchases by Government agencies has been urged time and time again. The last occasion was in a report by the Temporary National Economic Committee. This committee found that almost two-thirds of Government purchasing is still on the decentralized basis of direct dealings between the operating agency and the supplier. Perhaps it is too much to expect perfect coordination between the service departments of the Government. Perhaps the hope that OPM would take over the purchasing of those departments was futile perfectionism. But a start could be made on normal purchasing, such as that of the Departments of Interior and of Agriculture. At any rate, what is the use of committees wasting their time and the Nation's in emitting sound recommendations if nothing is done about them? Or for Mr. Henderson to be expected to do price stabilizing wonders when he does not even have the support of coordinated purchasing by the Government agencies as a consumer contribution to price stabilization?

Potpourri

It has been truly said by somebody that if one were to name the three most distinguished figures in any field of human accomplishment, at least one of the three names would almost certainly be Italian. In poetry, Dante; in art, Michelangelo; in philosophy, Thomas of Aquino; in science, Galileo; in music, Palestrina; in invention, Marconi, and so on, and so on. In the matter of baseball the Italian genius got off to a somewhat belated start. But hereafter no mention can be made of the three great expositors of that energetic art and not include the name of Joe DiMaggio, who yesterday stretched his record of hitting to 56 consecutive games. Rabbit ball or no rabbit ball, an exploit like that cannot be laughed off.

Since the debut of Mr. Antonio Lazzeri there has been an astonishing influx of second and third generation Italo-Americans into big-time baseball. And today there are very few clubs which do not contribute one or more Italian names to the daily box scores. Indeed, it is now possible to select an all-Italian team which will bear comparison with almost any non-Italian combination from the past or present history of the game. For example: Infielders—first base, Camilli; second base, Lazzeri; third base, Lavagetto; shortstop, Crosetti; outfielders, the Brothers DiMaggio; catcher, Lombardi. We should be a bit hard pressed for pitchers, to be sure, but we might get on with young Mr. Russo, of the Yanks.

Of course, it would be possible to pick an even more impressive team of Germanic or German sounding names. Infielders — first base, Sisler, Gehrig, Kuhel; second base, Herman, Knabe, Schaeffer, Gehringer; third base, Stienfeld, Lobert; shortstop, Wagner; outfielders: Ruth, Keller, Reiser; catcher, Ruel; pitchers, Schumacher. Hubbell. Or, if you prefer them a la francaise: Infielders—first base, Bissonette; second base, Lajoie; third base, Boudreau; shortstop, Durocher. Outfielders—Galan, Bordagaray, Demaree; catcher, Desautels; pitcher, Cicotte. An all-Irish team would of course be no trouble at all except for the problem of whom to leave off. We don't know what it all proves, but it is interesting just the same.

ENCOUNTER AT MOONRISE

As I went 'round by Raven Hill,
The full moon rising frosty-keen,
I met a stranger standing still,
Some stony stubble-aisles between.

I thought him flesh, a mortal man;
But I discovered very soon
He was not mortal. I began
To whistle an uncertain tune.

His shadow shivered on the ground,
But more than windy rags was he.
I walked and whistled wide around,
Not turning toward the moon to see
What might come bobbling after me.

To War Or Not To War

As a result of the postal-card poll taken by Representative Hamilton Fish on the vital question, "The United States should enter the war—stay out of war," which went 9 to 1 to stay out of war, some of the interventionists and warmakers in his district are raving and gnashing their teeth and bursting into print. Among these was a Mr. Benjamin W. Fraser, of Garrison, N. Y.

The poll taken by Representative Fish was not whether we should like to stay out of war, but whether the United States should go in or stay out. The question was simple and clear. Mr. Frazier, who voted to enter the war, which was his right, showed he understood the question perfectly.

However, knowing Congressman Fish was at Fort Bragg, N. C., for four weeks' training with the armed forces, he rushed into print asking for Yes or No answers on a dozen or more rehashed questions which have been answered by Mr. Fish in the Congress and in public speeches. Time has shown that he was right, for example, in demanding, when the original conscription bill was being considered, that the age limit be set at 28 instead of 35.

Mr. Fish has voted for every appropriation for national defense in the last five years, except for one in 1938, when he advocated spending more on airplanes rather than on superdreadnaughts. When Mr. Fish asked for 2,000 modern, fully armed combat airplanes two years ago, we did not have any; today we have less than 500. However, Mr. Fish has voted for all airplane and aviation appropriations, amounting to $7,000,000,000. He also voted for all military appropriations and has been urging for a long time the equipment with modern weapons such as tanks and antiaircraft guns. There are few members of Congress that know more about defensive needs of the Army than Col. Fish.

As a disabled veteran of the World War and as a fellow townsman, my advice to Mr. Frazier is to stop howling and agitating for war against the will of 90 per cent of the people of our own town, and to show your devotion to war in more concrete action than words.

Secretary to Representative Fish.

Thwarting Hitler

When the destroyer deal was announced last September, Wheeler, Lindbergh and Fish cried, "This is an act of war. The President has usurped the power of Congress and has delivered the Nation into the hands of Armageddon."

And yet America did not find herself at war!

Then came the lend-lease bill, the seizure of Axis merchant ships, the closing of Axis consulates and the landing of American armed forces in Iceland.

And America is not yet at war!

It is still contended by Wheeler, Lindbergh and Fish that any step to insure the delivery of our supplies to Britain would involve us in war with Hitler.

Let us kill that lie once and for all. Hitler does not declare war. When he thinks that he is able to take effective military action, he does so without the formalities. At present Hitler is not able to take effective military action.

Hitler is pretty mad at us already. But he will have to swallow his anger until he can finish off Britain and Russia. It is up to the American people to use every means at its disposal to see that he never does. We need have no fear of retaliation. Should Britain and Russia fall, Hitler would be gunning for us anyhow.

FREDERIC S. NATHAN.

Backing The President

Our President has declared again and again, "I hate war." The vast majority of us Americans also hate war, but there has come a time in our lives when war appears no longer avoidable.

The war now raging in Europe was not of our making. Led by our President, conscientious efforts have been made to keep out of this "shooting war" and at the same time extend our aid to those who are fighting for the things we hold to be right. Despite those efforts we are being drawn nearer to the shooting war we all hate. We also hate Hitler, Mussolini and those contemptible obstructionists who endeavor to sell us a plan to enslave all Europe under the guise of "negotiated peace." This same gang then tries to misguide us by advancing the time-worn argument of, "How can Hitler cross 3,000 miles of ocean when he cannot cross the English Channel?" That silly prattle is the tool of fools who live in a fool's paradise. Anyone with a scintilla of common sense knows that if Hitler and his hijackers are able to conquer Russia and England, we will be forced to defend ourselves later on along the shores of America. Hitler made his plans to get to America by the same stepping stones we will adopt to get additional aid to Europe; but our President "beat him to the punch."

What we now need is an all-out effort of men, money, materials and national unity. We have a sufficiency of men, money and materials, but do lack national unity, due to some disgruntled politicians and former flyers who seek to sabotage the President. Again I say, I hate war, but I'm going to do all I can to back up and support our President.

'Death Struck Here'

Many times while driving my car in the District of Columbia during the last winter I have seen the circular signs: 'Death Struck Here. Traffic Victim No. ——.' Each time I see one of these I lament the fact that the beautiful streets of Washington should be the containers of such depressing and morbid reminders. It appears to me to be a very mistaken sense of psychology that would prompt the use of such mementos of tragedy. There is enough horror in this world without additional reminders of destruction. To instill fear into a driver is not to make him a better or more careful driver, but a less dependable one, and these ghastly signs do not help to increase one's courage and ability.

Of course, one heartily approves all right effort toward more careful driving and the elimination, as far as possible, of the danger of accident, but surely a happier way than this can be found.

Churchill's Speech

Prime Minister Churchill made a powerful speech before an enthusiastic group of the Civil Defense Force in London. It had been announced that the prime minister would discuss the recent Anglo-Soviet pact, with its dreary phrase "neither will negotiate or conclude a separate peace." To my intense relief, Churchill did not mention the pact. We recall France and know how little those pacts mean.

Churchill was talking to a highly intelligent body of people, who by their example had richly contributed to sustaining the morale of the British during the frightful air attacks more brutal and shocking than anything known to modern history.

Churchill paid deserved tribute to the vigor and efficiency of the C. D. F.; speaking with impressive sincerity, he told of the prodigious strain imposed on England being met with that complex, sensitive, resilient character developed in Britain by centuries of struggle. He is preparing his people for a long struggle; while they have suffered much and endured losses in the past, they must expect more.

It was the spirit behind the voice that fired the air entering American homes sympathetic with British misery and anxious to extend help by deeds no less than words. American critics of defense will do well to read and reflect on the Churchill speech. Some would admonish us that we must not violate international law, that emaciated simulacrum of justice, now sunk in the mud with the hull of the Robin Moor.

We don't want war. The same was true of the dozen states reaching from Norway to Greece; all protested their neutrality, hoping thereby to avoid war, even as Ireland does today, but all being weak and helpless, they had no choice. Hitler made their decision. Superior power is the only answer to Hitler.

Police Plan

Having read with interest your articles and editorials concerning the District of Columbia police, I am inspired, because of my general interest in scholarships, to offer a constructive suggestion for the approval of your readers.

According to reports, many fine police come from various United States cities to the Capital for the purpose of studying FBI courses. And some are forced to make personal sacrifices to do this because of limited financial means. The value of their training to the cities from which they come, however, is not questioned.

Something should be done to provide scholarships for FBI study for worthy police throughout the Nation. Hence, I propose that Congress create a special fund which would pay the traveling expenses and provide salaries for a number of police from each of the 48 States, who would be brought here for periods of several months for the dual purpose of FBI study and guarding the Capital.

As a special part-time force these police could study for a portion of the day and perform various duties during another part. By developing the plan Congress would at once strengthen the police forces of the District and of cities throughout the Nation.

As a concrete gesture of friendliness toward our Latin and South American neighbors special scholarships might be awarded police from cities below the Rio Grande.

The Post Impressionist

Smoker, Beware!

A man is never so distinctively, so truly himself as when he is opening a package of cigarettes. Something about the ritual he follows then is sacred. He may let his wife pick out his ties; he may send his measurements to a tailor and trust the hireling to run up a new suit; he'll turn his legal affairs over to a lawyer. But no man worthy of that designation will let anyone open his cigarettes for him.

If he belongs to the school that shucks off the cellophane, he looks with disgust at the man who trims it off at the top. If he rips off the entire top of the package itself, he shudders at the man who nips off a neat little corner. His way, he knows, is the only way; and he regards as barbaric any man who falls under the spell of another persuasion.

Though there is bad blood between rival camps of male cigarette openers, there is one standard to which they will all rally. Every man, regardless of his creed in this vital department of contemporary mores, will agree with every other man that a woman does not—positively, absolutely does not—know how to open a package of cigarettes properly. For this principle all men—the shuckers, the trimmers, the splitters-down-the-middle, even the tearers-to-pieces (who use cigarette cases)—are prepared to give up their last match. For this is the male's last stand, the final trench that men will not see taken.

In the beginning, when cigarettes smoking among women passed from that stage where indulgence was social suicide to where it was merely considered daring, the male held his fort by insisting that smoking was not lady-like. (He didn't care whether it was or not, of course; he merely meant that it was masculine, that it was a man's prerogative, one he did not want the ladies to usurp). So no one was more vigorous than the man in trumpeting blasts against the gals who liked to sneak in a quiet cubeb now and then. This was the stage in the battle when men who saw smoking cars invaded by women smokers used to sit mumbling in end seats in the coach, working themselves up to such a pitch of angry excitement that it was a toss-up whether they would die of apoplexy or pass away through choking after swallowing their cigars.

When the habit really took hold and a girl could light a cigarette in public without stopping traffic, the embattled males thought they had something when they got hold of a new rallying cry: "Women don't know how to smoke!" The accent in this new campaign was on ridicule. "Show me a woman who inhales!" The diehard who went around making that demand felt pretty sure that he was on the way to putting the lovely creatures in their places. It was good strategy. The only trouble was that by this time nine women out of ten, as soon as they began to puff a cigarette, would take drags that would puncture the lungs of a longshoreman. So the ridicule campaign was a great success—for the ladies. It made the men look pretty silly.

But men rarely give up, particularly if they're smokers. That's why, now, when a girl hands a man a pack of cigarettes and asks him to take one, he always smiles pityingly at the ragged edges of the pack. The smile is calculated to show the young lady that, while she and the rest of her sex may have gone pretty far in their invasion of a masculine domain, they have yet to reach the citadel: they have not taken the last redoubt.

It is of course only a question of time. In their hearts men know this and those who keep the battle going because their only claim to rugged masculinity is their skill in blowing smoke rings had better take up lion hunting or bear baiting if they want to keep their sense of superiority alive. Men must face defeat so long as they remain blind to the reason that prompted the female population to take up smoking. So long as they remain in ignorance of the reason they cannot hope to extirpate the practice.

As to the reason for the nicotine conversion: Anyone who remembers Godey's Lady's Book can recall that in that magazine's decalog smoking was right up next to wife beating. Not smoking for ladies! The entire editorial staff would have swooned at the mere suggestion of such a debasement of the sex. No! When the Lady's Book went after smoking, it was gunning for the male practitioners of the vice. The staff adopted a number of methods for putting a stop to this particular crime wave. One of its shrewdest was to enlist its young female subscribers in a campaign to discourage their gentleman friends from their idolatrous absorption in the weed. Verses were printed of a hortatory kind. This was one of the best:

May never lady press his lip, his proffered love returning,
Who makes a furnace of his mouth, and keeps its chimney burning;
May each true woman shun his sight, for fear his fumes might choke her,
And none but those who smoke themselves, have kisses for a smoker.

The exhortation took hold; and it worked, even if it didn't work in quite the way Godey's intended. Women are much more practical than men, infinitely more realistic. They were faced with a dilemma: the Godey curse or a kissless existence. For a while it must have looked tough. Here were the men on one hand clinging to their wickedness with a stranglehold that lightning couldn't shake; on the other, there was the Lady's Book with its ominous warning. But the ladies, with that sense of the practical that they can always call on in a crisis, saw a way out. There was that line: "And none but those who smoke themselves, have kisses for a smoker." That was the line that showed them how they could keep romance alive and still have a legal claim on the Godey blessing.

That's how the whole thing started. It can end in the same way. To the generals in the campaign to keep smoking for men and men only I recommend the Godey tactic. It merely needs to be overhauled so that it can run in reverse.

Uneasy Status Of Carpathian Ukraine

IN NOVEMBER, 1938, Mr. Katohl, Secretary of the Japanese Embassy in Berlin, arrived in Hust, the muddy capital of the newly created Carpathian Ukraine. "Your state is small, but it has a great future" said the young Japanese diplomat with a pleasant smile to the old and candid country priest, Father Voloshin, who, by Hitler's will, became the first Prime Minister of the Carpathian Ukraine.

It was, indeed, a small state. Its territory, originally about 7,800 square miles, had been reduced, October, 1938, in Vienna by von Ribbentrop's decision to 6,400 square miles. Until October, 1938, it had been merely a province of Czecho-Slovakia, and a most peculiar province. One left Prague, one of the most modern capitals in Europe, and after a night's sleep in the train was amazed to discover that, without having left Czecho-Slovakia's boundaries, one had traveled three centuries backwards.

Clay houses, straw roofs, agricultural tools and social ideas of the XVII century—this was the province known, or rather little known, till October 1938 under its official name of Subcarpathian Russia.

Official statistics gave, however, quite a false picture of this backward country. The 725,000 inhabitants of Subcarpathian Russia numbered six national minorities, eleven creeds, 32 political parties and 58 publications. The political parties and the publications had rather a butterfly existence, their number is particularly appreciated when one takes into consideration that 70 per cent of the 725,000 population were illiterate.

Were these men Russians or Ukrainians? They did not know themselves. Their ancestors, the Lemki tribe, had come from the Russian plains in the 10th century, when the Ukrainian and Russian tribes were not yet definitely differentiated. At that time the tribes were still speaking the old Slavonic language. They were later joined by the Gutzules tribe, who were already speaking Ukrainian. They lived together, until 1918, under Hungarian rule.

THEY DIFFERED first, mainly in their creeds. The majority had adopted the Uniate creed, which was also the creed of the Galician Ukrainians—a kind of compromise between Catholicism and the Greek Orthodox religion. The minority remained faithful to the old Greek Orthodox creed of their ancestors.

The majority spoke Ukrainian; the minority spoke Russian. But in the Nineteenth Century, with the pan-Slavistic movement, Subcarpathian Russia manifested an increasing pro-Russian trend. This trend was so important that it was even supported by some Uniate bishops such as Batchinski, Gagantz and Gaiditch. They hoped to be able to reconcile the pro-Russian movement with the interests of the Uniate Church. The Hungarian authorities, however, fought this trend as treason and many pro-Russians of Subcarpathian Russia had to flee to Russia.

In 1918, after the collapse of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, Subcarpathian Russia agreed to form with the Czechs and the Slovaks the Czecho-Slovak Republic. This decision was particularly supported by 400,000 immigrants from Subcarpathian Russia to the United States, who were politically and culturally much more advanced than their brethren in the old country.

The Prague government did a great deal to civilize this backward province. It refused, however, to grant it the autonomy which it had promised in 1918. Subcarpathian Russia was, nevertheless, represented by seven congressmen, four of whom described themselves as Russians, while the other three considered themselves as Ukrainians.

Hitler, whose main worry is, as we all well know, to "liberate" all the oppressed peoples in Europe, could not remain long "indifferent" to the fate of Subcarpathian Russia.

After Munich, the Hungarians, who got a part of Slovakia, hoped they would also be able to get all Subcarpathian Russia, which had belonged to them until 1918. Hitler, however, decided that they should get only a southern strip of 800 square miles with the two cities of Munkachevo and Uzhorod, well-wrapped in their medieval mud. But for Subcarpathian Russia Hitler reserved an autonomy, and with this autonomy the country received also the new official name of Carpathian Ukraine.

A GOVERNMENT of five members headed by Father Voloshin was approved by the Nazis to assure the administration of the new state. Father Voloshin and his henchmen were not even pro-Nazis. They were candid borough politicians, whose main aim was to crush the political adversaries of the pro-Russian faction. To realize their aspirations, they were prepared to accept power from the devil himself. The Nazis were well aware of this state of mind, and so not satisfied to have them merely under the control of the German Consul General, who established his offices in the Hotel Corona in Hust, they also sent to Hust Andrey Melnik, leader of the Galician Organization of Ukrainian Nationalists, which had been pro-Fascist even before the Nazis came to power and which since their arrival to power had closely cooperated with the Gestapo.

Andrey Melnik organized in Carpathian Ukraine, on the pattern of the Nazi stormtroopers, detachments of Ukrainian Sicheviki. A delegation of these Sicheviki, headed by Dr. Rohatch, Father Voloshin's secretary, arrived January, 1939, in Berlin to be trained in Gestapo methods. The Sicheviki, who terrorized the population of Carpathian Ukraine, boasted they would take the power from the weak hands of Father Voloshin.

Andrey Melnik also visited Vienna regularly, from where he broadcast in the Rzeug station, fiery appeals to Ukrainians in Polish Eastern Galicia and Soviet Russia. He emphasized the importance of the existence of the first independent Ukrainian state, created with Nazi help and invited the Ukrainians in Galicia and Soviet Russia to revolt and free themselves from the Polish and Soviet yoke.

In the winter of 1938-39 the international situation, viewed from Carpathian Ukraine, appeared to indicate an imminent march of Hitler against Poland and Russia for the "liberation" of Ukraine. Little wonder that this forgotten country suddenly became a gathering place for political observers, newspapermen and adventurers.

Nazi instructors came to train the Ukrainians. The agents of Hetman Skoropadski were bitterly disappointed to see the Nazi showing preference for the Galician Ukrainian Fascists.

Everybody was extremely excited and making great plans for the future, when came the coup d'etat of March 1939.

NAZIZ FORCES entered Prague, liquidating all that remained of former Czech sovereignty. Slovakia called Nazi forces to protect the independence she had received a few months before from Hitler. Carpathian Ukraine followed Slovakia's example. But the Nazis, to the great surprise and disappointment of Ukrainian leaders, turned a deaf ear. The Hungarians crossed the Ukrainian border and a guerrilla war broke out between the Hungarian army and Ukrainian detachments.

Julius Reval, Father Voloshin's secretary of state, rushed to Vienna, where he waited in vain four days to meet von Ribbentrop. On March 18, 1939, the Carpathian Ukraine leaders realized that the Nazis had betrayed them. Their country was occupied and annexed by the Hungarians. The Carpathian Ukraine became again Subcarpathian Russia.

This disappointment was enormous in pro-Nazi Ukrainian circles. D. Lipinski, who had been in 1918 Skoropadski's minister to Vienna and who was later, in exile, his principal theorician, accused Skoropadski of "having sold for a couple of thousand pengoes the Carpathian Ukraine to the Hungarian Regent Horty." Skoropadski was, however, but a tool in Nazi hands and unable to express his feelings. Father Voloshin, his henchmen, and Dmitri Klempush, commander of the Sicheviki, fled to Rumania, cursing the Nazis who had betrayed them.

Two months later, however, the Ukrainian paper "Ukrainsko Slovo," published in Paris, reported that mysterious information, transmitted by mysterious agents, was reassuring pro-Nazi Ukrainian leaders.

And still a month later, on June 8, according to Polish information, Father Voloshin and two members of his ephemeral government, Julius Reval and S. Klochmak, visited the Wilhelmstrasse. When they left Berlin, Voloshin went to Slovakia and Reval to Bohemia, where they both resumed their pro-Ukrainian propaganda. They told their friends that Hitler's Ukrainian plans were postponed but not abandoned.

Events proved that they were right.

IN MARCH, 1939, Hitler liquidated Carpathian Ukraine, for he had by that time come to the conclusion that it would be necessary for him to make an agreement with Russia, in order to be able to carve Poland. The creation of Carpathian Ukraine worried Moscow more than it worried Poland. The liquidation of Carpathian Ukraine tranquilized Moscow and opened the way for an agreement with Soviet Russia.

As Hitler was, however, intending to resume later his Ukrainian projects, he kept in reserve not only Skoropadski and Andrey Melnik, but also other leaders of Carpathian Ukraine.

It is very problematical whether today, when he marches against Ukraine, he will restore Carpathian Ukraine. This little state is now a Hungarian province. The desire to assure the possession of Carpathian Ukraine may be one of the reasons for the Hungarian stand. But if Father Voloshin and his henchmen are unable to come to their native country, they hope to get from Hitler some job with other Nazi Ukrainians in the puppet Ukrainian state, which will be one of the first results of Hitler's conquest of Ukraine.

More Power For Defense

Meeting Emergency

A five-year plan to increase the Nation's power generating facilities to meet a possible war load, calling for expenditure of $1,750,000,000, received a go-ahead signal yesterday from President Roosevelt. The plan was advanced by the Federal Power Commission.

The project, which would increase by more than one-fourth the country's present capacity of 42,000,000 kilowatts, would be paid for mainly by Reconstruction Finance Corporation money, though the FPC hopes private funds also will be supplied.

Officials said the plan had tacit RFC approval and would shortly receive formal White House indorsement. It was laid before President Roosevelt yesterday at a full-dress White House conference of power experts, including Interior Secretary Ickes and Ben Cohen, former general counsel of the Power Policy Committee and more recently aide to Ambassador John G. Winant in London.

The record plan was framed to meet present shortages and the huge demand on power facilities that will arise by 1943, when defense expenditures will be running at the rate of $3,000,000,000 a month, triple the present rate.

170 Millions Yearly for Dams

FPC Chairman Leland Olds, who said after leaving the White House that his proposal had the President's indorsement, outlined the cost of the program as follows:

RFC would be required to advance not more than $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 a year to keep equipment companies producing turbine generators at full capacity. This investment would be self-liquidating he asserted.

A total investment of $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 a year would be needed for system stations. Olds expected this to come "largely from privates sources."

An outlay of $170,000,000 a year was asked for dams, power houses, reservoirs, etc., to be built by Army engineers, the Bureau of Reclamation, the Tennessee Valley Authority and other Federal agencies.

Among the steam-electric projects proposed for the preliminary program to create new generating facilities were the following in the Washington area:

Potomac Electric Co., Washington, new Blue Plains plant, 80,000 kilowatts to be completed in 1943, 80,000 in 1945, and 80,000 in 1946.

Virginia Electric & Power Co., new Petersburg plant, 40,000 kilowatts to be installed and completed in 1943 and 40,000 to be completed in 1946.

Huge Defense Drain

Emphasizing what officials regard as a dire power emergency, announcement of the plan followed by 24 hours President Roosevelt's request to Congress for authority to order a broad extension of daylight saving time.

The FPC said it anticipated a defense drain on power facilities of approximately 20,000,000 kilowatts, of which 11,000,000 kilowatts would represent displacement of normal load.

Nub of the commission's plan is to keep manufacturers of generating equipment at capacity operation for the next five years so that the country's power-output strength may be increased to the limit.

Primary responsibility for the placing of these equipment orders should be assumed by the Government through the RFC, said the Power Commission, which felt that "the time had come for the Federal Government to assume a larger share of responsibility for planning and financing" the additional generating capacity needed in the next five years.

Governors Respond to Appeal

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt's appeal for immediate steps to introduce daylight saving time in Southeastern States won quick approval from Govs. J. M. Broughton, of North Carolina; Frank Dixon, of Alabama, and M. M. Neely, of West Virginia. All indicated they would act promptly to change the standard time in their States.

Gov. Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, however, said he opposed the time change. Govs. Prentice Cooper, of Tennessee; Paul B. Johnson, of Mississippi, and Spessard Holland, of Florida, indicated they would await receipt of the President's letter before disclosing their decision.

Virginia's Governor James H. Price said he would consider the matter promptly. He has indicated a belief that legislative action would be necessary to set clocks ahead in the Old Dominion.

Those attending the power conference with the President yesterday included, besides Olds, Cohen and Ickes, the following: Abe Fortas, acting general counsel of the Power Policy Committee, FPC Commissioner John C. Page, Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, coauthor of the TVA Act, and Senator Stewart (Democrat), of Tennessee.

Looking Ahead

By Clarissa Lorenz

Slowness Of Naval Enlistments

THE NAVY DEPARTMENT'S report on the recruiting progress reminds us once more of Hitler's contemptuous statement that, "while the democracies think, we act!" According to Recruiting Officer Capt. F. E. M. Whiting, only 78,000 men have entered the regular Navy in the past fiscal year, and 29,000 enlisted in the reserve. This includes aviation cadets and reserve midshipmen. Of applicants under 21, 55 per cent are forbidden by their parents to sign up. And what is still more startling 45 per cent of all recruits so far have been turned down as physically defective. At this rate, who will man the $75,000,000 battleships for which America is being taxed so heavily?

The Government is now launching an eight-weeks' newspaper advertising campaign in the small towns of three States—Indiana, Missouri and Iowa. One of these States has a high rating, another is average, while the third is poor. This same procedure was carried out after the last war, when a naval force was required to transport our Army back from Europe. May the Navy Department's hope of entering 138,000 naval recruits in the coming year be realized!

There is no doubt but what the traditional six-year enlistment period frightens a great many parents and boys who have no wish to make the Navy their career. Recently, the Navy Department specified service for only the duration of war. However, Congress has now been asked for authority to retain all enlisted men in service for the duration of the present emergency. And this request is to be added to the pending bill requiring all future volunteers to agree to remaining in service throughout future periods of emergency. Enlisted reservists who have been called for a period of three years would have to remain in service until the present world crisis is over.

Senator Hiram W. Johnson, of Califonia calls such a proposal an infringement on private rights. Rear Admiral Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, replies, "Where the interests of the Government and individual come into conflict, the Government's interests must prevail. The best possible men to have in the Navy are those now serving in it."

NOW WHAT is slowing up the recruiting response? There are, of course, the reactionaries, whose patriotic temperature fluctuates with the war news. Between April 26 and May 3, while the convoy system was being discussed, there was a sharp drop in every section of the country. During this period only 140 men were recruited in the Southeast. Between May 3 and May 10, when Britain fought in Greece, there was another sharp drop. Conversely, after the second to last Presidential speech, the curve rose, as also during the public-school graduation period, from June 1 to 28. Other considerations affecting the downward trend were the aviation factory strikes, the Robin Moor sinking, the Syrian invasion, discussion of the Army draft question in reducing the age to 18, the closing of the German consulates in America, the O-9 disaster, and latterly the German invasion of Russia.

More realistic reasons for the poor response are given by those other than reactionaries. One is the need for farm help. There is a tremendous demand for unskilled labor now, particularly in the Southeast and within a radius of 100 miles of the various Army cantonments. The Government is paying high prices for farm products and farmers are ordering their boys to stay at home and tend to the crops.

But the primary reason is the belief that the present war will be fought on the ocean; that this time the front lines are the ships, and why should we feed our boys to the sharks? (As a matter of statistics, Great Britain has lost about 15,000 naval men and officers since the beginning of the war, whereas motorcar accidents in America alone killed off roughly 34,600 last year.)

HOWEVER, if these short-sighted citizens refuse to give their boys to the Navy, the present war won't be fought on any ocean. Such persons are inviting Hitler to cross the Atlantic and repeat his performance of pouncing upon a disunited, ill-prepared dormant country. We will be facing an invincible Germany. To keep our sons at home now will mean risking many more boys later on. Refuse them permission to enter the service today and they will have to be drafted tomorrow, thus constricting the training period still more. Perhaps only when the Nazis are actually bombing their houses and shops will these people admit that the time is at hand!

"We'll have no truck with this European mess," said Representative Hamilton Fish recently. Let's pull the bedcovers over our heads. Refuse to listen to the war news. Time enough when the Nazis start coming over here. This psychology is just what Hitler counts upon. These are the people who said back in the beginning, "Oh, it's not as bad as it's rumored!" And when convinced of their error, "Oh, others are taking care of it." Now even though all Europe is crushed, and the Middle East is being overrun, they are still loath to believe that their placid style of life will come to an end. War is still too remote and unrelated to their daily affairs, such as ordering meals and playing bridge. They dismiss such remarks as that of the legendary Nazi visitor who on seeing the last World's Fair in New York, said, "Not one concentration camp to be seen, and yet they call it the World of Tomorrow!"

"Until the American people show their capacity for total effort under one leadership," said Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina the other day, "we cannot fight totalitarianism!" Hitler has had seven years to prepare his beautifully trained army of four million. America has at present but 1,440,000 raw army recruits and 107,000 untrained naval men. Furthermore, remember that out of 230,000 applicants in the first ten months of recruiting, 108,000 were turned down because of defective eyes and teeth. Whereas the Army man is drafted automatically and ready for service after one year's induction, it takes three years to make a good man-o'-war's man. As a voluntary unit, the Navy is a measuring stick of patriotism. At present, it seems as though we are beating ourselves with this stick.

EVEN THE isolationists must realize that it takes three years to develop a navy, that as our two-ocean fleet units become available we need personnel to run them, and that a strong fleet is necessary for defense no less than for attack. While Wheeler and Lindbergh are saying "America First!" Hitler is saying, "America next!" The democracies are dealing with a militaristic race whose patriotism is emotional and objective. Germany's response to the battle cry has been universal because their brand of patriotism instinctively craves action. America, on the other hand, must try to blend her mixture of racial bloods and cope with a freedom of spirit, bred in the bone, that resents regimentation. The result is half-hearted, vacillating cooperation, a defense lag. The measure of our loyalty is the extent to which we are willing to exert ourselves now for national defense—to risk, to work, and to sacrifice!

Arms From Auto Plants

16-Cylinder Defense

Long doubtful of the wisdom or even possibility of converting the auto industry's machine tools and other equipment to defense purposes, the OPM has recently served notice that it will seek production of finished armament items from motor manufacturers in quantities enormously enlarged above past expectations.

Already loaded with $2,000,000,000 of defense contracts, the industry's executives, and, significantly, representatives of its union workers, were told by OPM officials yesterday at an industry advisory committee meeting to prepare for speedily fitting additional defense contracts into their present production lines and into new plants.

The policy decided on is a marked shift from OPM hesitancy some months ago to embrace the principles of the Reuther plan, proposed by Walter Reuther, C. I. O. Auto Workers official, for increased defense production in motor vehicle factories. At that time, it was indicated that the many specialized machine tools used in auto production were not readily adaptable for armament manufacture.

Marks First Step

Indications of the size of the untapped reservoir of men and machines which the OPM now sees in the industry were recently given by Defense Chief William S. Knudsen, who said that the auto industry might be obliged to take on three times its present load, pointing to possible contracts of $6,000,000,000. This compares with $3,000,000,000 as the total wholesale value of the industry's output in 1940.

A major problem discussed yesterday, it was learned, was the placement of defense orders in auto factories in suffient time and speed to hold present supplies of labor. If materials are curtailed, and defense orders sent to other areas, it is feared that serious labor dislocation problems will result both in the auto regions, where workers will lose jobs, and in the new defense locations, where sufficient skilled men may not be available.

The presence at the meeting of four C. I. O.-U. A. W. officials, including Reuther, marks the first step in the formation of a defense labor advisory committee, proposed recently by OPM Associate Director Gen. Sidney Hillman.

The plan, which calls for such a committee in each major defense industry, formed of representatives of the "predominant" labor union in the field, was vehemently opposed by one faction of the C. I. O. A meeting of 250 C. I. O. officials here 10 days ago, dominated by anti-Administration and anti-Hillman excoriations by John L. Lewis, former C. I. O. president, passed a resolution "opposed to the establishment of any more industry advisory groups."

The formation of the auto labor advisory group, plus information that the aluminum and rubber workers will also probably nominate committees, is said to indicate a general approval of the plan, despite the official C. I. O. resolution.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Army In The Hands Of Congress

THERE IS NOT the slightest ground for recrimination over Gen. Marshall's request that Congress should extend the service of the men in the Army. In enacting the Selective Service Act Congress expressly laid down the rule, as a matter of fact by amending the original bill, that Congress and not the President would determine whether the men should be held for more than 12 months. They can be held only when "the Congress has declared that the national interest is imperiled." In conformity with the law Gen. Marshall has now gone back to Congress.

LIPPMANN

The law, which now requires Gen. Marshall to ask Congress for new authority, is entirely in accord with the spirit and intent of the Constitution and with the traditions of liberty in the English-speaking countries. The ultimate control of the Army is the historic power by which the legislature opposes usurpation at home or wars of conquest abroad. This, rather than the somewhat academic and legalistic power "to declare war," is the effective power of the representative legislature in the whole process of war and peace. In reserving the right to say whether the Army authorized a year ago is now to be maintained, or reduced, or even in effect largely disbanded as an effective force, Congress was assuming a responsibility which in any free country ought to rest upon the legislature. The American Army is commanded by the President. But it can exist only by authority of Congress. What Congress willed a year ago has now happened: the future of the Army is in the hands of Congress.

ONCE THE MEMBERS of Congress have studied Gen. Marshall's testimony, there is little doubt that they will not wish to repeat in this crisis the errors of every other Congress in every other crisis in our history. This is the first crisis in which we have seriously prepared for war before war actually began and Congress, considering that there was an election in progress last summer, has already shown greater foresight and courage than any other Congress in any similar period in our history.

But if by any chance it now refuses Gen. Marshall's request, or subjects it to emasculating amendment or filibustering debate, Congress will be repeating the errors which in 1776 and in 1861, not to speak of 1812, caused immense unecessary sacrifice and very nearly led to disaster. The problem of the short enlistment, which now troubles Gen. Marshall and threatens to disrupt the whole Army, was the main military trouble which beset Washington in the Revolutionary War and Lincoln in the Civil War. Before any conscientious man ventures to oppose Gen. Marshall's request, he should read the history of the Army in time of war as set forth, for example, in Gen. Upton's "The Military Policy of the United States" and the recent book by Gen. Palmer on "America in Arms."

WASHINGTON'S Continental Army was composed of volunteers from the militia of the States and in the beginning Congress insisted that the Continentals should be enlisted for one year instead of for the duration of the war.

"Due to this folly," says Gen. Palmer, "it was necessary to train a new Army each spring . . . It was Washington's opinion that but for this stupid decision . . . the war would have ended in decisive American victory before the winter of Valley Forge."

What Washington thought of the 12-month enlistments is to be found in a letter to the President of Congress dated August 20, 1780. There is not space to reprint all of it though all of it is well worth reading today: "Had we formed a permanent Army in the beginning, which, by the continuance of the same men in service, had been capable of discipline, we never should have had to retreat with a handful of men across the Delaware in 1776, trembling for the fate of America, which nothing but the infatuation of the enemy could have saved; we should not have remained all the succeeding winter at their mercy, with sometimes scarcely a sufficient body of men to mount the ordinary guards . . . We should not have been under the necessity of fighting Brandywine . . . of seeing Philadelphia fall a prey . . . we should not have been at Valley Forge . . . There is every reason to believe the war has been protracted on this account . . . The fluctuations of our Army kept alive their (the enemy's) hopes and at every period of the dissolution of a considerable part of it, they have flattered themselves with some decisive advantages."

THIS SAME STORY was repeated, perhaps even more disastrously, in 1861. There were in the Army then about 200,000 volunteers for the term of three years and about 75,000 militia with a three months term of service. One can appreciate the feelings of Gen. Marshall today when one reads the following from a dispatch of Gen. Patterson, commander of the Army of the Shenandoah, on June 28, 1861: "I beg to remind the General in Chief that the period of service of nearly all the troops will expire within a month . . . The new regiments will not be fit for service before September, if then, and meanwhile this whole frontier will be exposed."

The disastrous and humiliating Battle of Bull Run, which very nearly resulted in the loss of the war, was almost certainly precipitated because the Army was melting away. It was certainly lost, because on the day of the battle "some of the volunteers and militia had been mustered into the service less than a month; the term of service of all the regiments of militia was on the eve of expiring." Thus, "discipline, the only sure bond of cohesion, was entirely lacking." (Upton, p 246.)

WITH THE RECORD of the past before it, with the position today set forth by Gen. Marshall, there should be no reason to fear that this Congress will refuse to do its duty in accordance with the responsibility it has expressly accepted. Unlike any other Congress, and to its everlasting credit, this Congress raised an Army to prepare for war before the outbreak of war. There is no reason to suppose that in the situation which now exists the Congress will listen to those who ask it to refuse to maintain the Army which it raised.

Cuban Cabinet Quits in Row On Patronage

Havana (Thursday), July 17 (AP). President Fulgencio Batista early today announced a new cabinet to be headed by Coalitionist Premier Senator Carlos Saladrigas. Former President Federico Laredo Bru was named minister of justice.

By the United Press

Havana, July 16.—The Cuban cabinet today tendered its resignation to President Fulgencio Batista.

An official communique said:

"The entire cabinet met in extraordinary session this morning under the presidency of Prime Minister Dr. Carlos Saladrigas Zayas for the purpose of considering means to facilitate President Batista's efforts to form a new cabinet. Following a brief deliberation, all ministers agreed to present their resignations which will be sent to the President this afternoon by the prime minister."

Informed sources interpreted the cabinet resignation as indicating that Congress has gained supremacy in its long-brewing fight against the administration. The crisis was reportedly precipitated not by policies of the government or legislative problems, but strictly by political patronage.

The friction began in June when the government dismissed several thousand public employes in all ministries and refilled these jobs with adherents of the social democratic coalition parties which swept President Batista into office in 1940. Members of the governmental majority in both houses openly expressed dissatisfaction with the distribution of these jobs and alleged that Batista's ministers had filled the posts with their own friends and left but a small percentage of the jobs for the constituents of pro-government Congressmen.

The crisis came to a head recently with the enactment of a decree curtailing government expenses and cutting public employe's salaries to enable the government to meet a budget deficit of over $7,000,000 at the end of the current fiscal year.

Henderson 'Invites' Hard Coal Men To Discuss Prices

Rising prices of hard coal, and threats of more increases to come, yesterday prompted Price Administrator Leon Henderson to issue another of his famous "invitations," this time to Pennsylvania anthracite coal companies, in an effort to hold down residential heating costs for millions of American home owners.

In asking the industrialists to confer with him tomorrow, Henderson noted that residential customers did not enjoy the usual seasonal price concessions this summer. Instead, they found an advance of 10 cents per ton effective June 15 and another 10 cents per ton rise last Tuesday.

Henderson said there were also indications of similar 10-cent boosts for August 15 and September 15.

D. C. Children Play At Virginia Camps

Several hundred Washington boys and girls between the ages of 8 and 12 are literally finding their place in the sun these days at fresh-air camps in the Chopawamsic Park area in Virginia, 35 miles from the District.

Among the camps are Happyland, operated by the Salvation Army from funds supplied by the Community Chest, and Camp Goodwill located nearby, supervised by the Family Service Association, and financed jointly with the Welfare and Recreation Association.

Daily at these camps under the guidance of trained counselors the city youngsters spend their time swimming and boating and playing games. Often they take overnight hikes into the surrounding woods or go on "cook-outs."

They live in clean log cabins and eat together in a large mess hall. Away from home the youngsters are said to develop terrific appetites and during their first week often gain an average of from one to one and a half pounds. Weight is watched carefully and the children are put on the scales every week. Those who show no gains go on a between-meal diet of milk and crackers.

Mrs. Maj. Charles Dodd, of the Salvation Army, is in charge at Camp Happyland and Frank Donnon, of the Family Service Association, heads Camp Pleasant.

Arrangement Adds to Charm Of Flowers

Midsummer Ones Now at Best For Decoration

By Martha Ellyn
Post Household Editor

DO YOU have a living room, a dining room or porch that would look more attractive for a spot of color? Perhaps the answer to that question at this time of the year is an arrangement of flowers straight from your own flower garden. It is surprising what charm can be effected through a clever arrangement of the common garden flowers now in bloom, as sunflowers, hollyhocks, zinnias and hydrangeas.

Martha Ellyn

We have all heard the remark, "but I dislike cutting my flowers for they spoil so soon." They will, it is true, if no thought is given to the cutting and subsequent arrangement of them.

Knowing and remembering a few "musts" about cutting flowers properly and arranging them correctly will aid materially in prolonging the beauty of cut garden flowers. Here are some suggestions to guide in their cutting and arranging:

Cutting—Flowers should be cut before the dew has gone and immediately plunged in a bucket of water. Don't arrange the flowers for two hours after cutting. Place in a cool place in cold water. Flowers will last longer if cut at the proper stage of growth, as asters when half-open; gladiolus when first buds open; roses when buds are somewhat soft; poppies when first bits of color burst through. If it is poppies, hydrangeas, heliotrope or hollyhocks you want in a flower arrangement, either immerse stems in hot water or sear in a flame.

Care After Cutting—If all leaves reaching below the water level in container are trimmed off, the water will not grow so foul. If water cannot be changed daily, place a piece of charcoal in vase to clarify water. When changing water, cut one-half inch off the ends, always cutting on a slant. As the stems grow shorter, change arrangement to appropriate height of vase or container.

Containers—Vases should be selected to conform with the kinds of flowers to be arranged. Use tall ones for long stems, shallow containers for ground cuddlers. Always use a container that will hold plenty of water. Wide necks allow flowers to breathe—flowers like people must breathe to live. Containers of such proportions should be used that they will not appear top-heavy when filled.

Arrangement—Don't crowd flowers. A single flower may look better than a crowded cluster. Lilies, gladiolus, phlox and similar flowers have such distinctive blossoms only a few are needed to achieve a beautiful effect. Flowers placed in front of a mirror give a "double" effect. Efficient holders to contrast the position of the blossoms will require fewer flowers. Midsummer annuals, as hydrangeas, look well in a vase set on the floor as their blooms look best viewed from above.

An instructive and beautiful presentation in color of effective flower arrangements by Laura Lee Burroughs, well-known for her ability as a flower arranger, is contained in a booklet published by a beverage company. This booklet gives suggestions for containers in which to arrange flowers, the equipment needed such as holders and chicken wire, as well as the blending of the arrangement with its immediate surroundings. This booklet may be secured for ten cents by writing to the beverage company.

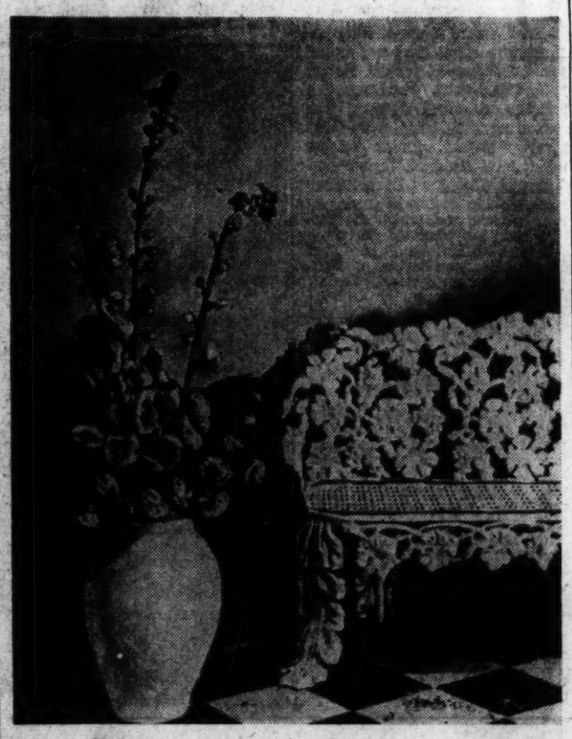
Zinnias and Marigolds

A combination of yellow and orange zinnias and marigolds blended in an old brass mortar with the pestle adding to the general curve is a pleasing flower arrangement to add colorful charm to many an unadorned spot in a home

Accent on Pink

A happy relationship exists between the delicate pink of the viburnum blossoms and large caladium leaves as they have been placed in the delicate shell pictured here. In lieu of this flower, similar blossoms can be substituted

Simplicity Personified



Double yellow and double apricot hollyhocks with a few single yellow ones and leaves of the verbascum make an effective floral arrangement for the porch floor or fireplace arrangement. The whitewashed pottery vase pictured here teams with the iron bench

Despite Their Mutual Love, Man Passively Resists Idea of Marrying Girl, Who Feels That She Cannot Live Without Him; She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Four years ago, when I was 19, I met a man (whom I shall call John) with whom I immediately fell in love,—without realizing the nature of my emotion or calling it by that name, at the time. He was someone I couldn't have,—because he was married. He was nice, friendly, well liked by everyone, and above all a gentleman. Long before I met him, he had stopped "living" with his wife, although they continued to share the same apartment,—because they were "keeping up appearances" for their parents, back home.

This is such a long story that I cannot give every fact in detail,—but I must ask you to accept my statement concerning his marriage as the full truth. He was not then in love with his wife, nor she with him. Even so, I cannot excuse myself for starting to date a married man. I had been taught it was wrong, I knew it was wrong and I did it anyway. I see my mistake now.

We were drawn together at once by common interests. Both of us loved sports, riding, etc. To show how naive I was at that time, I would always suggest that he first ask his wife to go to football games, etc., and "if she doesn't care to go, I will." I always went. Several weeks after we started going about together, I was offered a transfer out of town, which I took, thinking that would be the end of our association. There had been nothing serious between us. For seven months, I was 600 miles away from him,—and every day I received a letter from him; sometimes two and three. And I wrote to him every day, too. Love was never mentioned. They were just friendly recitals of the day's doings, containing newspaper clippings, excerpts from books we were reading, etc.

When I had been there five months, I had a letter from him saying he was driving out to see me. It scared me to death. Immediately I wrote back that he musn't come "expecting anything;" that he had better not come if he had an irregular "ideas." This amused him very much and he came anyway. He stayed five days and we had lots of fun. I was amazed and relieved to find that he really had no "designs" on me. But when the time came for him to leave, I told him we must part for good, and not even correspond. He agreed.

We kept our word until I returned to this city three months later, to take the position I now hold. Then we met again and from then until now,—a period of more than three years,—we have gone together steadily. Soon after my return, he and his wife had agreed on a separation and he had moved out. During this time, there have been intervals when one or the other of us has been in another city for several months, but these separations have never altered our feelings.

You may be wondering what is the problem? It is this: John will not get a divorce. His reasons are two. The first: His father and mother "back home" are very old and recently underwent a great deal of serious trouble, which has broken the health and spirits of both. (I know this to be true; for I followed it in his home town newspaper.) Then, too, his sister made an unhappy marriage and has just gone home to live, taking her small child with her. John says he cannot add to his parents' grief by letting them know of his unhappy marriage. And his wife, whom he rarely sees, "plays the game," too.

His second reason: He does not want to be tied down to a home and children. He wants to be able to come and go as he likes and not be answerable to anyone. I don't know whether I would want to be "tied down," but I certainly would like to be married to him. As things stand now, it seems I am giving everything a wife would give and have no security at all. (Writing things down makes them seem awfully harsh.)

I love him so much I think I would lose my mind if I lost him. I love his generosity, his good sportsmanship, his company and just him! I know I would die for him if need be. I have tried to give him up many times. But I have to give in when my mind feels as if it will snap if I keep up the strain. I have brought all my logic to bear, but to no avail. I can't stick it out. John loves me in his way, but he loves his freedom more. He tells me I will be the one he will marry—IF he ever marries again.

Without understanding it, he is always doing something to torture me mentally, such as refusing to explain where he has been,—when I happen to know he was out all night. He always tells me eventually, but never before he has worried me to the point of distraction. Also he has failed to keep dates, and during this past year, has been often irritable and cross, which he never was before. I do not nag or fuss at him. I spoil him, humor him, wait on him; am practically a slave to him.

I do not think we are mentally suited. I am very serious, basically, although gay and full of pep. He cannot express himself in words and when I try to talk things over with him I run into a blank wall. He just says, "Whatever you want to do——," meaning it is up to me to decide about going on or breaking off. He has said, however, that if I really want a home and peace of mind, he is not the person to give them to me, because he always will be just as he is now—and he is almost 35.

The question before me is this: Shall I go on, accepting things as they are and hoping for the best—and also hoping that I may suddenly meet someone who will make me forget him? Or try going on without him?—which I don't think I could do. We are as close as two human being could be, and it would be like tearing my soul out to give him up. I know he loves me, but not enough to give up his freedom. He will never love anyone that much. Please analyze the situation objectively and tell me what you think. I have a healthy respect for your opinions. Sincerely,
BARBARA.

Treading the Measure That Keeps the Balance

DEAR BARBARA: You may have John, on your terms, when you are able to demonstrate, to your satisfaction and his consternation, that you can live without him—as you can, of course; and, indeed, as you undoubtedly will find yourself doing, eventually, if you continue indefinitely knuckling under to his policy of passive resistance to marriage. Whether you would choose to go back to him, after having learned it is possible to do without him, is another question. It is rather to be hoped that you wouldn't; because a man of mature years who can be so ingratiatingly evasive (with the woman he professes to love) and so blandly deceitful (with his parents) will always be giving his nearest-and-dearest "the runaround," as a means of avoiding the pay-off for doing as he pleases—a course of action which has never yet resulted in "a good life" nor produced any of the fruits thereof.

You have found the strain of attempted renunciation too great to be borne, so you say. This is because you have brought a negative rather than positive attitude to the proposition. You have visualized the move as a leap from the frying pan into the fire; or, as a choice to be made between the devil and the deep blue sea.

You have overlooked the fact that it is futile to expect John to put a higher evaluation upon your society until you give a better account of yourself; and that what is wrong with you now, and with the relationship (which has lost its balance; has degenerated from a one-time happy comradeship into an ignoble, mutually fretting, master-slave sort of bondage), is your progressively craven surrender of your self-governing faculties, your gradual deterioration from a girl who once stood on her own feet and ran her life as she saw fit, to a broken-spirited creature who has abdicated her individuality, her separate "aliveness," to become the creeping shadow, the anxious reflex, of the man's personality.

In order to retain a vital tension, a resilient equilibrium in a love relationship, such as sustains reciprocal interest at pitch favorable to growth, it is necessary for one individual to move in unison with the other, emotionally—whether sometimes away from, or sometimes toward, the dead center of the full circle of their love. Unfortunately for your own peace of mind, the further John has moved away from this center, the more closely have you pressed after him and toward the center—thus throwing the relationship completely off balance. If you had trod a measure of advance-and-retreat that kept the balance, he would always have felt a need to "watch his step" in perpetuating your love and guaranteeing your companionship. Likely you would have had no problem of heartache to consider, because John probably would be diligently working his way toward the altar with you.

What to do now? Just gently wash your hands of the situation as it stands today, by suavely accepting John's terms in the manner he least expects and can least endure. You say that you cannot live without him—but it is written, "Men have died and worms have eaten them, but not for love." John says regretfully that you cannot live with him; that he doesn't like marriage. All right. That's the final decision—to date. So it seems you must live apart from him—and this is precisely the course you should elect, voluntarily and wholeheartedly, to follow.

Have done discussing the impasse with him. Indulge in no heroics of renunciation that may lead to importunate reconsideration. Don't tell him, or anybody, what your intentions are. Begin to grow away from him,—by starting, immediately, promoting activities, engagements, journeys, new acquaintances, perhaps a business transfer; anything and everything that will open for you new doors upon life, that will create new outlets for draining your time and thoughts away from him. Never again presume to check upon his absentee activities, and be noncommittal (but pleasantly) when he queries you about what you're up to.

Learn to keep yourself—your thoughts, your feelings, your purposes, your hopes and desires—to yourself. In such ways you will restore your lost "center of gravity to the self"—and when this is accomplished, John will have been robbed of power to break your heart. After that, you can take him or leave him, as circumstances and preferences dictate—and you will be tolerably happy either way.
M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

If You Like Whole Wheat Bread—Eat It

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU are accustomed to eating whole wheat bread and you like it, you may wonder whether you should switch to the newly enriched white bread. The answer is NO. Keep right on with the whole wheat.

Enriched bread is intended to take the place of refined white bread. It is a boon to the people who insist on refined floor products because they like the taste of the white bread.

But don't imagine it to be a better buy than whole wheat bread. You probably get some elements from the 100 per cent whole grain flour that are not furnished in the enriched white flour. The important thing is to choose a dark bread that is 100 per cent whole grain. Not all the bread that look like whole wheat is made from whole grain flour. It is appalling but true that much of this bread is made from plain white flour with a little bran mixed in for coloring.

Can't Beat Whole Wheat

Needless to say, the enriched bread is far superior to dark bread that is merely masquerading as whole grain bread. But it is not superior to the 100 per cent whole grain variety. Examine the label of the flours and cereals you buy to make sure that you are getting 100 per cent whole grain.

Most people prefer white flour for pies, cakes, biscuits, and you can and should make all these with the new enriched white flour to get as much Vitamin B and iron in the family menus as possible. When you use yeast, have it the newly fortified kind. You can't give your family too much of this vitamin.

Other Foods Needed

But you can't live by bread alone, not even though the flour and yeast are fortified with vitamins. Bread is no substitute for other necessary foods such as vegetables, fruits, lean meat, fish or fowl, and the dairy products. These foods are your richest sources of all the other vitamins and minerals, each of which has its particular role to play in nutrition. You cannot expect one vitamin to make up for the lack of the others. That is why so much stress is placed on the inclusion of the total list.

How to Remake A Not-So-Gay 'Nineties Room

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

IF THE WAR goes on and on, American home makers will have to get even better at making something out of nothing than we already are. For defense industries will undubtedly take over more and more factories formerly devoted to making not-quite-necessaries that added such a lot of color and pleasure to everyday life.

Mrs. H. R. C. is getting in practice now, for she writes about a bedroom she wants to get ready for her college daughter who has just graduated and is taking a job in the home town. The room is depressing, to start with—old furniture belonging to the nineties—you know, a high back bed, overpowering bureau with homely machine-cut trimmings.

Budget Is Low

This furniture has to be used somehow, but the room can be repapered, and she can buy a new rug if we can suggest something not too expensive. What curtains and spread? The budget is low—the work, including the wall papering, she will do herself.

The Answer: That type of bedroom furniture is the most difficult of any to pull out of its frowning gloom. But it can be done. First, the bed: take the footboard off entirely, then remove as many curleycues as possible from the headboard. Next paint this all white and decorate with fresh bright peasant flowers copied from the wall paper you select. Or if you aren't a hand for that sort of thing, then use cutouts from the wall paper, putting them on with wet shellac, then when dry, shellacking over the whole thing.

Rip Off Gawgaws

Then drape white dotted swiss from the top like a canopy, and make a white dotted swiss spread. The bureau will take essentially the same treatment—rip off all the gawgaws you can get off, then paint white and decorate with the bright little flower motifs.

Flowered wall paper, the same from which the motifs for bed and bureau were taken, would be pretty for the wall, then white dotted swiss curtains, made very full, and for the floor, stringy white bath mats, two or three sewed together if you like.

TERRIBLE TO DANCE with—the "he-man" who thinks its sissy to try to keep up with popular steps like the rumba.

Much as his partners like his broad shoulders, they wish he knew how easily steps can be learned at home! With diagrams, far from the public gaze, you can master all the dances you need to know. Then from the girls it's "You're a handsome brute . . . and a smooth dancer, too!"

Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt Visits at White House

Her Husband Expected Here This Week; Crown Princess Martha Due Tuesday To Help Dedicate Norse Embassy Unit

While Mrs. Roosevelt has been dropping in on members of her family scattered over New England, the President is enjoying a reunion this week at the White House. Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt has come up from her home in Texas to spend several days, and her husband, Capt. Roosevelt, is expected to join her this week.

Mrs. Roosevelt had a dinner meeting at the White House on Tuesday night with another Texan and a Texan-by-adoption. Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Chandor dined with her and the President in a foursome. Mr. Chandor's portrait of President Roosevelt hangs in the State Capitol in Texas, his wife's home State. He also did a painting of the President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, which she has installed in the newly dedicated library at Hyde Park.

Mr. Chandor will be in Washington about a month on his latest assignment, which is painting three portraits of a famous Texan, Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn. One will hang in the State Capitol, another will go to the Speaker's alma mater, East Texas State Teachers College, and the third will remain behind in Washington.

Another distinguished visitor due next week—though by now she's practically a full time resident—will be Crown Princess Martha of Norway. The Princess, who's summering at Salter's Point near New Bedford, Mass., will arrive here on Tuesday to take part in ceremonies dedicating a new building recently completed by the Norwegian legation.

The party will be a roof top affair, as the edifice has a flat roof. Broadcasting facilities will be set up there and the crown princess will speak. Mrs. Sumner Welles, wife of the Undersecretary of State, and the Norwegian minister, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, also will talk over the radio.

Diplomats, Officials Invited

Diplomats and Government officials have been invited to the function, which will be held from 5:30 to 7:30 Tuesday afternoon. Since the war the legation staff has so increased that at one point last summer offices were even set up in the living quarters of the legation. The Minister bought a house next door to serve as an office and also ordered the addition made to the chancery.

Crown Princess Martha is summering on the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Houghton, which she has leased until fall. Then she will return to Pook's Hill, former home of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Thorpe, near Bethesda, which the Norwegian government in exile purchased from the Thorpes.

Dr. Saralegui Arriving Today

Yet another interesting visitor, this one from below the Rio Grande, is Dr. Saralegui, who will arrive today from New York. An expert in radiology, he is here to study the application of radium in medicine and will probably give some lectures. The doctor was invited to the United States by the Division of Cultural Relations of the State Department. For many years he has been interested in this country and is a member of the board of directors of the Argentine-United States Cultural Relations Society. The State Department expects to entertain at a luncheon for him during his stay in Washington.

OUT-OF-TOWN NOTES: Mrs. Stephen L. Childs, blonde, blue-eyed Russian wife of the British embassy press counselor, is staying at the New Prospect Hotel on Shelter Island. Her husband joins her for weekends at the resort on Long Island Sound. Their elder son, 16-year-old Ivan, will soon enter Bishop's College near Quebec. Their younger son, Derek, aged 7, is at camp in Stoneham, Mass.

Mrs. Childs is looking forward to Empire Week in Washington, where she is active in the British War Relief Society. She will return to the Capital to help handle the posters and pins of Australia, South Africa, Canada, and other dominions of the Empire.

Miss Baer Wed To Mr. Fischer

At a 6:30 ceremony last evening in the Chinese Room of the Hotel Mayflower, Miss Carol Baer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Alphonse Baer, became the bride of S. Greenhoot Fischer, son of Dr. Melville B. Fischer and the late Mrs. Fischer. The Rev. Hugo Schiff, of Alexandria, Va., officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a basque-bodiced ivory satin gown which fell into a square train under a full-length veil which was held in place by a coronet of heirloom lace. Her only jewelry was a strand of pearls which had belonged to her grandmother. She carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. David Nathan, of Philadelphia, Pa., the matron of honor, was dressed in a short-trained frock of dusty pink silk jersey. Her coronet matched the shower of American Beauty roses that she carried. Miss Barbara Ann Baer, a sister of the bride, was her maid of honor and was dressed in an ensemble like that of the matron of honor.

The bridesmaids, Miss Molly Schwartz, Miss Rosa May Fischer, Miss Mary Fitzpatrick, of North Abingdon, Mass., and Miss Erna Israel, of Philadelphia, wore dresses made like that of the honor attendant in a pale pink shade.

Max Fischer served his brother as best man and the ushers were Wallace Luchs, Edmund Dreyfuss, Alvin Newmyer, jr., Milton Ney, jr., Richard Baer of Hollywood, Calif.; Gordon Levine, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Stanley Hahn, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mrs. W. F. George Is Honor Guest Of Mrs. Daniels

Mrs. Walter F. George, wife of Senator George, of Georgia, was honor guest at the luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniels. Also in the party were Mrs. George's two guests, Mrs. Gerry Green Busbee and Mrs. S. Milton Thompson, of Vienna, Ga. The trio left shortly after their luncheon for a whirl in New York City.

Other guests at the luncheon included Mrs. Josiah Bailey, Mrs. R. D. W. Connor, Mrs. Charles Tompkins, Mrs. Francis C. Brown, Mrs. Gale Johnston and Mrs. James Souby.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

THAT CONTROVERSIAL figure, the late Gen. William Mitchell, may be the subject of a biographical movie. His daughter, Mrs. Edward Trueblood, of Washington, is out in Hollywood for story conferences with Warner Brothers on her father's colorful life. She will return to her home here in about two weeks.

Dudley Harmon

The brickbats which were hurled at the general during his lifetime have become bouquets now that he is dead. Those who court-martialed "Billy" Mitchell for his frank criticism of his country's air force are now wondering if maybe he wasn't right after all.

For years the general fought for a single department of aviation "divorced from Army and Navy strings." "From a military and naval standpoint," he once said, "we are so far behind other powers, it's a crying shame, and we aren't making nearly the progress in commercial aviation we should be."

EVEN a Hollywood script writer could hardly think up a subject more colorful than that furnished by the general's life. Born in France, where his United States Senator father was vacationing, he grew up in Wisconsin. When the Spanish-American War broke out the boy left school to enlist as a private in the Fifteenth Wisconsin Infantry.

In the World War, the general was the first American officer to fly over the German lines. For his war time exploits in combat with enemy planes he was awarded the highest decorations possible, including the Distinguished Service Cross and the Croix de Guerre.

On his return to this country, he stunned official Washington with the announcement that he could sink any battleship with bombs from a plane. Though everyone was incredulous, an actual test was ordered and the ships were sunk.

After his courtmartial, the peppery general retired to Middleburg, Va. There he raised horses and became noted for his ever-present cane, double-breasted vest and binoculars. He died in 1936.

His daughter, Mrs. Trueblood, is married to a foreign service officer now on duty in the cultural relations division of the State Department.

ODDS AND ENDS: After outdoor luncheon yesterday at the A. W. V. S. canteen near the War Department, General Sherman Miles was leaving the grounds to return to his office. "Come back and put your paper plate in the garbage can," a woman called after him. It was all right, for she was Mrs. Miles, who works as a hostess there . . . Sitting around the State Department halls for the past few days have been the latest batch of embassy refugees. They are gardeners and window washers from our embassy in Paris, ordered to leave the country by the Germans. All are Americans, but many have French wives, and have lived there so long that they have difficulty with their English.

ONE BEARDED gentleman looks pretty much like any other, it appears. Rudolph Haybrook, who sports a handsome chestnut beard, was approached in the lobby of the Mayflower Hotel the other day by a stranger who asked belligerently, "Didn't I see you picketing in front of the White House?"

Haybrook explained patiently that he was not one of the anti-war picketers. He might have added that he is one of the least likely candidates for such an occupation—he's English, and a member of London's Auxiliary Fire Service. An artist by profession, he is in Washington to arrange an exhibit of paintings by his fellow fire-fighters at the National Gallery of Art beginning tomorrow. He hopes the pictures will give Americans some idea of what fire-blitz and the bombing of civilians really mean.

Awalt Brothers 'Induct' 65 Attending Novel 'Draft' Party

About 65 of the young set were inducted into Camp Awalt last night at a novel party given by "draft officers" Francis G. Awalt, jr., and Gilbert H. Awalt at their new home on Millwood Lane.

Reporting for duty in khaki or denim the selectees entered the house through a tent labeled "Camp Awalt" which had been erected at the front door. Once inside, signs directed the guests to follow the arrows to the place of registration. There vital statistics were taken and each registrant was issued a number, an identification card, and a ration ticket. Following instructions, the group gathered on the back lawn where a draft lottery was held, the results informing each selectee of his duties for the evening.

Two maneuvers kept the newly inducted army busy. Letters had been hung on trees and bushes in the wooded section off the garden. Guests were supplied with a box of matches apiece and instructed to search the woods until they found all the letters, then to decode the letters into the password which would entitle them to use their ration card for the picnic supper served on the lawn.

An international spy game with foreign agents stealing vital war plans from the camp was an up-to-the-minute version of the age-old "Cops and Robbers." Among last night's feminine inductees were Kathleen Bell, Marion, Peter and Laura May Norris, Courtney Prettyman, Jean Warren, Patricia and Mariana Kyle, Katherine Johannsen, Ellen Lee Snodgrass, Virginia Summers, Laura Belle and Jane Wyatt and their house guests, Jean and Emma Fensom of Richmond, Va., Jane Wideman, Elaine Trumble, Ruth Hall, Roberta Scholz, Suzanne Radcliff, and Barbara and Sybella Clayton.

A few of those from the masculine side of the ledger, and those that may sooon heed the real clarion call of the Army's bugler, were South Trimble, jr., Allen Jones, Charles and Thurman Hill, Frank Wideman, John Nicolaides, Richard West, Hobart Taylor, Cameron March, John Sands, G. B. Seibold, Hugh Willis, Martin West, Richard Radcliff, Kenneth Jones and his house guest, Ursula Bounds of Oklahoma, Larry Clayton, Lloyd Harrison, Joe Morgan and Charles F. Warren.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer

I resent Congressional gadgeteering for joint income taxes for man and wife. My home is no joint.

When I got married my wife was in the Follies but I was fair about it. I said, "we'll toss up a coin to see who keeps on working."

I lost. At that time I was a man-about-town and paid an income tax on anything I could borrow.

Now, I see that Congress is insisting that a married couple put all their eggs in one basket so the Government can grab the omelet.

If a man is smart enough to marry a smart woman why should Congress penalize him half the distance to the goal posts?

Now, this makes no difference in our family. The wife no longer punches a time clock even though she does take a punch at me once in a while.

Let's say a man is owner of a marble works. He marries a charming lady who is a doctor. She can certainly throw some business his way.

It's an ideal arrangement in a cottage built for two, with roses twining around the door and a little waterfall under the sink where the plumbing leaks.

But a heartless Government, with no more romance in it than a raise in rent, creeps into the Garden of Eden like a fiend on a motorcycle.

A fellow and a girl fall in love and have just enough money to get married on but not enough to stay that way.

They have promised to grow old and gray together. A heartless Government manages to do that to them in two weeks.

And that's my advice to you, too. Does a message from Garcia always have to arrive collect?

If you love the girl and she is working, why spoil a perfect arrangement? Ask her to marry you on behalf of the United States Government.

We shall close our little court of good will with the little love poem, "roses are red and so is ink."

Auto Club Head Promises to Fight Gas Tax Boost

A "last ditch" fight against a bill to raise the District gasoline tax 2 cents a gallon to finance the Whitehurst $44,000,000 highway improvement program was promised yesterday by John L. Vandegrift, chairman of the District board of the American Automobile Association.

Vandegrift protested that the bill, introduced by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee at the request of the District Commissioners, would place the entire burden of the program upon motorists.

"The Nation's Capital is unique among all cities of the land in requiring 100 per cent payment for its streets and highways by means of motor vehicle taxes," Vandegrift declared. "As a general rule, the motorist, as such, is called upon to pay only for main arterial routes through cities—that is, routes of general use."

Church Women Plan Refugee Aid Unit

A new Department of World Outlook will be formed in the Washington Council of Church Women, with one of its tasks to help refugee women here to make themselves at home, officials said yesterday.

Reorganization of the council's work, with greater emphasis on area teamwork, is being planned by a committee, conferring this week.

Heretofore the council has functioned largely through departments, it was explained by Miss Etta Mai Russell, executive secretary of the council. While the departments will continue, it is believed that their work will be strengthened by the organization of area units, she added.

For each of the 20 areas into which Washington will be divided a chairman will be appointed. In each of the 15 or 20 churches in her area, a key woman will be named. These representatives will form a "closer working unit" for each area, to study its needs and to work for solutions.

The departments—such as that on missionary work—will present their plans to the area groups for action, Miss Russell pointed out. In that way, it is expected that every church will have "vital contact with the program of the council," she added.

The reorganization committee is headed by Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, president of the Baltimore Conference of the Woman's Society for Christian Service, which includes Washington. Others at the committee conference were Mrs. J. Gould Wickey, Mrs. Charles G. Lueck, Mrs. O. B. Atwood, Mrs. George A. Ross, president of the council and Miss Russell.

The new department which will offer hospitality to refugee women will assist them to find places to live, Miss Russell said. Plans were discussed for their using the sitting rooms of the council's headquarters, 1749 N Street, for social meetings.

The council will begin its radio series, "What's Right With Washington?" at 9:15 a. m. tomorrow on Station WWDC. Mrs. Harold B. Rogers, radio chairman of the council, is in charge of the series.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

Mrs. Harold Stone wrote the long choral poem, "Win the Battle of Production" for the District League of Women Voters rally last night as an attempt "to articulate our emotions" on defense.

As program chairman for the local league's morale campaign, Mrs. Stone said she groped for a way in which to present the message in an additonal medium besides the speeches scheduled for last night.

One evening several weeks ago she couldn't sleep. The phrase, "Win the Battle of Production," kept drumming through her brain in a kind of machine-like rhythm. So she got up and wrote almost the entire poem—which requires 12 minutes to be recited—at one sitting between 1:30 and 4 a. m.

The refrain shaped itself thus: "More tanks, more guns, more planes, faster gains; tons and tons of guns, of guns; bales and bales of goods, of goods; Grade A American goods."

Within the next few days she tried out the poem on her husband and on her league committee. Their favorable reactions led her to do a little more polishing of the poem for public presentation.

A group of 25 league members started rehearsing the poem to be recited at the rally. Mrs. Stone had already done some work with choral speaking at a progressive school in New Orleans, where she taught.

She thinks that Americans, on the whole, have neglected the possibilities of choral speaking, which, she pointed out, is a democratic method of expression—speaking together and standing shoulder to shoulder. Since some persons do not sing, choral speaking offers a larger opportunity for their participaiton. In some parts of Europe, she says, choral speaking is better known than in this country, especially for expression of religious and social ideas.

A variety of influences went into Mrs. Stone's production of the poem. In addition to her work along that line in New Orleans, earlier during her own school days at the University of Iowa she did a good deal of writing, and she also listened to Carl Sandburg chanting to guitar accompaniment when he visited the university several times.

Soroptimists Plan Banquet

Soroptimist Club members met yesterday at an informal luncheon at the Willard Hotel to discuss plans for the banquet to be given Saturday night by the South Atlantic region in honor of Mrs. Jean Bennett, president of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs.

The banquet will be held at 7 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel, with Mrs. Loraine Leese Good, president of the local club, presiding. Miss Mary Bourke, past president, is chairman of arrangements.

Mrs. Bennett, a member of the local organization, recently visited clubs in the United States and Canada, conferring with members on defense activities. In her talks she urged that "the first line of defense is sound homes." She said that women eager to serve should seek opportunities through existing agencies and channels rather than looking for "something spectacular" to do.

Approximately 100 members, many of them from out of town, are expected to attend the "welcome home" buffet supper for Mrs. Bennett. Clubs in the South Atlantic region which will be represented are Washington, Baltimore, Alexandria, Arlington County, Montgomery County, Prince Georges County, Westminster.

Housekeepers Alliance Red Cross Unit Meets

The Red Cross unit of the Housekeepers Alliance held its first meeting in its new location yesterday—a workshop in the remodeled basement of the club's president, Mrs. Harvey Wiley, 2345 Ashmead Place Northwest.

Approximately 25 women gathered yesterday to celebrate the opening of the unit's permanent meeting place. Heretofore, they have met at Red Cross offices or in members' homes.

Women Flyers Discuss Role In Defense

The Washington chapter of Women Flyers of America held its monthly dinner meeting last night at the Iron Gate Inn, when members discussed informally how their training may fit them to serve in defense work.

Miss Anne S. Kinnie, organizer of the chapter and its chairman, presided.

Miss Kinnie, who is an assistant clerk stenographer in the Farm Security Administration, is assisted by Elizabeth Kelly, secretary, and Dorothy Carr, treasurer.

The chapter, which was started in February, now has 57 members, Miss Kinnie said yesterday. "The majority of them are business girls, who are paying for their own training. Included in the membership are beauty-shop operators, department store clerks, Government employees, stenographers, homemakers.

"Some in the group are beginning students, some have private pilots' licenses, and one or two have commercial license. One member teaches ground school at George Washington University," she added.

Brazilian Pianist Plays Tomorrow At Student House

Probe Feasibility Of Decentralizing, Randolph Urges

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the District Committee, yesterday told the House that he favored investigation of the feasibility of transferring Federal agencies from Washington.

Had he been able to be present Tuesday, Randolph declared, he would have supported the Sabath resolution calling for appointment of five members of the House as an investigative committee.

Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, has announced he will start hearings "some time next week" on bills to authorize President Roosevelt to transfer agencies "to Chicago and elsewhere." The author of the bills is Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Chicago.

Traveler Says Nazis Quell Riots in Italy

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Nw York, July 16.—Anti-Fascist riots have occurred frequently in many parts of Italy, and one minor revolution in Milan last winter reached such proportions that German troops were used to quell it, Maurice O. Boyd, retired travel agency executive, of Bloomfield, N. J., asserted today on his return from a two-year stay in Italy.

Boyd was one of 27 passengers from Europe who arrived aboard the Dixie Clipper. The clipper also brought 13 passengers from Bermuda.

Boyd attributed the rebellious mood to food conditions, which have been aggravated by the Italians' hatred of the swarms of German soldiers and civilians who have overrun their country.

"In my opinion," Boyd said, "fascism would be overthrown in Italy if it were not for the fact that no other leaders have appeared and that German guns support the present government."

"I am honestly sorry for the Italians," he continued. Their government sold the country out. Italy is full of Germans, in uniform and out, and I know that the Italian people hate them. The Italians do not want the war and have no spirit for it. There have been many anti-Fascist demonstrations and food riots—in Milan, Florence and elsewhere, all of which were put down by German soldiers."

Ernest S. Laird, Berlin correspondent for Time, Life and Fortune magazines for nine months, declared the German people, too, were apathetic toward the war and that the stringent censorship had made the country a "hotbed of rumors."

Laird said that the spirits of the German people were further depressed by their expectation that the United States eventually will enter the war against them. "To the youth it doesn't mean anything," he explained. "But for those who have been through the last war it reenforces the impression that Germany will win all the battles and lose the war."

Select Selectees To Dance Tonight With 30 Debs

The very select of Washington's younger society—30 debutantes—have been drafted as dancing partners for very select selectees who will draw the capsules at the national Selective Service lottery for 21-year-olds today.

Sixty or more selectees, chosen by the War Department to participate in the lottery because of their record in becoming noncommissioned officers in quick time, will be entertained at a dance tonight at the Hotel 2400.

In addition to the 30 debutantes, those present are expected to include subdebs and Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director of Selective Service; Chairman Reynolds, of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, and Chairman May, of the House Military Affairs Committee.

The dance is being arranged by the Junior Board of Commerce, whose members are expected to attend and see to it that the selectees are well entertained.

Trial of Nazi News Agency To Expose Propaganda Web

A propaganda web of the Nazi government which criss-crossed this Nation and stretched across South America, will be unraveled when Transocean News Service goes on trial in the District Court today.

Transocean, the American branch of a Hitlerized press service in Berlin, was indicted March 11 for not registering as a foreign agency.

Also indicted, but safe today on the high seas, were Transocean's chief officers, Dr. Manfred Zapp and Guenther Tonn. The State Department turned them loose on a "horse trade" to get four Americans out of German jails.

Although Zapp and Tonn got away, they left behind them the evidence and the effect of their work, which is scheduled to be exposed in detail to the jurors sworn in by Federal Judge T. Whitfield Davidson.

Special Assistant Attorney General George A. McNulty, chief of the prosecution, smiled grimly at the suggestion that the case might be dropped.

Corporation Can't Leave

"Of course Dr. Zapp and Mr. Tonn cannot be placed on trial if they are no longer here," he said, "but the Transocean company has been arraigned before the court and is still before the court. Fortunately, a corporation cannot "leave" the country.

"Transocean was accused in a separate indictment, returned after a long grand jury inquiry. There is no legal reason for dropping that indictment; consequently, the day set for trial having come, the Government is ready to proceed.

"Moreover, as a matter of policy, it could hardly be considered advanageous to abandon a prosecution commenced before a grand jury and, by doing so, give this same propaganda machine an opportunity to claim, before the people of Europe and South America, that it had somehow won a victory over the United States Government."

McNulty and his aides, Special Assistants Albert E. Arent and William R. Maloney, explored one phase of German propaganda in America last week, in their prosecution of Dr. Frederich Ernest Auhagen. Convicted of failing to register as a German agent, Auhagen was sentenced to eight months to two years in prison. His activities included lectures from "the German viewpoint" and starting the American Fellowship Forum, which listed 200,000 persons to receive the magazine, Today's Challenge, and other material.

Unfolding the story of Transocean, the prosecutors will trace a propaganda network leading directly to Berlin and the Reich propaganda ministry. The original German firm, Transocean G. m. b. H., was conceived in the German government in 1914 when the British cut the transatlantic cables.

Following the World War, this agency achieved standing as a reputable news service, which it retained until 1933, when Hitler came to power. Then Transocean was brought into line with the requirements of the Nazi Party, whose aims and purposes it was thereafter destined to serve.

The Government expects to show that from that time Transocean aimed its news at Central and South America, and that this news was thickly buttered with Nazi propaganda. Until 1938, Transocean distribution in this country was arranged by D. N. B., the official German news agency, and by the German Embassy in Washington.

Dr. Zapp came here in August, 1938, and reported to Berlin that the field was fallow for Transocean expansion. Three months later Tonn joined him to take charge of the news that went out of the American offices (which were at 341 Madison Avenue, New York and the National Press Building, Washington) to Berlin and to the American republics.

President Ordered Expulsion

The agency operated until a few weeks ago, when President Roosevelt ordered its expulsion from the United States.

Through Transocean, the German headquarters poured a stream of material from Berlin. This was offered and delivered to the many German language papers in America at low prices, or for nothing.

The "salesmen" who purveyed this economical service were no ordinary drummers. The Government expects to show that they were diplomatists from the consulates and the embassy of the Reich. They made the sale, collected the fees and sometimes paid the charges when the "subscribing" paper could not.

2d Division Invading D. C. For Reunion

Survivors of the Second Division, the American Army's shock troops of the World War began an invasion of Washington yesterday for the opening of their annual reunion today.

Approximately 1,000 are expected for the three-day meeting at the Willard Hotel, where the vets will hear a few talks and witness entertainments but mostly swap stories about fighting days in France.

The Second lost more men in France than any other American division. There were 4,419 battle deaths and 20,657 were wounded. But it also took 12,026 German prisoners, nearly one-fifth of the total captured by American troops, and seized one-fourth of all German artillery taken by American troops.

The division's wartime commanders, Maj. Gens. John A. Lejeune and James G. Harbord, are expected to be on hand for the reunion, which officially opens tonight with an entertainment and a concert by the Alexandria, Va., Veterans of Foreign Wars Band.

Tomorrow's program includes a sightseeing trip, a tour of Fort Myer, Va., where the cavalry is expected to put on a demonstration for the veterans, and an evening's entertainment to include a concert by the Navy Orchestra.

A business session Saturday morning will be followed by memorial services at 2 p. m. at the Second Division Monument, Seventeenth Street and Constitution Avenue. The Marine Orchestra will play for a banquet and dancing that night.

Peru Accepts Mediation Offer

Lima, Peru, July 16 (U.P.).—Peru tonight accepted the offer of the good offices of the United States, Brazil and Argentina in seeking a settlement of the Peruvian-Ecuadorean border dispute.

(Ecuador accepted a proposal last Saturday.)

Goering Expected To Appear Soon

Berlin, July 16 (U.P.).—Competent German quarters said today they were unable to reveal the whereabouts of Reichsmarshal Goering but assumed he will make an appearance in the near future "in connection with some official activity." Reports that he would make a speech could not be confirmed.

(The Moscow radio circulated reports that the No. 2 Nazi and apparent successor to Adolf Hitler has been in disgrace after a disagreement with Hitler over the Russian campaign and had been placed in a concentration camp.)

The Federal Diary

Attorneys in Justice Get Salaries Slashed

A group of Justice Department attorneys have had their salaries slashed. Several are reported to have been reduced as much as $4,000 annually. Cuts of $2,000 were frequent among the group. Affected were the special attorneys and special assistants to the Attorney General that were paid from the special attorney's fund. The special fund was reduced from $600,000 to $250,000 for the 1942 fiscal year that started July 1 and more than 50 attorneys paid by the special fund were transferred to classified jobs within the department. The large majority of the attorneys were classified downward.

Former Attorney General Jackson asked Congress to reduce the special fund which had been frequently used to pay off political debts of both Democrats and Republicans. The fund was originally set up to pay an attorney to do a special job on a temporary basis. Later attorneys were placed on it at handsome salaries to do the regular work of the department. Salaries paid special attorneys aren't fixed by the Classification Act. However, attorneys in Justice and in other departments will be reclassified when they are brought in under Civil Service after January 1. There will be plenty of salary adjustments when that happens.

Navy Department still hasn't authority to set up its civilian police force that would track down spies and saboteurs. . . . Federal employes living in Clifton, Va., are now permitted to dabble in local politics. . . . Budget Bureau employes have organized a credit union. Officers are Robert Rawson, president; Marjorie Russell, vice president; Louis Blaker, treasurer; Nita Gavaris, clerk, and John Corcoran, director. . . . Despite the howl the United Federal Workers are making, Labor Secretary Perkins has steadfastly refused to reinstate Helen Miller or give her a hearing on "Communism" charges.

MacLeish Makes Plea

Librarian Archibald MacLeish, of the Library of Congress has requested that his employes be brought under Civil Service through the Ramspeck Act. The Administration's plan is to cover the Library employes and others in the Government Printing Office, Botanical Gardens and other branches of the legislative branch.

The Oil Conservation Division is one of the smallest units in the Interior Department. It has only about 50 employes now. The division, however, may be built to upward of 10,000 employes if Oil Czar Harold Ickes finds out there isn't enough gas and oil for civilian consumption and orders rationing. . . . Alvin Wirtz, Interior Undersecretary who resigned to manage the Senatorial campaign of Lyndon Johnson, soon will be given another key Federal post. Friends are trying to find a spot for him.

Maritime Commission has informed its technical employes that their resignations won't be accepted without prejudice. This means that architects, engineers and other technicians must keep their jobs or else face the possibility of being barred from future Government employment. Army and Navy also have cracked down on their technical forces but not to the extreme taken at Maritime.

Employes naturally will be reluctant to resign under such a ban, but it's highly probable that the Civil Service Commission won't recognize prejudice resignations of the Maritime Commission or any other agency unless an employe quits abruptly in the middle of an important job or places the agency in an embarrassing spot by his resignation. However, if we become actively engaged in the war most all Federal workers will be frozen in their jobs and the hours will be longer. Skilled mechanics as well as typists and technicians won't be permitted to resign if that happens.

'Answer Is More Housing'

Thorough Study Is Promised On District Rent-Control Bill

At least one, and probably two, more hearings and "very thorough committee study" will precede action on any form of rent-control legislation for Washington, Chairman Jennings Randolph of the House District Committee, declared last night.

Randolph, also chairman of the Defense Subcommittee, heard arguments on both sides of the question at a hearing yesterday. He heard in favor of rent control:

Sidney Simpson, legal adviser to Leon Henderson, Federal price administrator and author of one of two bills the subcommittee is studying—"No one is charging that there has been extensive rent-profiteering in Washington, but, on the other hand, there is going to be a very great pressure for rents to go up and we want to lock the doors before the horses are stolen . . .

"The answer to rising rents is more housing, but there is a question in my mind (if the defense program continues to absorb increasing quantities of steel and other supplies) whether the day will come when there will not be the material available for building houses. I don't want to be an alarmist, but . . ."

Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, representing the Washington Housing Association—"The threat of rent-control legislation has been effective, temporarily, in holding rents fairly stable for the majority of tenants in Washington during the last six months. But tenants of low income, renting substandard housing, have been feeling the effects of the housing shortage for a year or more . . .

"In some cases, the violations of the building and health laws have been corrected, in others not even that has been done when rents were raised. Demand for low-cost housing far exceeds the supply. With newcomers arriving at the rate of about 200 a day and most of them about to receive incomes below $150 a month, the situation is becoming increasingly serious."

Opposed to rent control, Randolph heard:

Mrs. Ernest William Howard, of the District Federation of Women's Clubs—"Aside from the fact that no legal emergency exists, and the passage of such a (rent-control bill would curtail one of the greatest construction periods that Washington has experienced, there are other suggestions embodied within it that enable and compel us to believe that Washington is opposed to this kind of invasion of the American home."

An "Insult to City"

Mrs. Mary Wright Johnson, also speaking for the federation—"I think this bill is an insult to the city . . . We should not be disciplined for what they are doing in the rest of the country . . . Other parts of the country may need it, but we do not . . . Washington is patriotic."

Simpson appeared in support of a measure to give President Roosevelt, through an administrator, power to freeze rents "on some normal rent day" or to put a ceiling over them. The proposed legislation, he said, is "purely an emergency and purely a defense bill." Washington, he added, "is without question the No. 1 defense area of the country."

Foresees Profiteering

"Conditions here will lead to some profiteering," he stated. "Something of that sort is very apt to happen."

Simpson compared the housing situation in Washington today with conditions here and in New York in the last war. He declared:

"You just haven't got a normal rent market here and it is going to get worse. People have to come here with their work and they are

Mrs. Myrtle de Montis suggested that high-speed public transportation, such as a subway system would relieve congestion in Washington and resulting rent pressure.

Frank Lyon, Arlington County (Va.) builder, declared that rent-control legislation will discourage private investment in building and thus tend to restrict private building regardless of avalability of material. Lyon told Randolph that he has been associated in the construction of from "1,000 to 2,000 small homes."

Selects Ruled Immune From Hatch Act

Acting Attorney General Matthew F. McGuire ruled yesterday that the Hatch Act prohibiting political activity by Federal employes is not applicable to selectees and National Guardsmen ordered into active military service.

In an opinion rendered to Secretary of War Stimson, McGuire pointed out that the penalty for violation of the pertinent provision of the act is mandatory discharge from the Government.

"Therefore," he said, "application of the Hatch Act to persons ordered or inducted into the military service under the subsequent legislation would produce an absurdity. Under this subsequent legislation, service is compulsory and is required in the interest of national defense.

"If the Hatch Act were applicable, any such person, including perhaps one violating it in order to evade military service, could bring about his discharge, which is mandatory, by the simple expedient of making a political speech or filing as a candidate for office."

The opinion also held that: "It is not to be supposed that Congress in describing the scope of application of the Hatch Act to 'officers or employes in the Executive branch of the Federal Government or any agency or department thereof' intended to describe persons brought into the armed service of the Federal Government by legislation which was not in contemplation when the Hatch Act was passed and which requires their services not as 'officers or employes' of the Government in the ordinary use of these words in statutes dealing with the Executive departments, but calls for their services under the compulsion deemed necessary by the circumstances of national defense.

"It is rather to be supposed that the regulation and control of their political activity has been left by Congress for such action as may be deemed wise and within the powers of yourself (the Secretary of War) or of the President as Commander in Chief."

Cupid Has Bad Time Between Court and Draft

Carl L. Hoyle, 23, paid fines totaling $75 in Traffic Court yesterday and was released to report to the Marlboro draft board, actions which postponed his marriage to Laura Moore, 20, of 1115 K Street Northwest, at least for the time being.

An employe of the Civil Service Commission, the prospective bridegroom was on his way to be married Tuesday when his automobile figured in a collision with another car at Ninth and E Streets Southeast.

Hoyle was charged with hit-and-run, speeding and driving without a permit when he was finally brought to a stop near the Maryland line on Bowen Road Southeast. It was reported he drove between 60 and 80 to avoid capture.

Girl Forfeits $5

Miss Moore was charged with disorderly conduct when she allegedly used profane language toward Policeman C. H. Hagerty, Eleventh Precinct. She forfeited $5 collateral at the station house.

Judge John P. McMahon dismissed the no permit accusation when it developed the youth had a Maryland learner's license. He convicted the defendant on the other counts.

Hoyle explained to the court he was hurrying to Forestville to get married when the accident happened. He said he stopped and attempted to make his identity known but the other driver wanted to call police.

Would-be Groom Inducted

Judge McMahon ordered him to pay a fine of $25 or spend 25 days in jail for speeding and $50 or 30 days on the hit-and-run charge. After an investigation by probation officers, Hoyle decided to pay the fine and report to his draft board. He was inducted yesterday afternoon.

The couple said at court they had not been married Tuesday and indicated they did not know when the event would take place.

3 Badly Hurt In D. C. Area Auto Accidents

Three persons were seriously injured yesterday in Washington area traffic accidents. In the District, a 5-year-old child died at Gallinger Hospital as a result of injuries sustained in an accident last week.

Two Washington women were seriously hurt when the car in which they were riding was struck by a large truck on the Baltimore Boulevard near the Bladensburg Peace Cross in Bladensburg (Md.).

Miss Elizabeth Carter, 55, of 1228 G Street Northeast and Mrs. Frank Carter, 25, of 1242 Holbrook Terrace Northeast were taken to Casualty Hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad. Hospital attendants said last night that Miss Carter had a possible fractured skull, Mrs. Carter severe lacerations of the scalp.

Frank Carter, driver of the car, was slightly injured and was released after treatment at the hospital for cuts and bruises. The Carter's infant son was uninjured.

Prince Georges County police said last night that Merritt Dunbar, 21, of Mount Olive, N. C., driver of the truck, was being held on a charge of reckless driving by colliding. Dunbar stated that the machine driven by Carter turned from the Defense Highway into the path of his truck. He said that he did not see the car until too late to stop.

Patsy Swartz, 13, of Annandale, Va., was in critical condition in Alexandria Hospital last night after she was struck by an auto near her home. The auto was driven by Kathleen Witten, 23, Burke, Va., Fairfax police said.

The child suffered a fractured leg, abrasions and a blood clot in the back of her head.

Five-months-old Wendall Posey, Negro, of 219 M Street Southwest, died yesterday at Gallinger Hospital from pneumonia, which police said, resulted from injuries in an accident July 7 at Indian Head, Md.

D. C. Woman Dies After Testifying In New York Trial

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, July 16.—Mrs. Louise Williams, 45, a Negro, who said she lived at 2629 Sheridan Road, Washington, D. C., began testifying as a defense witness in a felonious assault case in general sessions today, became ill and died a few minutes later while seated in a chair outside the courtroom.

On trial before Judge John J. Freschi was Reginald Thomas, Negro, 41, of this city, charged with felonious assault in the stabbing of Patrolman Daniel J. Nolan in a Communist demonstration in 1936.

Mrs. Williams testified that at the time of the assault she was superintendent of three buildings nearby and that she was looking out of an upper window. She then turned to Judge Freschi and said she felt ill. He ordered a recess and Mrs. Williams walked to a chair at the entrance. Dr. Perry M. Lichtensein, medical assistant to the district attorney, attended the woman. She died soon afterward. Dr. Lichtenstein said death was caused by a heart condition.

Soprano Virginia Johnson Sings Tonight at Watergate

'Evening at Opera' Will Be Presented With Symphony

An unusually beautiful soprano with some unusual ideas about grand opera will appear at the Watergate tonight at 8 with the National Symphony Orchestra in "An Evening at the Opera" presentation.

She is Miss Virginia Johnson. Yesterday she expressed some of her ideas in a chat with newsmen at the Raleigh Hotel.

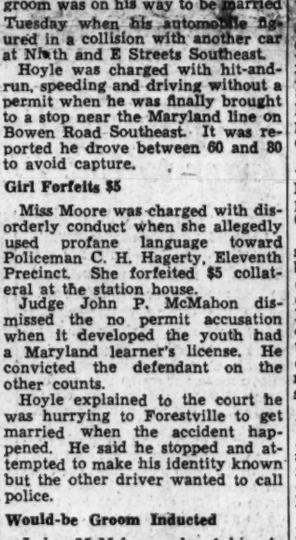
"There's one shameful thing about opera in this country," said brunette Miss Johnson. "That is that there are not translations into English of the European operas. Fine interpreters are needed to do excellent translations of the operas in order to make them more enjoyable to the American public."

Good music should be spread through the small towns, she said, recalling her own attempts in an "operas on tour" program which traveled through the East and finally was stranded in the South due to labor troubles.

"They're opera hungry in the South," she said. "We attracted huge crowds. The same thing definitely should be tried again."

The idea of traveling opera companies also interests her because she believes they would give many rising young American artists a chance which they may never receive in one of the country's four big horseshoes.

One of the chief causes of an artist's success today is a press agent, said Miss Johnson.



VIRGINIA JOHNSON

"The American public won't go to hear anyone they haven't read about in the papers or seen in the movies or heard over the radio," she said.

So Miss Johnson has a press agent. But it's hardly necessary for such a charming young woman whose record shows that she sings as well as she talks.

Air Scouts Build Glider As Training

More than a score of boys and girls, members of the Air Scouts of America, last night were at work on a glider at 1417 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, in an exhibition of their training for flight.

Building and flying of gliders is a part of the Air Scouts program which calls for the enrollment of air-minded youth in courses dealing with aeronautical subjects and having as ultimate goal winning of licenses to fly airplanes. The courses, aimed to cooperate in the defense program, are financed at local public schools on a expense-sharing basis.

Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, visited the exhibition last night and inspected the partly constructed wing and fuselage of the glider which Scouts will fly at some nearby airport when completed. In charge of the exhibition were James V. Wickham, chief Air Scout, and Harry J. Blutstein, instructor.

Mrs. Jordan Urges 1-Cent Milk For Needy School Children

By Gerald G. Gross

Post Staff Writer

Mrs. Lucian Jordan, health director of the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, strongly recommended establishment of a 1-cent milk program for undernourished school children yesterday.

Pointing out that nutrition will be the theme of the organization's health activities in 1941-42, Mrs. Jordan voiced confidence that the Surplus Marketing Administration will recognize the Capital's need for a "penny project," which would go far toward promoting sound health and good hygiene.

Meanwhile, the Consumers' Milk Committee revealed that it has written to Leon Henderson, federal price administrator, commending his stand against a price increase and urging that certain Health Department regulations be relaxed in order to lower production costs.

"Artificial Barriers"

"Artificial barriers" raised by the Health Department are partly responsible for the high cost of milk in this area, according to the committee. To abolish them, it added, would obviate a price increase "without reducing in any way the wholesomeness and safety of milk sold in this market."

Praising The Post campaign for 1-cent milk in low-income neighborhood schools and for extension of 5-cent quarts to families on WPA and on private charity, Mrs. Jordan said her group will do all it can to obtain a penny project for Washington.

P.-T. A. Distributes Milk

The Surplus Marketing Administration is now considering launching the plan here. It would provide free milk to at least twice as many needy children as are now being accommodated. Each half-pint bottle would cost the District only 1 cent, the difference in cost being borne by Federal subsidy.

For years the District P.-T. A. has administered milk programs in the various elementary schools. Many youngsters from poor families receive their half-pint bottles without cost through P.-T. A. assistance. However, several thousand are not provided for by either the P.-T. A. or WPA lunch programs, justifying the establishment of a Federally subsidized penny project.

Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard is expected to rule in a few days on the demand of organized milk producers for a cent-a-quart increase.

Suspended Labor Employe Seeks Board Hearing

Mrs. Helen Miller, Labor Department employe who was suspended two weeks ago by Secretary Perkins on charges of communism, categorically denied yesterday that she was a member of the Communist Party and requested immediate reinstatement pending a complete investigation of the charges.

In a 23-page answer to the charges, Mrs. Miller, an employe of the department for seven years and a leading figure in United Federal Workers Local No. 12, asserted that the communism allegations were a smokescreen "for Secretary Perkins' latest and most flagrant action in her long campaign of hostility against local 12."

Mrs. Miller asked that the charges be aired before an impartial board, and that she be faced with her accuser.

Priority Urged For Broadcasts On U. S. Defense

The defense committee of the National Association of Broadcasters recommended yesterday that the radio industry give priority over other Government broadcasts to those dealing with national defense.

After a two-day meeting, the committee said "governmental agencies had made so many requests for time on the air that many stations were finding it impossible to grant all of them and, at the same time, to preserve a balanced program service."

Priority in substantially this order was recommended: (1) Enlistment of manpower for both the armed services and defense industries. (2) Defense financing, such as the sale of defense bonds. (3) Morale building. (4) Activities of governmental agencies not primarily connected with national defense.

Thrown Cigarette Starts Awning Fire

A cigarette tossed out of the window was blamed last night for a fire that consumed an awning on the second floor, fourth wing, of the Munitions Building, Nineteenth Street and Constitution Avenue Northwest.

The flames were discovered by a guard at about 7 p. m. Four fire companies responded, but the flames had been doused when they arrived. Damage was estimated at $20.

'Gas Analyzer' Will Enable You To Save Fuel Oil

Substantial savings in the amount of fuel oil used in heating homes can be made by proper adjustment of the burner with an instrument known as a "flue gas analyzer," the Department of Agriculture said yesterday.

The department said this inexpensive instrument could be operated successfully by the average service man with a resultant saving of more than one-eighth of the amount of oil used.

"Since the vast majority of the two million house-heating oil burners are east of Alleghenies," said the department, "this new economy can be of great importance in solving a defense problem in the region where there is the most likelihood of an oil shortage.

Bustle of Planes and Men at Norfolk Illustrates Navy's Rapid Expansion Under Emergency

Training Progresses Amidst Turmoil Of Construction

By John O'Reilly

Norfolk, Va., July 16.—Rapid expansion of the Navy is reflected in every part of the Naval Air Station here. Planes awaiting issue stand in rows outdoors because hangars have not been completed to house them. Planes are moved into new hangars before the buildings have been entirely completed. Planes land on runways surrounded by steam shovels and construction workmen. In the large repair and overhaul area of the Naval Air Station hangars are crowded with many types of aircraft ranging from great patrol bombers to tiny fighter planes.

There are barracks which were put up during the World War. Officials of the Navy have been intending for some time to tear them down. But every time they get around to tearing them down they find the personnel has increased so much that they have to keep on using them. The top floor of the sick bay is used as quarters for officers. Old hangars which would have been torn down under the normal progress of events are filled with planes.

The more mechanized a force becomes the more shore bases it has to have. When an aircraft carrier moves in here from its patrol at sea its planes take off and come dropping onto the landing fields like migrant birds. As they come in they take their place in the landing circle. There are too many planes for each one to be brought in by radio. Instead there is an imaginary point 1,000 yards offshore and 1,000 feet high. Each incoming plane must pass through point X.

Training Continues Ashore

From that point the pilot can see whether the landing runway is clear ahead of him. Revolving lights on top of the control tower flash the number of the runway he is to use. A pilot also is supposed to lower his landing wheels as he arrives at point X. It may seem strange to a landsman, but it is difficult for a pilot to remember to lower his landing wheels. They have so many things to think of on landing. Planes are watched from the central tower as they come through point X, and if they don't lower their wheels they are notified by radio to do so.

Once ashore, the fliers from the carriers continue with their training.

Not a building on the construction list here is large enough to house these wandering birdmen on their visits ashore. Under construction is a large modern building of permanent design, with numerous facilities for their comfort. It will house 300 fliers.

The Navy's big patrol bombers come here for overhaul and repair. They drift down out of the sky and are hauled ashore to dwarf the smaller planes about them and the men who work on them.

Not long ago a wide connecting runway of concrete was built between the new and the old fields. It was put down in three days and now planes taxi along it from one field to the other. It also is used by automobiles and trucks and presents a strange appearance with this mixture of land and air traffic. On either side of it more construction progresses. Dominating a vast landing field of concrete is a partly finished structure which will be one of the most modern of control towers.

While all this activity is going on hundreds of young men are studying in the Navy's service schools to prepare themselves for repairing or overhauling guns, boats and planes. The Navy is proud of its schools. It feels that young men get better training in them for many professions than they could get in civilian life.

This correspondent entered the building housing the schools of electricity, ordnance, communication and clerical work. The most apparent aspect of the place was cleanliness. The writer was introduced to Chief Electrician Edward Stuart Tucker, No. 1 man on the Navy's list of warrant officers and director of the electricity and ordnance schools.

Tucker, a small man with an obvious love of his work, has been in the Navy 44 years. To him goes most of the credit for equipping the school.

Leading on a tour of the school he opened closet doors to show shelves where all sorts of ship's stores, spare parts and ammunition racks were stored just as they are on shipboard. He had collected these things, had them repaired and set up to teach his classes the proper methods of storing and caring for such things.

Most of these things were considered old and useless when Tucker found them. Now they look almost like new.

There were 759 men in the aviation, electricity, ordnance and fleet torpedo schools.

The Navy's equipment has become so specialized that it prefers to have young men enlist and train them to do the work the Navy requires. There are few places outside the Navy where they can be trained as the Navy wants them. It is for this reason that Navy officials say that Selective Service with a one-year enlistment would be of little help to the Navy. They say that a man can make only a small beginning in one year in the Navy . . . that it takes three years to make a man into a man-of-war's man.

Senate Unit May Vote Today On Altered Draft Property Bill

A modified version of the War Department's draft property bill last night was undergoing further revision for a possible Senate Military Committee vote today.

The latest draft of the bill, submitted to the committee by Wayne Coy, head of the Office for Emergency Management, imposed a two-and-one-half year time limit on the President's authority to retain private property requisitioned for defense.

The committee directed Coy to prepare a redraft of the measure in conference with Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Capt. Claud A. Jones, of the Navy Department.

The revised measure is expected to incorporate provisions of an earlier bill submitted by Patterson, limiting requisition to specifically defined military articles needed for the Army and Navy. Some committeemen urged also that it contain safeguards against disruption of business of legitimate nondefense industries requiring use of machine tools.

The Coy version of the bill submitted yesterday was reputed to have White House approval and was sponsored before the committee by Senator Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky.

While Chairman Reynolds called the measure "too broad," Senator Chandler said he thought a compromise acceptable to the majority of the committee would be worked out with little difficulty.

"It gives the President the authority he needs for purely national defense purposes, and it puts a time limit on his retention of property. I believe a bill along this line will be favorably reported by our committee."

Under the Coy bill, the President could requisition "any property" when its use is required for defense, when all other means of obtaining it on reasonable terms have failed, and when use of other property having equivalent defense utility cannot be obtained.

It provides for payment of "fair and just compensation." Whenever the President determines it is no longer needed for defense, the original owner if he wants it back, could regain it on payment of its fair value. In no event would the property be returned to an owner willing to pay its value later than December 31, 1943.

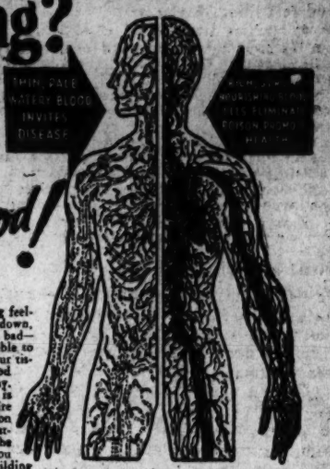
Is Thin Pale "Watery" Blood Keeping You Weak and Ailing?

THIS NO COST TEST PROVES IN 9 DAYS YOU CAN BUILD UP



Rich Red Fighting Blood!

No wonder you wake up in the morning feeling tired, that you lack energy, are rundown, always sick, complexion poor, digestion bad—if your blood is pale, wish-washy, unable to provide strength and nourishment to your tissues. Everyone knows good rich blood is important, but few people know why. Doctors will tell you that your blood is the most important organ of your entire body...that every minute, thousands upon thousands of red blood cells are circulating through your veins, performing the most vitally important job of keeping you alive. In addition to providing body-building elements to every tissue cell, your blood performs an important operation, acting as a carrier for oxygen from your lungs. Every day, millions and millions of body tissue cells are destroyed, repaired and rebuilt, and it is the oxygen in your blood that makes this possible. When body cells are destroyed, it is the blood that carries away the refuse, the toxic wastes. No wonder it is important to have rich red healthy blood.

What Makes Red Blood?

Many elements combine to give you nourishing red blood. Protein fats, carbohydrates, mineral salts, such as iron and copper, calcium, phosphorus, vitamins, and most important, mysterious blood-making elements which are found most generously in raw liver. Ordinary food provides many of these elements, but the most important ones are frequently insufficiently provided in your daily diet. After years of research, however, a way has been found to combine these important blood-making elements in small pleasant-tasting tablets known as Boncquet Tablets, which contain Red Blood Cell Maturing Factors (raw liver principle); Vegetable (Organic) iron and other minerals derived from vegetables especially fertilized and grown to insure a high natural vitamin and mineral content; Vitamin B complex which contains all the vitamins fortified with pure crystalline vitamins B and G; easily assimilable calcium and phosphorus. These amazingly effective blood-builders, devised and manufactured with painstaking care and with the utmost scientific accuracy, have produced results which, in doctors and clinics, have proven startling.

9 Day Test

In 9 days, Boncquet Tablets must show a sizable improvement in the quality of your blood, the way you look and feel, in renewed strength and energy, or the trial is free. Countless scientifically taken blood tests and clinical examinations have proven that in a few short weeks, it is possible for virtually anyone to increase the red blood cell count in your body by millions. Boncquet Tablets are absolutely harmless, have no ill after effects, can be taken with any other treatment, and remember, you don't risk a penny in trying it. Get Boncquet Tablets today.

Father of 12 Denied Army 'Vacation'

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 16.—Samuel Howard Isenberg, at 35 the father of 12 children, was disappointed today over receiving quick deferment from Army service because of his long list of dependents.

"It gets a fellow down sometimes when you gotta be around here all the time with all these kids," he said. "I really would have liked some Army training—I figured it would give me a little bit of a vacation."

Selective service board members in McKees Rocks stared at him when he turned in his questionaire. To list all his dependents, he had to attach an extra sheet of paper to it—and write small at that.

"They couldn't believe I had that many children," Isenberg chuckled. "But I finally convinced 'em. After all, I had proof home."

He said the board reacted like this:

"Wow, you've done your duty. You're excused—deferred."

The board said that so far as it knew, no other registrant in the Nation had reported so large a family.

Isenberg, a $190-a-month railroad employe, got married when he was 16 and his wife, Stella, 15. They now have these mouths to feed: Rosalia, 18; Dorothy, 16; Samuel, 15; William, 13; Audrey, 12; Theresa, 11; Charles, 10; David, 7; George, 5; Howard, 4; Eileen, 3, and Johnny, 17 months.

"And do they eat," he said. The grocery bill takes half my pay. It's pretty hard sometimes—but don't get me wrong—I wouldn't take a million dollars for any one of my tribe."

Although he'll remain in civilian life, Isenberg feels he's doing his bit anyway. Because of the rush of transporting defense orders, he said, he gets only every other Sunday off. He's a freight and yard conductor for the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad.

Auto Makers Seen Welcoming Order to Cut 1942 Output

By David J. Wilkie

Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, June 19.—How far curtailment of new car production in the 1942 model year will affect automobile use during that period is giving motorcar makers and retailers material for much serious thought; they are daily coming to believe more generally that production next year will be geared more closely than ever to actual requirements.

So far as restriction on use is concerned the manufacturers and merchandisers alike assert that such action automatically would cut off a source of large and important revenue to governmental units thr... out the land.

DiMaggio's 3 Hits Help Yanks Rout Tribe

CAN FELLER END DIMAGGIO'S STREAK?

Detroit, July 16.—The ball game of the year seems to be scheduled for this week. Events are rushing toward a rousing set-to at Cleveland on Friday. That will be the day when Bob Feller gets a shot at the consecutive-game hitting streak of Joe DiMaggio, barring the remote possibility that DiMaggio is stopped meanwhile.

POVICH

Feller vs. DiMaggio will be a pretty test of pitching vs. hitting. Of all the pitchers best calculated to stop DiMaggio, Rapid Robert would seem to be the man. The best pitcher in baseball will be facing the man who is probably baseball's best hitter.

DiMaggio already numbers Feller among his pitching victims on his 56-game streak, but Rapid Robert holds one decision over the Yankee slugger. He has held DiMaggio hitless in one of the eight games that has happened to DiMag this season.

Clever pitching, however, is no certainty to stop DiMaggio. On the day in Washington two weeks ago when it seemed that DiMaggio would go hitless against Dutch Leonard and fail to tie George Sisler's 41-game record, DiMag finally got his hit in amazing fashion. On a low outside fast ball that appeared to be the perfect recipe for an out, DiMaggio banged out his hit and more wondrous was it that he pulled the ball into left field.

Harry Heilmann, now a Detroit baseball broadcaster who used to hit big league pitching pretty well himself (he ousted Sam Crawford from an outfield job with the Tigers along about 1916), describes the DiMaggio-Feller encounter on Friday as no better than an even-money bet. "I'd bet even money either way," said Heilmann, "but I wouldn't lay a nickel's worth of odds. Feller can stop any hitter, and that DiMag can hit any kind of pitching, so you're right back where you started."

'Beautiful Flat Stroke' Does It

The man whom Heilmann had believed might stop DiMaggio during the past week is, strangely, a left-handed pitcher. "I thought Thornton Lee, of the White Sox, would be awful tough for DiMag with that side-arm curve he throws. Lee can cut a corner of the plate better than any man in the league and he doesn't give you much to hit at, but apparently DiMag doesn't need much. He got his hit against Lee early in the game."

The secret of DiMaggio's hitting, according to Heilmann, is his beautiful flat stroke with the bat." Heilmann was saying that "DiMag is always swinging on a line with the pitch and there's no better way to hit a baseball. Another thing about him, he's always ready. Watch some of these other hitters. They have their minds made up to take a pitch and stand there with their bats on their shoulders. Joe never takes any pitch until he sees it coming."

There isn't much debate that Feller throws the fastest pitch in the league, but generally overlooked is the fact that he can spin one of the league's best curve balls. What he will choose to throw to DiMaggio can scarcely be predicted. If DiMag had a weakness against any type of pitch, he wouldn't have hit in 56 straight games. But Feller's fast ball is ultra. That's why he stands a chance of stopping DiMag.

DiMaggio is getting a nice sort of break in his hitting streak inasmuch as pitchers are loath to walk him. With Charley Keller following him in the batting order, pitchers don't intentionally put DiMag on base, inasmuch as Keller is no less than the league's leading run producer.

A Walk Would Be Forgiven

However, if the occasion should arrive with DiMaggio at bat and a base open, Manager Roger Peckinpaugh could be forgiven for ordering DiMag walked even if it meant the end of the big slugger's streak. The Indians are still in the pennant fight and if they can lick the Yankees in any one game by walking DiMag, that would be excellent strategy and they would feel no compunctions whatsoever in throttling his streak with a walk.

Of the five men with the best chance to win the league's batting title—Ted Williams, Cecil Travis, DiMaggio, Jeff Heath and Ray Cullenbine—DiMaggio is Heilmann's choice to finish on top. "You've got to go along with a fellow like him," says Heilmann.

"I like DiMaggio," the former Tiger slugger was saying, "because he can get more different kind of hits than any of the others. He's big enough to knock the ball out of the lot. He can rocket 'em through the infield, he can knock the gloves off infielders' hands, and he's fast enough to beat out any hit they don't come up with cleanly. Besides that, he's got the best batting stroke of the lot."

HARKEN TO THE HOMERIC BATTLES

New York, July 16.—In the rush to thrill over the struggles of the Yanks-Indians and Dodgers-Cards too many of us are overlooking the grueling, Homeric battle between the Senators and Browns for last place in the American League. It's a pity, too, for tremendous imagination and ingenuity goes into the daily torments of this bitter rivalry for the cellar spot.

CONSIDINE

To give you some idea of what a prodigious task it has been for the Senators to dislodge the stubbornly inept Browns from eighth place it is interesting to note that Washington has succeeded in losing ten out of 11 games played this year against the Athletics. But, as of today, the Browns still held on heroically to last place by half a game, even though they had blundered into winning the final game of the recent three-game series between the two.

One of the largest crowds ever to stay away from the enthralling series stayed away from the recent clash of the titanic pueriles. Attendances announced by big league ball clubs are sometimes as fabricated and padded as the conflicting stories emanating now from the Stalin Line. So, when the Browns' management announced that a pushing, shoving, rabid, uncontrollable mob of 455 watched the third game of the Washington-St. Louis epic you may presume that perhaps 55 paid.

An Alphonse-Gaston Act

They saw Washington turn in a thoroughly memorable piece of inspired ineptitude. Faced with the distressing fact that they were on the verge of sweeping the series from the Browns, and thus on the verge of losing considerable face in that snobbish little futility clique whose kingpins are the Phillies, the Senators threw their most sensationally wild southpaw, Ken Chase, into the breech. He worked two and two-thirds innings, and into that short space he crammed two wild pitches, walked seven men, gave three hits and allowed five runs. The Browns, led by Shortstop Lucadello, fought doggedly to lose, but they couldn't match the fabulous star-crossed incompetence of the challengers. Lucadello's two errors went for naught, and only a half-game separated the Browns and the ignominy of losing their squatters' rights in the league's dungeon when the triumphantly beaten Senators marched off the field at the end of the struggle—their cheers echoing through the barren pews.

Let the planets pause to watch the battle of such Behemoths as the Yanks and Indians, Dodgers and Cards. We're following the closest and most exciting race of them all—a neck-and-neck epic that is being contested by those pure masters of the miscue, 24 lengths off the pace.

Lucky, Lucky Washington!

Tommy Farr is still poised in England, believe it or not, for the ferry plane that soon will deposit him in Lisbon. From that point he'll fly here for a British Red Cross bout to be staged in Washington under the promotion of Ray Alvis.

Plans for a Farr-Conn match are out, according to Jim Braddock, a part owner of Farr. Seems that Alvis has had a run-in with Mike Jacobs and, for the time being, will get no more of Mike's fighters. Besides, Conn will be busy the rest of the summer with his movie. Red Burman, who handed Tommy the fifth and final lacing of his first American invasion, has been suggested as Farr's Washington opponent.

Farr was cleaned out not long ago when a German bomb scored a direct hit on his Mayfair flat, destroying about everything Tommy had. He wasn't in the apartment at the time, of course. Since being mustered out of his preliminary R. A. F. training school because his eyes weren't good enough, and since being turned down by the regular British army for the same reason, Tommy has been touring different English cities and troop cantonments with a vaudeville skit. He is reported to be in fair fighting trim, and eager to have his Washington friends snip the last strands of red tape now binding him to England.

Speaking of physical failures, here's a pip. Our draft caught up with Sylvio Coucci, the excellent jockey who was about the best in the game a few years ago. He was inducted into a regular infantry job, and did his work very well. But after a while he began to long for horses again. He made application to be transferred to the cavalry.

There was a long delay, but finally word came back from officials' headquarters. The word was that Coucci had been found too small to ride a horse.

10-3 Victory Boosts Lead To Six Games

Clipper Gets Double, 2 Singles; Rosar, Keller Also Pace N. Y.'s Slugging

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 16.—Those red-hot New York Yankees put a 10-to-3 crusher on Cleveland today, booming their lead to six full games as Joe DiMaggio hit safely for his fifty-sixth straight contest.

Charlie Keller's fourth-inning homer over League Park's short right-field wall broke a 2-2 deadlock and sent the bombers on to their greatest margin of the American League season.

DiMaggio lost no time in keeping alive his amazing consecutive hitting streak, singling through the box in the first inning and adding a single, a double and a walk as the opener of the three-game July "pennant series" developed into a rout.

Krakky Slugged

The Yankees had only 11 hits off Starter Al Milnar and his successor, Joe Krakauskas, but they put them together so effectively that Atley Donald coasted to his fourth triumph of the season.

The first fireworks started with two down in the first inning when Tommy Henrich drew a walk. Successive singles by DiMaggio, Joe Gordon and "Buddy" Rosar accounted for two tallies.

Second-place Cleveland came back with one in its half on singles by Lou Boudreau, Ken Keltner and Hal Trosky and tied it up in the second when Ray Mack doubled and Milnar brought him home with a single.

It still didn't look bad for the Tribesmen after Keller broke the deadlock with his one-run homer in the fourth, but the 15,000 customers knew it was all over after the next stanza.

Rosar Scores Two

Milnar again got into trouble after two were out, this itme by walking DiMaggio. Gordon singled to center and marched along to second as the throw fruitlessly followed the Yankee clipper to third. Rosar then took advantage of the friendly rightfield screen to bounce a double off it.

Manager Roger Peckinpaugh ordered an intentional walk for Keller and that strategy exploded right in his face when Phil Rizzuto, who had gone out on weak infield bounders in his two previous trips, tallied both with an honest-to-goodness double down the leftfield line.

Krakauskas started pitching and succeeded in retiring DiMaggio on a grounder the first time he faced Joe, but permitted him to double in the ninth, starting the Yankees to two more unnecessary runs. Their other, in the eighth, came on Keller's triple and Hal Trosky's wild throw to third in an effort to get him.

While all this was happening, the

Nats-Tigers' Game Rained Out; Trout, HudsonHurlToday

By a Staff Correspondent

Detroit, July 16.—The Nats stretched their no-game streak to two straight today. One of Detroit's wettest rainstorms this morning washed out the scheduled game with the Tigers and the Washington athletes struck out for the movies.

Sid Hudson, originally scheduled to pitch today, will be the holdover pitcher for tomorrow. His opponent will be Dizzy Trout, rising young right-hander of the Tigers, who discarded his spectacles for the new-fangled eyeball lenses and suddenly began to pitch winning ball.

Senate Beer Wins, 2-1, Over Kavakos Ten

By Anne Hagner

Ray Grace, hard-hitting Kayakos Grill shortstop, was alternately the hero and the goat last night as his team dropped a 2-1 decision to Senate Beer in a hectic nine-inning "grudge" game. Grace's fumble in the ninth allowed Harrell, who had opened with a single, to score the winning run for the Beermen. Previously Grace had driven in the lone Kavakos tally.

Grace's disastrous fumble came as something of an anticlimax to a seventh-inning argument that nearly developed into a free-for-all. The trouble arose over a play on which Phil Fox, of Senate, scored from second on an overthrow to first. Fox singled, Harrell flied out and George Larrick walked to place men on first and second.

Woodward, next up for Senate, popped to Forami in short field, who attempted to double Larrick off first. The peg was wild and Fox, who had tagged up at second, continued on home. When Umpire-in-Chief Coleman ruled Fox's score legal, fans and players swarmed over the field protesting. They cited the rule that permits a runner to take the base he headed for and only one more on an overthrow. Coleman backed his ruling with the contention that Fox was headed for third and therefore was entitled to go home.

15-Minute Fuss

After nearly 15 minutes of undiminishing noise, Kavakos powers announced that as far as they were concerned, the game was over because they would not accept the ruling. As irate players stomped up and down, trading opinions on the whole situation, somebody on the Kavakos front evidentally convinced his fellows that all was well, so that the field cleared as rapidly as it had filled and the game went on into its two extra prearranged innings.

Senate, a slight pre-game favorite,

Officials Take Action to Cooperate With National Defense; Bogley Named Chairman

In consideration of needs of the national defense program, the President's Cup Regatta Association announced yesterday that the annual power boat races scheduled September 19, 20, 21 in the Potomac River have been canceled.

Impending for several months, the cancelation was decided upon after receipt of a communication from the District of Columbia petroleum conservation committee suggesting that the association take note of the campaign to obtain voluntary curtailment in use of gasoline and oil.

Coincident with this action, the association announced the appointment of R. Aubrey Bogley as general chairman of the 1941 regatta, which will go on as usual but without the power races which annually have been the featured events.

Bogley to Head Program

Bogley will head a program to carry out the many details incident to the resumption of the power races whenever possible, and at the same time supervise the swimming, sailing and other events on the current regatta card.

Announcement of the cancellation was made by John A. Remon, president of the association, who issued the following statement:

"It is with extreme regret that I announce the decision of the board of directors of the President's Cup Regatta Association to postpone for 1941 the power boat races of the President's Cup Regatta. Att the same time our association wishes to do its full share in support of any part of the national defense program.

"Our decision was reached after a prolonged and careful survey of the existing situation which resulted in the following conditions."

Part of Defense

Remon then pointed out that efforts to conserve gasoline and oil are a necessary part of the national defense program, and that the association felt it would not be in keeping with the spirit of the program to hold a motor regatta this year.

In conclusion, Remon pledged that the association in canceling the power races would lend its full support to its other activities, such as swimming, sailing and rowing competition, which several years ago became integral parts of the regatta.

Bosox Defeat Chicago, 2-1; Hughson Stars

By International News Service

Chicago, July 16.—Cecil Hughson, recently brought up from Louisville, today scored his third straight victory for the Boston Red Sox, beating Buck Ross and the White Sox in a hurling duel, 2 to 1.

Singles by Kuhel, Wright and Solters gave the local club its only run in the first inning, after which Hughson breezed to a four-hit performance against Ross' five-hit pitching and the Red Sox won out finally in the ninth.

They tied the score in the eighth on Appling's error, a sacrifice, a wild pitch and Williams' fly. In the ninth, the winning run was scored when Spence walked, advanced on a sacrifice and came home on Doerr's single.

32,265 Watch Cards Defeat Dodgers, 7-4

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, July 16.—The bristling, nervy St. Louis Cardinals smashed open the National League pennant race tonight with two loud blasts that beat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 7 to 4, before a crowd of 32,265. The Redbirds raged from behind with two runs in the fifth and five in the sixth after being held hitless for four frames by Whitlow Wyatt.

The bald, righthanded ace of the league leaders looked superb in those early frames, fanning six men, including Terry Moore, Johnny Hopp and John Mize in succession in the fourth.

His teammates looked equally unbeatable in getting him a run on three hits in the first inning and three more tallies on three hits in the fourth. But the courageous Cardinals simply bided heir time and exploded the game right open when the chance came, thus reducing Brooklyn's first place margin to three games.

Louis Disclaims In 'Ad' Any Other Debts but His Own

By International News Service

Chicago, July 16.—Friends who had expected World Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis and his wife, the former Marva Trotter, to be reconciled were less hopeful tonight.

A brief "personal" advertisement in the classified columns of a Chicago newspaper today changed their views. It read:

"Joe Louis Barrow, 550 E. 61st St."

The action was another surprise for Marva who also was surprised when Joe answered her recent divorce complaint by charging she had not been a true and dutiful wife. She said:

"I am surprised by this, but I don't suppose I should be. Anyway, the whole thing will be cleared up by Saturday, either by a reconciliation or absolute divorce."

In filing her divorce suit on the ground of cruelty, Marva charged that Joe twice hit her in the face and on the latter occasion also stepped on her ankle.

Man o' War Colt Scores At Suffolk

Foxbrough Runs Second, Royal Man Is Third Before Crowd of 25,000

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 16.—Samuel D. Riddle's comparatively inexperienced War Relic, 3-year-old son of Man o' War, surprised his aged owner and most of the 25,000 crowd today by not only winning the $50,000 added Massachusetts Handicap but also clipping a fifth of a second off the Suffolk Downs track record for the 1⅛ miles distance.

That upset victor, lightest burdened in the field of nine, romped home with three-quarters of a length to spare after fighting off William Woodward's favored Foxbrough in a stirring stretch duel, which brought him under the wire in 1:48 3-5.

As Teddy Atkinson, up on the victor, joyously waved his right arm, Royal Man, from H. A. Clark's Tower Stable finished in the show position, about three lengths in back of Foxbrough and two ahead of Louis Tufano's Market Wise.

Fenelon Is Sixth

Swing and Sway, from Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Stable, managed to close fast and gain the fifth and last slice of New England's largest turf purse. Fenelon, other half of Woodward's Belair Stud entry, was sixth and the trailers were Mrs. George Widener's Your Chance, A. J. Sackett's Tola Rose and Mrs. Whitey Abel's Honey Cloud, which set the pace for the first half mile.

War Relic, carrying only 102 pounds, was close on Honey Cloud's heels during the early running and assumed command when the latter weakened. Foxbrough, with a 122-pound impost and Jimmy Stout up, pulled up fourth and ran neck and neck with the surprising Man o' War colt until the last 70 yards. Meanwhile Royal Man and Market Wise were racing far ahead of the others.

"This is one of the greatest thrills I have experienced in racing," the 80-year-old owner of the the famous Glen Riddle Farm said as he entered the winner's circle.

"I am the most surprised man at this track, for I didn't think my colt had a chance in such a splendid field."

Had Won Four Races

Because of a back ailment, War Relic did not race as a 2-year-old, making the first of his 12 starts at Narragansett early this spring. He won only four previous races and up to today had earnings of only $4,310. While capturing the $48,350 share of the purse, the Riddle star rewarded his few supporters with $23.60, $9.40 and $5.60. The Belair entry, which closed at 2-1, returned $3.80 and $2.80 and Royal Man's show price was $4.80.

Perpetual Wins $10,000 Trotting Stake in Maine

Old Orchard Beach, Me., July 16 (AP).—Perpetual, brown colt owned and driven by Dr. H. M. Parshall, of Urbana, Ohio, today won the $10,000 National Stake at the Grand Circuit meeting here, finishing 2-1-1. Times were 2:04¾, 2:04¾, 2:06½.

The race, generally considered a preview of the Hambletonian two week hence, was for 3-year-old trotters.

Training Progresses Amidst Turmoil Of Construction

By John O'Reilly

Norfolk, Va., July 16.—Rapid expansion of the Navy is reflected in every part of the Naval Air Station here. Planes awaiting issue stand in rows outdoors because hangars have not been completed to house them. Planes are moved into new hangars before the buildings have been entirely completed. Planes land on runways surrounded by steam shovels and construction workmen. In the large repair and overhaul area of the Naval Air Station hangars are crowded with many types of aircraft ranging from great patrol bombers to tiny fighter planes.

There are barracks which were put up during the World War. Officials of the Navy have been intending for some time to tear them down. But every time they get around to tearing them down they find the personnel has increased so much that they have to keep on using them. The top floor of the sick bay is used as quarters for officers. Old hangars which would have been torn down under the normal progress of events are filled with planes.

The more mechanized a force becomes the more shore bases it has to have. When an aircraft carrier moves in here from its patrol at sea its planes take off and come dropping onto the landing fields like migrant birds. As they come in they take their place in the landing circle. There are too many planes for each one to be brought in by radio. Instead there is an imaginary point 1,000 yards offshore and 1,000 feet high. Each incoming plane must pass through point X.

Training Continues Ashore

From that point the pilot can see whether the landing runway is clear ahead of him. Revolving lights on top of the control tower flash the number of the runway he is to use. A pilot also is supposed to lower his landing wheels as he arrives at point X. It may seem strange to a landsman, but it is difficult for a pilot to remember to lower his landing wheels. They have so many things to think of on landing. Planes are watched from the central tower as they come through point X, and if they don't lower their wheels they are notified by radio to do so.

Once ashore, the fliers from the carriers continue with their training.

Not a building on the construction list here is large enough to house these wandering birdmen on their visits ashore. Under construction is a large modern building of permanent design, with numerous facilities for their comfort. It will house 300 fliers.

The Navy's big patrol bombers come here for overhaul and repair. They drift down out of the sky and are hauled ashore to dwarf the smaller planes about them and the men who work on them.

Not long ago a wide connecting runway of concrete was built between the new and the old fields. It was put down in three days and now planes taxi along it from one field to the other. It also is used by automobiles and trucks and presents a strange appearance with this mixture of land and air traffic. On either side of it more construction progresses. Dominating a vast landing field of concrete is a partly finished structure which will be one of the most modern of control towers.

While all this activity is going on hundreds of young men are studying in the Navy's service schools to prepare themselves for repairing or overhauling guns, boats and planes. The Navy is proud of its schools. It feels that young men get better training in them for many professions than they could get in civilian life.

This correspondent entered the building housing the schools of electricity, ordnance, communication and clerical work. The most apparent aspect of the place was cleanliness. The writer was introduced to Chief Electrician Edward Stuart Tucker, No. 1 man on the Navy's list of warrant officers and director of the electricity and ordnance schools.

Tucker, a small man with an obvious love of his work, has been in the Navy 44 years. To him goes most of the credit for equipping the school.

Leading on a tour of the school he opened closet doors to show shelves where all sorts of ship's stores, spare parts and ammunition racks were stored just as they are on shipboard. He had collected these things, had them repaired and set up to teach his classes the proper methods of storing and caring for such things.

Most of these things were considered old and useless when Tucker found them. Now they look almost like new.

There were 759 men in the aviation, electricity, ordnance and fleet torpedo schools.

The Navy's equipment has become so specialized that it prefers to have young men enlist and train them to do the work the Navy requires. There are few places outside the Navy where they can be trained as the Navy wants them. It is for this reason that Navy officials say that Selective Service with a one-year enlistment would be of little help to the Navy. They say that a man can make only a small beginning in one year in the Navy ... that it takes three years to make a man into a man-of-war's man.

Senate Unit May Vote Today On Altered Draft Property Bill

A modified version of the War Department's draft property bill last night was undergoing further revision for a possible Senate Military Committee vote today.

The latest draft of the bill, submitted to the committee by Wayne Coy, head of the Office for Emergency Management, imposed a two-and-one-half year time limit on the President's authority to retain private property requisitioned for defense.

The committee directed Coy to prepare a redraft of the measure in conference with Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Capt. Claud A. Jones, of the Navy Department.

The revised measure is expected to incorporate provisions of an earlier bill submitted by Patterson, limiting requisition to specifically defined military articles needed for the Army and Navy. Some committeemen urged also that it contain safeguards against disruption of business of legitimate nondefense industries requiring use of machine tools.

The Coy version of the bill submitted yesterday was reputed to have White House approval and was sponsored before the committee by Senator Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky.

While Chairman Reynolds called the measure "too broad," Senator Chandler said he thought a compromise acceptable to the majority of the committee would be worked out with little difficulty.

"It gives the President the authority he needs for purely national defense purposes, and it puts a time limit on his retention of property. I believe a bill along this line will be favorably reported by our committee."

Under the Coy bill, the President could requisition "any property" when its use is required for defense, when all other means of obtaining it on reasonable terms have failed, and when use of other property having equivalent defense utility cannot be obtained.

It provides for payment of "fair and just compensation." Whenever the President determines it is no longer needed for defense, the original owner if he wants it back, could regain it on payment of its fair value. In no event would the property be returned to an owner willing to pay its value later than December 31, 1943.

THIS NO COST TEST PROVES IN 9 DAYS YOU CAN BUILD UP

Rich Red Fighting Blood!

No wonder you wake up in the morning feeling tired, that you lack energy, are rundown, always sick, complexion poor, digestion bad—if your blood is pale, wish-washy, unable to provide strength and nourishment to your tissues. Everyone knows good rich blood is important, but few people know why. Doctors will tell you that your blood is the most important organ of your entire body...that every minute, thousands upon thousands of red blood cells are circulating through your veins, performing the most vitally important job of keeping you alive. In addition to providing body-building elements to every tissue cell, your blood performs an important operation, acting as a carrier for oxygen from your lungs. Every day, millions and millions of body tissue cells are destroyed, repaired and rebuilt, and it is the oxygen in your blood that makes this possible. When body cells are destroyed, it is the blood that carries away the refuse, the toxic wastes. No wonder it is important to have rich red healthy blood.

What Makes Red Blood?

Many elements combine to give you nourishing red blood. Protein fats, carbohydrates, mineral salts, such as iron and copper, calcium, phosphorus, vitamins, and most important, mysterious blood-making elements which are found most generously in raw liver. Ordinary food provides many of these elements, but this most important ones are frequently insufficiently provided in your daily diet. After years of research, however, a way has been found to combine these important blood-making elements in small pleasant-tasting tablets known as Boncquet Tablets, which contain Red Blood Cell Maturing Factors (raw liver principle); Vegetable (Organic) iron and other minerals derived from vegetables especially fertilized and grown to insure a high natural vitamin and mineral content; Vitamin B complex which contains all the vitamins fortified with pure crystalline vitamins B and G; easily assimilable calcium and phosphorus. These amazingly effective blood-builders, devised and manufactured with painstaking care and with the utmost scientific accuracy, have produced results which, to doctors and clinics, have proven startling.

Auto Makers Seen Welcoming Order to Cut 1942 Output

By David J. Wilkie

Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, June 19.—How far curtailment of new car production in the 1942 model year will affect automobile use during that period is giving motorcar makers and retailers material for much serious thought; they are daily coming to believe more generally that production next year will be geared more closely than ever to actual requirements.

Father of 12 Denied Army 'Vacation'

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 16.—Samuel Howard Isenberg, at 35 the father of 12 children, was disappointed today over receiving quick deferment from Army service because of his long list of dependents.

"It gets a fellow down sometimes when you gotta be around here all the time with all these kids," he said. "I really would have liked some Army training—I figured it would give me a little bit of a vacation."

Selective service board members in McKees Rocks stared at him when he turned in his questionaire. To list all his dependents, he had to attack an extra sheet of paper to it—and write small at that.

"They couldn't believe I had that many children," Isenberg chuckled. "But I finally convinced 'em. After all, I had proof home."

He said the board reacted like this:

"Wow, you've done your duty. You're excused—deferred."

The board said that so far as it knew, no other registrant in the Nation had reported so large a family.

Isenberg, a $190-a-month railroad employe, got married when he was 16 and his wife, Stella, 15. They now have these mouths to feed: Rosalia, 18; Dorothy, 16; Samuel, 15; William, 13; Audrey, 12; Theresa, 11; Charles, 10; David, 7; George, 5; Howard, 4; Eileen, 3, and Johnny, 17 months.

"And do they eat," he said. The grocery bill takes half my pay. It's pretty hard sometimes—but don't get me wrong—I wouldn't take a million dollars for any one of my tribe."

Although he'll remain in civilian life, Isenberg feels he's doing his bit anyway. Because of the rush of transporting defense orders, he said, he gets only every other Sunday off. He's a freight and yard conductor for the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad.

DiMaggio's 3 Hits Help Yanks Rout Tribe

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

CAN FELLER END DIMAGGIO'S STREAK?

Detroit, July 16.—The ball game of the year seems to be scheduled for this week. Events are rushing toward a rousing set-to at Cleveland on Friday. That will be the day when Bob Feller gets a shot at the consecutive-game hitting streak of Joe DiMaggio, barring the remote possibility that DiMaggio is stopped meanwhile.

POVICH

Feller vs. DiMaggio will be a pretty test of pitching vs. hitting. Of all the pitchers best calculated to stop DiMaggio, Rapid Robert would seem to be the man. The best pitcher in baseball will be facing the man who is probably baseball's best hitter.

DiMaggio already numbers Feller among his pitching victims on his 56-game streak, but Rapid Robert holds one decision over the Yankee slugger. He has held DiMaggio hitless in one of the eight games that has happened to DiMag this season.

Clever pitching, however, is no certainty to stop DiMaggio. On the day in Washington two weeks ago when it seemed that DiMaggio would go hitless against Dutch Leonard and fail to tie George Sisler's 41-game record, DiMag finally got his hit in amazing fashion. On a low outside fast ball that appeared to be the perfect recipe for an out, DiMaggio banged out his hit and more wondrous was it that he pulled the ball into left field.

Harry Heilmann, now a Detroit baseball broadcaster who used to hit big league pitching pretty well himself (he ousted Sam Crawford from an outfield job with the Tigers along about 1916), describes the DiMaggio-Feller encounter on Friday as no better than an even-money bet. "I'd bet even money either way," said Heilmann, "but I wouldn't lay a nickel's worth of odds. Feller can stop any hitter, and that DiMag can hit any kind of pitching, so you're right back where you started."

'Beautiful Flat Stroke' Does It

The man whom Heilmann had believed might stop DiMaggio during the past week is, strangely, a left-handed pitcher. "I thought Thornton Lee, of the White Sox, would be awful tough for DiMag with that side-arm curve he throws. Lee can cut a corner of the plate better than any man in the league and he doesn't give you much to hit at, but apparently DiMag doesn't need much. He got his hit against Lee early in the game."

The secret of DiMaggio's hitting, according to Heilmann, is his beautiful flat stroke with the bat." Heilmann was saying that "DiMag is always swinging on a line with the pitch and there's no better way to hit a baseball. Another thing about him, he's always ready. Watch some of these other hitters. They have their minds made up to take a pitch and stand there with their bats on their shoulders. Joe never takes any pitch until he sees it coming."

There isn't much debate that Feller throws the fastest pitch in the league, but generally overlooked is the fact that he can spin one of the league's best curve balls. What he will choose to throw to DiMaggio can scarcely be predicted. If DiMag had a weakness against any type of pitch, he wouldn't have hit in 56 straight games. But Feller's fast ball is ultra. That's why he stands a chance of stopping DiMag.

DiMaggio is getting a nice sort of break in his hitting streak inasmuch as pitchers are loath to walk him. With Charley Keller following him in the batting order, pitchers don't intentionally put DiMag on base, inasmuch as Keller is no less than the league's leading run producer.

A Walk Would Be Forgiven

However, if the occasion should arrive with DiMaggio at bat and a base open, Manager Roger Peckinpaugh could be forgiven for ordering DiMag walked even if it meant the end of the big slugger's streak. The Indians are still in the pennant fight and if they can lick the Yankees in any one game by walking DiMag, that would be excellent strategy and they would feel no compunctions whatsoever in throttling his streak with a walk.

Of the five men with the best chance to win the league's batting title—Ted Williams, Cecil Travis, DiMaggio, Jeff Heath and Ray Cullenbine—DiMaggio is Heilmann's choice to finish on top. "You've got to go along with a fellow like him," says Heilmann.

"I like DiMaggio," the former Tiger slugger was saying, "because he can get more different kind of hits than any of the others. He's big enough to knock the ball out of the lot. He can rocket 'em through the infield, he can knock the gloves off infielders' hands, and he's fast enough to beat out any hit they don't come up with cleanly. Besides that, he's got the best batting stroke of the lot."

HARKEN TO THE HOMERIC BATTLES

New York, July 16.—In the rush to thrill over the struggles of the Yanks-Indians and Dodgers-Cards too many of us are overlooking the grueling, Homeric battle between the Senators and Browns for last place in the American League. It's a pity, too, for tremendous imagination and ingenuity goes into the daily torments of this bitter rivalry for the cellar spot.

CONSIDINE

To give you some idea of what a prodigious task it has been for the Senators to dislodge the stubbornly inept Browns from eighth place it is interesting to note that Washington has succeeded in losing ten out of 11 games played this year against the Athletics. But, as of today, the Browns still held on heroically to last place by half a game, even though they had blundered into winning the final game of the recent three-game series between the two.

One of the largest crowds ever to stay away from the enthralling series stayed away from the recent clash of the titanic pueriles. Attendances announced by big league ball clubs are sometimes as fabricated and padded as the conflicting stories emanating now from the Stalin Line. So, when the Browns' management announced that a pushing, shoving, rabid, uncontrollable mob of 455 watched the third game of the Washington-St. Louis epic you may presume that perhaps 55 paid.

An Alphonse-Gaston Act

They saw Washington turn in a thoroughly memorable piece of inspired ineptitude. Faced with the distressing fact that they were on the verge of sweeping the series from the Browns, and thus on the verge of losing considerable face in that snobbish little futility clique whose kingpins are the Phillies, the Senators threw their most sensationally wild southpaw, Ken Chase, into the breech. He worked two and two-thirds innings, and into that short space he crammed two wild pitches, walked seven men, gave three hits and allowed five runs. The Browns, led by Shortstop Lucadello, fought doggedly to lose, but they couldn't match the fabulous star-crossed incompetence of the challengers. Lucadello's two errors went for naught, and only a half-game separated the Browns and the ignominy of losing their squatters' rights in the league's dungeon when the triumphantly beaten Senators marched off the field at the end of the struggle—their cheers echoing through the barren pews.

Let the planets pause to watch the battle of such Behemoths as the Yanks and Indians, Dodgers and Cards. We're following the closest and most exciting race of them all—a neck-and-neck epic that is being contested by those pure masters of the miscue, 24 lengths off the pace.

Lucky, Lucky Washington!

Tommy Farr is still poised in England, believe it or not, for the ferry plane that soon will deposit him in Lisbon. From that point he'll fly here for a British Red Cross bout to be staged in Washington under the promotion of Ray Alvis.

Plans for a Farr-Conn match are out, according to Jim Braddock, a part owner of Farr. Seems that Alvis has had a run-in with Mike Jacobs and, for the time being, will get no more of Mike's fighters. Besides, Conn will be busy the rest of the summer with his movie. Red Burman, who handed Tommy the fifth and final lacing of his first American invasion, has been suggested as Farr's Washington opponent.

Farr was cleaned out not long ago when a German bomb scored a direct hit on his Mayfair flat, destroying about everything Tommy had. He wasn't in the apartment at the time, of course. Since being mustered out of his preliminary R. A. F. training school because his eyes weren't good enough, and since being turned down by the regular British army for the same reason, Tommy has been touring different English cities and troop cantonments with a vaudeville skit. He is reported to be in fair fighting trim, and eager to have his Washington friends snip the last strands of red tape now binding him to England.

Speaking of physical failures, here's a pip. Our draft caught up with Sylvio Coucci, the excellent jockey who was about the best in the game a few years ago. He was inducted into a regular infantry job, and did his work very well. But after a while he began to long for horses again. He made application to be transferred to the cavalry.

There was a long delay, but finally word came back from officials' headquarters. The word was that Coucci had been found too small to ride a horse.

10-3 Victory Boosts Lead To Six Games

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 16.—Those red-hot New York Yankees put a 10-to-3 crusher on Cleveland today, booming their lead to six full games as Joe DiMaggio hit safely for his fifty-sixth straight contest.

Charlie Keller's fourth-inning homer over League Park's short right-field wall broke a 2-2 deadlock and sent the bombers on to their greatest margin of the American League season.

DiMaggio lost no time in keeping alive his amazing consecutive hitting streak, singling through the box in the first inning and adding a single, a double and a walk as the opener of the three-game July "pennant series" developed into a rout.

Krakky Slugged

The Yankees had only 11 hits off Starter Al Milnar and his successor, Joe Krakauskas, but they put them together so effectively that Atley Donald coasted to his fourth triumph of the season.

The first fireworks started with two down in the first inning when Tommy Henrich drew a walk. Successive singles by DiMaggio, Joe Gordon and "Buddy" Rosar accounted for two tallies.

Second-place Cleveland came back with one in its half on singles by Lou Boudreau, Ken Keltner and Hal Trosky and tied it up in the second when Ray Mack doubled and Milnar brought him home with a single.

It still didn't look bad for the Tribesmen after Keller broke the deadlock with his one-run homer in the fourth, but the 15,000 customers knew it was all over after the next stanza.

Rosar Scores Two

Milnar again got into trouble after two were out, this itme by walking DiMaggio. Gordon singled to center and marched along to second as the throw fruitlessly followed the Yankee clipper to third. Rosar then took advantage of the friendly rightfield screen to bounce a double off it.

Manager Roger Peckinpaugh ordered an intentional walk for Keller and that strategy exploded right in his face when Phil Rizzuto, who had gone out on weak infield bounders in his two previous trips, tallied both with an honest-to-goodness double down the leftfield line.

Krakauskas started pitching and succeeded in retiring DiMaggio on a grounder the first time he faced Joe, but permitted him to double in the ninth, starting the Yankees to two more unnecessary runs. Their other, in the eighth, came on Keller's triple and Hal Trosky's wild throw to third in an effort to get him.

While all this was happening, the

Nats-Tigers' Game Rained Out; Trout, HudsonHurlToday

By a Staff Correspondent

Detroit, July 16.—The Nats stretched their no-game streak to two straight today. One of Detroit's wettest rainstorms this morning washed out the scheduled game with the Tigers and the Washington athletes struck out for the movies.

Sid Hudson, originally scheduled to pitch today, will be the holdover pitcher for tomorrow. His opponent will be Dizzy Trout, rising young right-hander of the Tigers, who discarded his spectacles for the new-fangled eyeball lenses and suddenly began to pitch winning ball.

Senate Beer Wins, 2-1, Over Kavakos Ten

By Anne Hagner

Ray Grace, hard-hitting Kayakos Grill shortstop, was alternately the hero and the goat last night as his team dropped a 2-1 decision to Senate Beer in a hectic nine-inning "grudge" game. Grace's fumble in the ninth allowed Harrell, who had opened with a single, to score the winning run for the Beermen. Previously Grace had driven in the lone Kavakos tally.

Grace's disastrous fumble came as something of an anticlimax to a seventh-inning argument that nearly developed into a free-for-all. The trouble arose over a play on which Phil Fox, of Senate, scored from second on an overthrow to first. Fox singled, Harrell flied out and George Larrick walked to place men on first and second.

Woodward, next up for Senate, popped to Forami in short field, who attempted to double Larrick off first. The peg was wild and Fox, who had tagged up at second, continued on home. When Umpire-in-Chief Coleman ruled Fox's score legal, fans and players swarmed over the field protesting. They cited the rule that permits a runner to take the base he headed for and only one more on an overthrow. Coleman backed his ruling with the contention that Fox was headed for third and therefore was entitled to go home.

15-Minute Fuss

After nearly 15 minutes of undiminishing noise, Kavakos powers announced that as far as they were concerned, the game was over because they would not accept the ruling. As irate players stomped up and down, trading opinions on the whole situation, somebody on the Kavakos front evidentally convinced his fellows that all was well, so that the field cleared as rapidly as it had filled and the game went on into its two extra prearranged innings.

Senate, a slight pre-game favorite,

Officials Take Action to Cooperate With National Defense; Bogley Named Chairman

In consideration of needs of the national defense program, the President's Cup Regatta Association announced yesterday that the annual power boat races scheduled September 19, 20, 21 in the Potomac River have been canceled.

Impending for several months, the cancelation was decided upon after receipt of a communication from the District of Columbia petroleum conservation committee suggesting that the association take note of the campaign to obtain voluntary curtailment in use of gasoline and oil.

Coincident with this action, the association announced the appointment of R. Aubrey Bogley as general chairman of the 1941 regatta, which will go on as usual but without the power races which annually have been the featured events.

Bogley to Head Program

Bogley will head a program to carry out the many details incident to the resumption of the power races whenever possible, and at the same time supervise the swimming, sailing and other events on the current regatta card.

Announcement of the cancellation was made by John A. Remon, president of the association, who issued the following statement:

"It is with extreme regret that I announce the decision of the board of directors of the President's Cup Regatta Association to postpone for 1941 the power boat races of the President's Cup Regatta. Att the same time our association wishes to do its full share in support of any part of the national defense program.

"Our decision was reached after a prolonged and careful survey of the existing situation which resulted in the following conditions."

Part of Defense

Remon then pointed out that efforts to conserve gasoline and oil are a necessary part of the national defense program, and that the association felt it would not be in keeping with the spirit of the program to hold a motor regatta this year.

In conclusion, Remon pledged that the association in canceling the power races would lend its full support to its other activities, such as swimming, sailing and rowing competition, which several years ago became integral parts of the regatta.

Bosox Defeat Chicago, 2-1; Hughson Stars

By International News Service

Chicago, July 16.—Cecil Hughson, recently brought up from Louisville, today scored his third straight victory for the Boston Red Sox, beating Buck Ross and the White Sox in a hurling duel, 2 to 1.

Singles by Kuhel, Wright and Solters gave the local club its only run in the first inning, after which Hughson breezed to a four-hit performance against Ross' five-hit pitching and the Red Sox won out finally in the ninth.

They tied the score in the eighth on Appling's error, a sacrifice, a wild pitch and Williams' fly. In the ninth, the winning run was scored when Spence walked, advanced on a sacrifice and came home on Doerr's single.

32,265 Watch Cards Defeat Dodgers, 7-4

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, July 16.—The bristling, nervy St. Louis Cardinals smashed open the National League pennant race tonight with two loud blasts that beat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 7 to 4, before a crowd of 32,265. The Redbirds raged from behind with two runs in the fifth and five in the sixth after being held hitless for four frames by Whitlow Wyatt.

The bald, righthanded ace of the league leaders looked superb in those early frames, fanning six men, including Terry Moore, Johnny Hopp and John Mize in succession in the fourth.

His teammates looked equally unbeatable in getting him a run on three hits in the first inning and three more tallies on three hits in the fourth. But the courageous Cardinals simply bided heir time and exploded the game right open when the chance came, thus reducing Brooklyn's first place margin to three games.

Louis Disclaims In 'Ad' Any Other Debts but His Own

By International News Service

Chicago, July 16.—Friends who had expected World Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis and his wife, the former Marva Trotter, to be reconciled were less hopeful tonight.

A brief "personal" advertisement in the classified columns of a Chicago newspaper today changed their views. It read:

"Joe Louis Barrow, 550 E. 61st St."

The action was another surprise for Marva who also was surprised when Joe answered her recent divorce complaint by charging she had not been a true and dutiful wife. She said:

"I am surprised by this, but I don't suppose I should be. Anyway, the whole thing will be cleared up by Saturday, either by a reconciliation or absolute divorce."

In filing her divorce suit on the ground of cruelty, Marva charged that Joe twice hit her in the face and on the latter occasion also stepped on her ankle.

Man o' War Colt Scores At Suffolk

Foxbrough Runs Second, Royal Man Is Third Before Crowd of 25,000

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 16.—Samuel D. Riddle's comparatively inexperienced War Relic, 3-year-old son of Man o' War, surprised his aged owner and most of the 25,000 crowd today by not only winning the $50,000 added Massachusetts Handicap but also clipping a fifth of a second off the Suffolk Downs track record for the 1⅛ miles distance.

That upset victor, lightest burdened in the field of nine, romped home with three-quarters of a length to spare after fighting off William Woodward's favored Foxbrough in a stirring stretch duel, which brought him under the wire in 1:48 3-5.

Fenelon Is Sixth

Swing and Sway, from Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Stable, managed to close fast and gain the fifth and last slice of New England's largest turf purse. Fenelon, other half of Woodward's Belair Stud entry, was sixth and the trailers were Mrs. George Widener's Your Chance, A. J. Sackett's Tola Rose and Mrs. Whitey Abel's Honey Cloud, which set the pace for the first half mile.

War Relic, carrying only 102 pounds, was close on Honey Cloud's heels during the early running and assumed command when the latter weakened. Foxbrough, with a 122-pound impost and Jimmy Stout up, pulled up fourth and ran neck and neck with the surprising Man o' War colt until the last 70 yards. Meanwhile Royal Man and Market Wise were racing far ahead of the others.

"This is one of the greatest thrills I have experienced in racing," the 80-year-old owner of the the famous Glen Riddle Farm said as he entered the winner's circle.

Had Won Four Races

Because of a back ailment, War Relic did not race as a 2-year-old, making the first of his 12 starts at Narragansett early this spring. He won only four previous races and up to today had earnings of only $4,310. While capturing the $48,350 share of the purse, the Riddle star rewarded his few supporters with $23.60, $9.40 and $5.60. The Belair entry, which closed at 2-1, returned $3.80 and $2.80 and Royal Man's show price was $4.80.

Perpetual Wins $10,000 Trotting Stake in Maine

Old Orchard Beach, Me., July 16 (AP).—Perpetual, brown colt owned and driven by Dr. H. M. Parshall, of Urbana, Ohio, today won the $10,000 National Stake at the Grand Circuit meeting here, finishing 2-1-1. Times were 2:04¾, 2:04¾, 2:06½.

The race, generally considered a preview of the Hambletonian two week hence, was for 3-year-old trotters.

Mighty Phils Bow to Cubs At Night, 9-5

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 16.—The Chicago Cubs dropped the Phillies deeper in last place of the National League tonight with a 9 to 5 victory. Veteran Pitcher Charley Root, who started for the Cubs, helped with a homer as did Clyde McCullough, who blasted a four-bagger with two on in the third inning.

Root, who was relieved in the seventh but got credit for the win, chalked up the 298th triumph of his long career and his fifth of the season. He needs only two more victories to enter the 200 circle.

Getting away to a quick start, the Cubs nicked young Tommy Hughes for two hits and two runs in the first inning, and another marker in the second, Root's circuit blow.

The Phillies tied up the score in the second, getting three runs on doubles by Nick Etten and Tom Livingston and a single by Emmett Mueller, who batted for Hughes and drove in two runs, but went down trying to steal.

The Cubs bounced back in the third and got two hits and three runs off Rube Melton, who gave way to Cy Blanton to start the sixth.

Fort Meade Boxers Lose, Mathias Wins

Fort Dix, N. J., July 16 (AP).—The Forty-fourth Division boxing team overwhelmed an aggregation of fighters from the Twenty-ninth Division of Fort George Meade, Md., at the Post Arena tonight. The score was 6-1.

Bobby Byrnes, of the Forty-fourth, knocked out Ed Brazerol in the second round of their 126-pound tilt.

Only bout won by the Twenty-ninth was a technical knockout scored by Bob Mathias, former National Golden Gloves champ, over Charlie Yonteff, in the second, both 160 pounders.

Bill Brown, Forty-fourth Division, won over Steve Marquardt, of Twenty-ninth, also by a technical knockout.

Other results:

Heavyweight—Joe Bettina, Forty-fourth, won over Leo Stahl, Twenty-ninth.

The referee was Private Marty McGann, of the Twenty-ninth reception center, one-time trainer for former World Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock.

Featherweight Fights Top Oriole Card

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, July 16.—The muddled featherweight situation should be cleared somewhat at the double-header card at Oriole Ball Park tomorrow night.

Joey Archibald, of Providence, R. I., recognized world champion in New York and Maryland after his victory over Harry Jeffra, takes on local Challenger Lou Transperenti in a ten-round, non-title bout.

Chalky Wright, of Baltimore and Los Angeles, meets Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson in an other ten-rounder. Wright is No. 2 and Wilson No. 3 in the eyes of the N. B. A., which refuses to recognize Archibald's title claim. They'll be battling for the right to meet Archibald for his crown—if Transperenti doesn't upset the apple cart.

Joey Silva, of Mexico, and Pete Galiano, of Baltimore, are rematched in an eight-rounder with Billy Carrigan opening against Manuel Rosa in four. Silva won a disputed decision from Galiano in a fast fight which stole the spotlight from three heavyweights bouts at the first Squires-Laken outdoor show at the Municipal Stadium three weeks ago.

Palace A. C. Meets Arlington Dodgers

Palace A. C., winners of the first-half flag in the Washington-Virginia Night League, will get in second-half play tonight, meeting Arlington Dodgers at Ballston Stadium. Palace was scheduled to open the second half July 3, but that game as well as six more previous to last night's game between Gibson Grays and Village Motors, which ended in a 3-3 tie, were rained out.

Lefty McIntyre, the veteran southpaw, will start on the hill for Palace. Manager Russ Brown, of the fortified Dodgers, has nominated his ace, Hymie Inscoe to face McIntyre.

Pat Comiskey Sought for DeChard Here

Gabe Menendez, local matchmaker, yesterday started the ball rolling in the direction of a match either next month or in the fall between Jimmy DeChard, Washington's up-and-coming heavyweight, and Pat Comiskey, the big Irishman from New Jersey, who is considered one of the contenders for Joe Louis' championship.

Menendez announced he had sounded out Bill Daley, his friend, who manages Comiskey, on the possibility of having Patrick Edward fight the District scrapper, provided Jimmy comes through with flying colors in his eight-round headline bout next Monday night at Griffith Stadium against "Big Joe" Carilli, of Hartford, Conn., on the card honoring Joe Turner for his 35 years in sports.

Frankie Mann, DeChard's manager, is willing to have Jimmy fight Comiskey, despite the fact that Monday will mark the former Golden Gloves champion's fourth professional match. And Bill Daley told Menendez that he would be ready to talk terms some time next week.

"I've got a couple of fights lined up for Pat, and I'd rather wait until they're over before I make a definite decision," Daley said. "Right now I'd say there was a good chance of accepting the bout."

Comiskey recently knocked out Italo Colonello, the same fighter who was beaten easily by DeChard at the stadium.

Lew Viscusi, Joe Carilli's manager, said his heavyweight would report for local drills either today or tomorrow. When he shows up Carilli, who is Joe Louis' ace sparmate, will work at Turner's Arena. DeChard has been working steadily each night at Frankie Mann's gym, and is in razor-edge condition.

Matchmaker Menendez stated he had closed out for an eight-rounder between Richmond's Joey Spangler and Frankie Wills, of Washington. The other eight is between Oscar (Thunderbolt) Wright, local colored lightweight ace, and Justo Jiminez, Mexican star. Two other matches will be added.

Little Tavern, H. & J. Play 1-1 Deadlock

Little Tavern and H. & J. Construction Co. battled to a 1-1 eight-inning tie yesterday in a Post-Industrial League baseball game on the Ellipse.

Each team scored its run ih the third inning. Little Tavern's run spawned from Thomas' walk, a wild pitch and a passed ball. Singles by Jenkins and Jarboe, Pruitt's out and a wild pitch produced H. & J.'s tally.

Lefty Deavers pitched for H. & J., allowed 3 hits and fanned 9. Wheatley started for the Tavernmen and gave up five hits in 5 2-3 innings before giving way to Jennings, who finished and yielded 1 hit.

Hollywood Cup Entries In Workout

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles July 16.—Final distance drills by five eligibles for the $75,000 Hollywood Gold Cup Handicap Saturday drew interest of Hollywood Park turf followers today.

Edward S. Moore's Big Pebble, which has been coming up to form for the big race in easy stages, traveled evenly a mile and one quarter in 2:08 4-5, while Woof Woof, with a 2:06 2-5 drill, further spiked reports that he would stay in the barn Saturday.

No Competition, Mr. Grundy and Touch-and-Go also took to the track for workouts over the Gold Cup distance.

Probable starters in the race include the favored Mioland, Porter's Cap, Woof Woof, No Competition, Big Pebble, Sweepida, Barrancosa, Don Juan II, Mr. Grundy Touch-and-Go, Wing and Wing, Paperboy, Transient and possibly Staretor, winner of the Hollywood Derby last week.

Fort Meade's Nine Beaten By Fort Dix

Fort Dix, N. J., July 16.—Corpl. Walter Singer, former Syracuse University baseball and football star, sparked the Forty-fourth Division today to a 4-3 victory over the Twenty-ninth Division baseball team from Fort George Meade, Md. Singer's triple in the sixth inning set off a three-run rally. After his blow, the only extra base hit in the game, he scored on Kelleher's sacrifice fly to center. Najar then singled to left, and Maciolek walked. Danny Hayes singled to left scoring Najar. Maciolek scored as Lefty Hayes grounded out to short.

It was the second victory for the Forty-fourth in the two-game series with the Twenty-ninth.

Titlist Robert Clark Beaten in 2d Round of Publinx Golf

Medalist Jim Clark Victorious

Bill Korns Upsets Champion on 18th, 1-Up; Jim Shoots Sub-Par 67 to Win

By the Associated Press

Spokane, July 16.—Defending Champion Robert Clark, of St. Paul, was tumbled out in the second round of the National Public Links golf championships here today, as medalist and favorite Jim Clark, of Long Beach, Calif., advanced with difficulty.

Robert Clark bowed to Bill Korns, of Salt Lake City, 1 up, with Korns dropping a 6-foot putt for his victory on the eighteenth green. Clark missed one a few inches longer, the ball hanging on the lip of the cup.

Jim Clark, namesake but no relation of the fallen champion, was forced to card a 4-under-par 67 to whip Leslie Leal, of Bellingham, Wash., 1 up in the day's feature.

Clark was out in 32 and home in 35 against Leal's pair of 34s. The match was decided on the seventeenth when Leal drove to the rough and shanked his second to remain in trouble. He was short on his third, whereas Clark came out of the rough on his second and chipped past the cup 6 inches for a conceded 4.

Champion Loses

Ralph Hall, Oakland, Calif., shot 3 under par golf to defeat Jim Molinari, San Francisco policeman, 2 and 1.

Two former champions, Charley Ferrera, of San Francisco, and Andrew Szwedko, of Pittsburgh, were upset victims in quick succession. Loio Palenapa, of Honolulu, dumped out Ferrera, 3 and 2, and Pete Doll, of Louisville, took the measure of Szwedko, 3 and 1.

Mitchell Advances

Slim Art Pomy, bespectacled shooter from Detroit, kept up his winning streak by disposing of Bob Mort, of San Francisco, 1 up.

One of Hawaii's two entrants to reach the match play rounds, Charles Wilson, of Honolulu, batted out a 2 and 1 win over Charles E. Meyers, of Baltimore.

Thursday's third round pairings: (18 holes): Wilson vs. Pomy; Mitchell vs. Daniel; Anderson vs. J. Clark; Hall vs. Kerns; lower bracket—Welch vs. Tebaldi; Korns vs. McReynolds; Venick vs. Palenapa; Leptich vs. Doll.

Vander Meer, at Peak of Comeback, Looks Like 'No-Hitter' of Old

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Johnny Vander Meer, the Cincinnati Reds' southpaw who won fame in 1939 by tossing two no-hit shutouts in succession only to slip into the minors the following season, looked gilt-edged Sunday in blanking the Braves. It was his fourth whitewash job and eighth victory of the campaign. Here Vander Meer demonstrates his windup and follow through Toast of the Sandlots...

ARCHIE VIA

The fact that the two teams for which he plays rest at almost opposite ends of their respective league standings makes little difference in the batting record of Archie Via.

With Miller Furniture nine, which tops the Capital City A League, Archie is slugging at slightly better than .360. With the floundering O'Donnell's Grill club in The Washington Post-Industrial League he's right at .360. The impression gained is that Archie likes to hit that ball, and knows how.

When more perfect "doubles" for Jimmy Foxx come along, we won't believe it. Archie even talks like the famous slugger.

A rightfielder with both Miller and O'Donnell's, Archie came out of Washington-Lee High, in Arlington, with the score already favoring him. He had been coached by "Buck" Richardson, one of the ablest scholastic mentors in these parts.

At 28, Via looks back on no big-time baseball whatever. Probably the best team he ever played with, he thinks, was the Ballston A. C. of 1936. But he hasn't fallen short in the number of teams he has played with.

First it was the Arlington Midgets at 15 years of age. Then he performed with Lionel A. C., Ballston, Manassas, Leesburg, and the Majestics, to name a few. The black uniforms with which the Majestics supplied their players he calls the prime quality in his baseball career.

BILL BURNETT.

Witness States 3 Horses Were Not Doped

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, July 16.—Giving a clean bill of health to three horses, and expressing belief that at least four others had been given caffeine, Dr. Chancey D. Leake, of the University of California, testified as a star witness today in the California Horse Race Board's horse-stimulating investigation.

Dr. Leake said he believed there was nothing to support suspicion that the horses Painted Veil, Challomine and Baby Rattler had been given caffeine.

The three are owned, respectively, by Film Executive Louis B. Mayer, of Hollywood; William L. Brann, of Maryland, and Mrs. Glen Gravatt, of Los Angeles.

Leake, called in by Gov. Culbert L. Ilson to head a board of experts helping with the inquiry, testified there was definite reason to believe that Kekawaka, Neddie Boy, Brown China and Mulligatawney had been given caffeine.

There was a reasonable certainty, he continued, that the same was true of the horses Linum and El Cabrillo.

In a blanket summary of his findings, Dr. Leake said that in none of the nine cases was there "the highest certainty of caffeine stimulation."

Former U. of Richmond Hurler Joins Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., July 15.—Charles Miller, former University of Richmond pitcher, has joined the Hagerstown Club, of the Interstate League, which now is leading the league with a 2½-game margin.

Houghton and Gibson Tie for Golf Honors

Pros Deadlock in Sweepstakes, Pro-Am; Both Shoot Sub-Par 67; Burnett Scores

Al Houghton and Andy Gibson, two star pro shotmakers from Beaver Dam and Bonnie View, respectively, staged a sub-par exhibition to feature the Maryland State pro-amateur tournament yesterday at Manor, trying in the pro sweepstakes and the pro-amateur.

Gibson's round of 67, three under par, included an out nine of 30, five under par, and a back nine of 37, while Houghton played the first nine in 32 strokes and after a bad start coming back finished with a regulation 35 for his 67.

Volney Burnett, the Maryland State Amateur champion, competed only in the simon-pure sweepstakes and romped home in 69 strokes, including a back nine of six pars and three birdies for a 32, to win gross and net, the latter with 69-3, 66.

Three-Way Tie for First

Gibson figured in a three-way tie for first in the pro-amateur with two partners from his Baltimore Club, Bob Albertus, the Maryland amateur finalist, and L. B. Passano, with 30, 34—64, and 29, 35—64, respectively. Houghton and Merrell Whittlesey, of the host club, completed the deadlock with 30, 34—64. Each of the amateurs helped his pro partner by three shots.

Both Houghton and Gibson ran into trouble on the first two holes of the back nine, starting with a bogey 5 on 10 and bogey 4 on 11. Gibson had dropped three birdie putts and chipped in for an eagle 3 on the ninth for an outgoing 30, while Houghton had six pars and a birdie for 32. The latter regained his strokes with two more birdies while Gibson got one back on the thirteenth with a birdie 3 and then 3-putted the eighteenth from 10 feet as his putt for a 65 was too bold and he missed coming back.

Houghton and Chick Heimer, Beaver Dam, won fourth prize in the pro-amateur with a best ball 65 while Mel Shorey, the Indian Spring pro who has quite a streak of consecutive money-winning performances, was third in the pro sweeps with a pair of 36s for a 72.

Brownell Wins Gross Honors

Bobby Brownell, the amateur hotshot from the host club, won gross honors with a 73, from nines of 39 and 34, as Burnett was awarded low net.

John Brooks, Burning Tree, won second low with a 77, 10—67, despite a 4-over-par finish on the last two holes when he had par for a 73 on the seventeenth tee. Dr. J. G. Reilly, of Manor, won third net with 38, 43—81—13—68, and Tom Carrick, Bonnie View, fourth with 77, 7—70, winning in a draw over George Vass, Kenwood, 76, 6—70, and W. G. McCreery, Manor, 78, 8—70.

Vass and Ralph Bogart tied for second low gross with 76s each.

All-Stars Beat Minneapolis By 6-1 Score

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, July 16.—The American Association All-Stars defeated the host team, Minneapolis, 6-1, before an overflow crowd of 11,000 tonight. Fabian Gaffke's ninth inning homer saved the Millers from a shut-out.

Played in perfect weather before national baseball celebrities, the game sparkled with brilliant all-Star pitching and defensive work.

The All-Star fielders backed up their hurlers so staunchly that they cut the Millers off without a run in the eighth although the locals had men on first and third and nobody out.

Columbus contributed some classy pitching for the All-Stars in Johnny Grodzicki, who hurled two hitless innings and fanned four of the six men facing him.

Public Parks Net Tournament Set Here Saturday

Large fields and wide-open battles for the titles loom in the annual public parks tennis championships for men and women starting at the Sixteenth and Kennedy Street courts on Saturday.

Willie O'Steen Herbert will defend her title against opposition which will include most of the outstanding local women netmen, with Margo Lee Mahony a notable exception. Mrs. Mahony is ineligible, as she belongs to Chevy Chase Club.

With Allie Ritzenberg unable to defend his men's championship because he turned pro, the championship struggle will be hot among Ray Stocklinski, George Herbert, Billy Contreras, Jim Heiskell and others.

Entries for the tournament are being accepted at the Tennis Shop, and at the courts at Sixteenth and Kennedy.

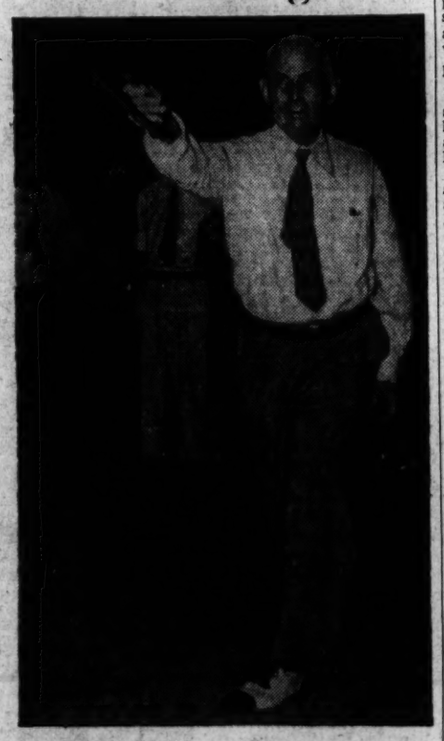
Clark Griffith Tosses Out First Horseshoe—No Ringer



Clark Griffith, the old pitching star, is at it again. But in this instance he's tossing for a ringer, which he barely missed getting. The Nats' president threw out the first shoe, as it were, to open the Interdepartmental Horseshoe Pitchers Association last evening

Interdepartmental Pitchers Association Opens Round Robin Play Under Lights

Noises closely resembling "The Anvil Chorus" were no indication that a blacksmith shop had been erected at Fifteenth and Constitution Avenue last night; they merely resulted from the opening of the Interdepartmental Horseshoe Pitchers' Association, where President Clark Griffith of the Washington ball club hurled the first shoe to open the round-robin series.

Griff, a seasoned hand at tossing equine footwear, flipped a shiny red shoe which missed being a ringer by only a few inches and thus started league play that will continue every Wednesday and Friday nights until late in August, when the final round of the tournament will be held.

After the split-second ceremony, Griffith was presented with a complimentary pair of the special red shoes as a souvenir.

The well-lighted courts, 20 in number, were so well occupied that they were serving double duty for the opening rounds, but eliminations will bring about reductions as time goes on. Nineteen of the courts are the regulation 40 feet long, and the remaining one is 10 feet less for the benefit of the ladies.

Members representing various Government departments will compete in classes according to point-scoring ability, and will be advanced or demoted, depending on future scores. Courts are open for league contests from 7 to 11 p. m. on Wednesdays and Fridays.

Six at Hagerstown Collect on $1,147.50 Daily Double

Microplay Completes Payoff, One of Biggest In State This Year; Canigo Pays $70.30

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Hagerstown, Md., July 16.—There was gold aplenty in these hills today—for six happy holders of tickets showing the numbers 1 and 8 for the oblong pieces of pasteboard which cost $2 less than an hour before this group of a half dozen stepped up to the pay-off window to collect $1,147.50. The mutuel was one of the best daily doubles of the year in Maryland and the tops in this area since the $5,500 figure set at Delaware Park's meeting last month.

Most of the big price was built up through the work of C. C. Heverly's Canigo, winner of the first race. The 2-year-old son of Swatter, with two very poor races at Delaware Park to recommend him, stuck to his running guns to survive a thrilling three-way photo finish. The camera called him a nose in front of Hugo Hoffman's Aubaley. A half length back of the fight for first money came Alan Clarke's Walter Haight.

Withstands Challenge

Jockey E. Delpino took Canigo to the front going to the first turn and the colt withstood a challenge from Walter Haight approaching the stretch. Aubaley then came to the outside and charged at the pacemakers. The two seemed to hit the wire together, but the photo favored the long-shot by a fraction of an inch. Canigo paid $70.30 in his own right and was the longest shot in the field of eight.

The final touches were put on the "double" by I. Beavers' Microplay, a 6-year-old mare which campaigned with varying success at Charles Town. With Jockey Martin Bletzacker in the saddle, Microplay took command at the first jump and was never headed. Eddie Johnson's Easter Rabbit lost ground from the outside post position, made repeated efforts to catch the leader and was beaten two lengths. Smart Lad, owned by Mr. L. E. Crowell, was third. Individual backers of Microplay collected $16.20.

Nick Wins Feature

S. W. Labrot's Nick, beaten off in his previous race, came back today to win the George W. Hammaker Purse, featuring the program. Under F. Kelly's handling, Nick, forged to the front early and then withstood repeated challenges from Morocco D. The stewards ruled that Kelly had waved his whip in the face of the second horse but let the number stand and fined the boy $20, the price of the winning mount. Nick paid $8.20.

Jockey Buddy Root rode winners in the sixth and seventh races. He came from out of the pack to score with Justa Jimmie which paid $6.80 and then came back to ride Channing to victory. The latter paid $14.70.

BOO'S LETTER, rated closest to FLYING ZELMA'S pace, rallied gamely on the outside and was up in the concluding strides. FLYING ZELMA was off poorly, went between horses boldly to take the lead and barely failed to last. LANELAN was pinched back early and came with good energy at the close. LEONARDTOWN held a forward position early under driving tactics and weakened.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:36½. Winner, S. W. La Brot's b. g. MOROCCO D. moved closest to the leader in the final half and was gradually wearing him down. SUMMER HAIL saved ground while moving to the leaders and held on gamely in the final sixteenth. CORORA lacked speed for a half and closed with good courage. CAIDON had speed, but was through early.

Selections at Hagerstown

Dear Al:

It looks like there is hope for Walter Haight. The little colt wormed his way into a photo finish yesterday and proved that he will get out of the maiden ranks soon. It's about time. R. L. Hanna, of Washington, purchased Mardi Gras from S. W. Labrot. The plater will race on the halvers. Jack Carpenter, of the Baltimore News-Post, came up to visit the pressbox crew. He reports that Bel Air has spent $35,000 on additions to the clubhouse. Hagerstown's business is growing with leaps and bounds. Tuesday's handle was $133,000, a splendid day's work at a half-mile oval. The biggest improvement there is the clubhouse built by Harold Baster. Col. Nelson W. Russler came down from Cumberland to tell the fans about plans for the meeting at that point. He says the track has put in 20 additional windows in anticipation of big business. Jockey F. Kelly was fined $20 for waving his whip in front of Morocco D. while winning with Nick in the fifth race. I have been advocating disciplinary action along this line for years and to my knowledge this is the first time a boy has been fined for this. Many a race has been decided by these unsportsmanlike tactics but somehow the stewards have never agreed with me. If the jockey is trying to keep his horse from running out or whipping it is o. k., but too many of the boys simply use their whips to make a coming horse shy. Starter William L. Schamerhorn has been going about his work so quietly and efficiently that he is hardly noticed. Galt Davis is going to Rockingham Park Saturday to see his Flying Duke perform. Flying Duke won two in a row at Delaware Park. Jockey Rocco Sisto will do the riding. Jockey Carson Kirk has learned to keep low on the back of a horse and is riding in excellent form. Both he and Danny Scocca have a chance of graduating to the larger tracks. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—This is one of the toughest races of the year. It is bubbling over with speed. Almost all of these 2-year-olds have won. I'm going to take ANONYMOUS, ABBOT'S CHANT and VALE DOVE.

Second race—LENA GIRL won at the other town and is fit and ready for a sprint of this kind. I'm going to string along. SOUR CHERRY has speed and is dangerous. If track conditions change look out for HAPPY HOSTESS.

Third race—COLORED POST has some races that would beat this field. This one has been sharpened and I look for a fine effort. DONA MONTEZ gets in this with feather weight and is a threat. NOTORIETY should go well.

Fourth race — FLAG ETTA breaks from the No. 1 position and is likely to stay on top all the way. WALTER LIGHT raced well at Delaware Park and belongs close. WAR SKIPPER is a possible surprise.

Fifth race—CLOCKS in present form is likely to beat any horse at any route. I'm forced to string along. KAI-MIN is dangerous. ALLEN CAID promises to get part of the pay in this company.

Sixth race—FITMISS is a doubtful starter but will be hard to beat if sent postward. ULTIMA THULE is better than shown in that recent start. ERIN'S GIRL to take care of the others.

Seventh race—PAMUNKEY gets my call. Has the speed to take the top on these and I'm going to take my chances. STRUMMING and STONE HAVEN promise to go well in this event.

Eighth race—CHIEF CHEROKEE seems to have a field built to order for him. A change in track conditions will be right up his alley. CHIDE and MAC'S CANTOR to account for the other money positions.

Sub race—If this event is used, I'll take SUMMER STOCK, IVORY TIP and CHARMING BOY.

Best bet—CLOCKS.

Trading Starts Here in New A. T. & T. Issue

Trading began yesterday in Washington and New York in the rights recently offered to stockholders of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. to buy $234,000,000 of the company's 3 per cent convertible debentures. The initial transaction in the New York Stock Exchange, "when issued," was at $1.53 for a right, 8,000 rights changing hands.

On the Washington Stock Exchange 240 shares of the rights were sold at 1 14/32 to 1 17/32, the bulk at the latter price. Closing bid and asked here was 1 13/32 to 1 17/32. The convertible debentures were quoted here at 112 bid and 113 asked.

The rights, which financial sources said promised to provide heavy dealings until they expire in August, allow stockholders of the big communications company, the largest single group of shareholders in the country, to purchase $100 face amount of the debentures for each eight shares held. The debentures are convertible, after January 1 next, into A. T. & T. stock at a price of $140 a share. The stock opened yesterday at $156.38.

The New York Exchange announced it had authorized for listing, but not for trading until further notice, the $234,000,000 of debentures and the 2,335,849 shares of additional stock into which the debentures are convertible.

Trading in the rights will continue on a "when-issued" basis until August 4. Thereafter dealings will be in the actual rights until they expire at noon August 29.

J. & L. Plan Attacked, Defended in Court

Pittsburgh, July 16 (AP).—Attorney Seymour M. Heilbron, representing two preferred stockholders, charged today in Federal Court the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation's proposed plan for revamping its capital structure was "illegal, unfair and unjust."

"We come here with clean hands. The company is interested in both common and preferred stockholders."

Stock List, Confronted by Profit Selling, Declines for First Time This Month

New York, July 16.—The July rise in the stock market ran into a flurry of profit selling today and prices on average recorded their first dip since the start of the month.

For a good part of the session the list gave signs of attaining new high ground. Before the late reversal such groups as rails, steels, mail orders, rubbers and specialities had moved up fractions to a point or more. Losses of like proportions were fairly general at the finish.

The Associated Press composite of 60 stocks was down .2 of a point at 43.5. Dealings, small in comparison with the active days last week, totaled 644,380 shares against 702,900 Tuesday.

Willingness of buyers on the recent rise to cash in their gains got some prompting from the theory that the speculative structure might have taken on some slightly vulnerable spots in the course of the month's advance to the best levels since January.

Then too, there were a few outside developments of a character to chill bullish ardor. Wall Street seemed less worried over the daily difference of opinion between Berlin and Moscow as to which side was doing better fighting in Russia but the Far Eastern situation took on a deeper crisis tinge with news of the fall of the Japanese cabinet.

Washington reports indicating the Administration would press for adoption of the Treasury's excess profits program, which is stiffer than that proposed by the House Ways and Means Committee, tended to nullify some of the optimism generated by the increased business profits so far reported for the June quarter.

Shares on the off side included United States Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Case, Caterpillar, Douglas, Western Union, Westinghouse, Johns-Manville and Texas Corporation. Carrying modest improvement to the end were Montgomery Ward, Harvester, Owens-Illinois and Dupont. Goodrich was bolstered by declaration of a 50-cent dividend, which compared with a previous payment of 25 cents. American Telephone rights to subscribe for the new issue of convertible bonds were traded for the first time, ranging from 1 17-32ds to 1 12-32ds.

Shifting to lower ground in the curb were American Cyanamid "B", Bell Aircraft and Lake Shore Mines. Aluminum, Ltd., Glen Alden Coal and Humble Oil were resistant. Volume here was around 127,000 shares against 112,000 yesterday.

Utility bonds attained a new 1941 high on the average today as other divisions of the listed market moved narrowly with profit-taking depressing low-priced rails. Issues of the Cotton Belt were an exception, rising strongly on reorganization proposals.

Much of the day's interest centered in the new American Telephone & Telegraph 3 per cent debentures which were dealt in on a when-issued basis. After opening at 112¼ the new issue fluctuated narrowly and finally ended at 111⅛ on total sales of $524,000, par value. Trading also was started on the stock exchange in the rights attached to the issue, the price opening at 1 17-32 and closing at 1 12-32.

An outstanding firm spot were various obligations of the St. Louis-Southwestern Railroad (Cotton Belt), which commanded early attention after publication of an Interstate Commerce Commission plan for reorganization. The road's second 4s bounded up 8½ points to 60 and several others were up major fractions to nearly 4 points.

Among gainers in the utility and other corporate groups were American & Foreign Power 5s at 58⅜, American Telephone 3¼s at 109¾, Columbia Gas & Electric 5s at 103⅜ and Walworth 4s at 85¾.

United States Treasuries closed on the stock exchange 25-32 of a point higher to 4-32 lower. A similar price pattern prevailed over the counter.

Cotton Prices Skid $1-$1.70 A Bale Lower

By the Associated Press

New York July 16.— Cotton futures dropped sharply in value at the last moment, losing $1 to $1.70 a bale to highlight again the day's commodity trading.

The slump came after early gains had added as much as 75 cents a bale to prices. It wiped out a good portion of the week's gains, and pushed all futures months below the 16-cent a pound level.

Commission house selling was credited with bringing about the drop, which caused numerous stop-loss sales.

Cottonseed oil also declined, losing .11 to .13 of a cent a pound, in sympathy with both cotton and wheat. Prices of most other commodities were mixed, cocoa losing as much at 1-5 of a cent and sugar as much as .04 cent.

Hides gained nearly 1-5 cent a pound, rubber rose .05 to .32 of a cent a pound and wool tops added .5 to 1.7 cents a pound.

Power Production Rebounds in Week

New York, July 16 (AP).—Rebounding sharply from the holiday letdown, electric power production for the week ended July 12 soared to a new high record of 3,141,158,000 kilowatt hours, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

Compared with the previous week's output of 2,866,865,000 (revised) the current production represents a rise of 9.6 per cent. In the corresponding period a year ago production was 2,651,626,000 kilowatt hours.

The upturn in output was less than seasonally expected, however, and the Associated Press index of power production declined to 147.0 the previous week. A year ago the figure stood at 128.0. The index, adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, is based on 1929-30 production as 100.

Strike Reduces Steel Output Rate

New York, July 16 (AP).—Iron Age said today in the weekly review of the steel industry:

"Need for uninterrupted production of steel is so great that the stoppage caused by a wildcat strike at Great Lakes Steel Corporation's Ecorse, Mich., plant seemed unlikely to continue long. . . . As a consequence of this shutdown, which apparently was staged to block signing later this week of a contract between the company and the steel workers organizing committee, the national rate of steel production dropped to 97, a decline of one and a half points from last week. Most other steel-producing districts are continuing to operate at last week's rate, with the important Pittsburgh and Chicago district at 100 per cent of capacity. . . ."

Oil Burner Sales Gain

Manufactures of oil burners have reported to the Census Bureau that in May they delivered 28,848 burners, compared with 22,819 in April. New orders amounted to 36,194 in May, compared with 23,642 in April.

Storage Space Lack Weakens Wheat Prices

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 16.—A growing shortage of storage space for grain not needed immediately for commercial purposes weakened the wheat market today and prices declined more than half a cent a bushel.

Reports that an embargo, similar to the one placed on Kansas City yesterday, may be invoked against Chicago and Minneapolis was the chief disturbing news in the trade. Shippers were warned today that Chicago storage space was growing scanty and to withhold movement of wheat to Chicago for storage purposes because there was danger of heavy demurrage or track storage charges if elevator space proved inadequate.

Wheat closed weak and ½-¾ cent below yesterday's finish, July, 1.03¼@1.03⅛; September, 1.05@1.04⅞; corn, ⅛-¼ higher, July, 73½; September, 75½; oats, ⅛-⅜ off; soy beans, 1½-2⅜ down, and lard 3-7 points off.

A Government grain storage committee has been appointed to investigate the storage situation in Chicago and W. H. McDonald, a member, said that incomplete returns indicate very little space remaining. The Chicago capacity is approximately 70,000,000 bushels. It was believed that approximately 1,100,000 bushels of loan wheat is now bound for Chicago and this will virtually fill the remaining empty bins.

The wheat embargoed at Kansas City and which may be embargoed here, is loan wheat or wheat on which the Government has loaned money and which is thereby removed from commercial channels until the loan is repaid or defaulted.

W. C. Engel, chairman of the storage committee, said that it never has been necessary to embargo shipments of wheat into Chicago and said he did not believe it necessary now, except for loan wheat. Complicating the situation are heavy shipments of Iowa corn here and to Milwaukee. This corn, however, may be shipped east by Lake steamer soon.

Corporations Advised to Stimulate Stock Ownership by Employes

Soapboxers make much political capital of the fact that nowadays workers in vast corporate enterprises no longer own the tools with which they work.

The late Warren S. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, took a different view, and used to inform workingmen that, if they would exercise thrift, they could peaceably take over through the years, the bulk of corporate ownership.

As a matter of fact, this process has already to some extent taken place, and, in referring to the trend back in the 20s, T. N. Carver, Harvard economist, described the movement as "the present economic revolution in the United States."

Before the depression, numerous corporations created easy purchase plans whereby their employes could buy shares on convenient terms. The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey in those days contributed one-third of the purchase price to those who agreed to retain the stock for at least five years.

If it was good business for corporations to stimulate employe stock ownership during the new era when stocks sold on a high price-to-earnings ratio, it might be better business to do so now when stocks are selling on a much lower price-to-earnings ratio. In order not to create an unduly speculative position for employe stockholders, management should consider the wisdom of setting up pay roll deduction plans for automatic savings by workers, permitting them to use half to buy United States Government Defense Savings Bonds and half in company common shares. Thus, they would encourage their employes to get a better balanced investment portfolio.

With upward of 12,000,000 stockholders, it is obvious that many of these are employes of corporations.

Besides, corporate employes are represented among 45,000,000 savings depositors, whose funds are indirectly invested partly in corporate securities.

The same is true of the 65,000,000 life insurance policyholders.

So that by and large, employes do have a participation in the ownership of tools, and other assets.

A. W. Ramsdell, vice president of the Borden Co., emphasized the realities in a novel way in terms of the specific facts concerning his own company. "Each individual employe," he disclosed, "earned an average of $284 more than he was paid, which was paid to the stockholders. There are 305 working days in the average year, so the average employe in our corporation contributed 93 cents a day to pay to stockholders. This, I submit, is not a staggering sum. Now, let's consider what the employe gets for the 93 cents a day he contributed last year. Before we or any other concern can employ an individual profitably, we have to have something for him to do.

"We have to have a plant for them to work in, machinery for them to run, an automobile to drive, a typewriter to operate, desks, chairs, trucks, lamps, and, last but not least, a supply of money with which to carry on the operation. Our investment per employe last year amounted to $4,474.

"Let's look at the situation in this light: The employe uses our tools, equipment, money, etc, in the course of his day's work amounting to $4,474, and the 93 cents per day which is the payment to the stockholder as a result of his investment amounts to 6.35 per cent. Now, if the employe wants to provide his own capital for financing his own fair share of the requirements in our business he can invest $4,474 of his own money and get his 93 cents back. If, on the other hand, he wants to use the stockholders' investment in order to enable him to earn a better income than he could without it, he pays 6.35 per cent—a very reasonable rate of interest for an unsecured loan."

New York Cotton

New York, July 16 (AP).—Cotton futures prices today dropped $1 to $1.70 a bale in last-hour selling after opening strong and setting new 11-year highs for the fourth straight day.

The downturn touched off stop loss orders and liquidation was at its height at the close. Speculative and commission house selling increasingly outweighed demand during the afternoon and a decline became a plunge.

Cotton cloth markets remained stagnant. No exports Tuesday. Season so far, 1,040,383 bales; port receipts, 8,164; port stocks, 3,290,111.

Airlines Hope To Obtain 75 New Planes

New York, July 16.—Airplane sources listened hopefully today for confirmation of reports 75 much-needed transport planes might be released to them to help take care of steadily increasing air travel.

One airline estimated its business was 50 per cent bigger than last year and said it could use a dozen more planes tomorrow.

In one way or another, reports said, more than 100 transport planes had been transferred from airline ownership to Britian and military demands had taken most factory output.

As a result, some lines have been forced to cancel schedules and others are operating every ship they have, aside from the normal number in hangars for overhaul and repair.

Could Use 150 More

"I expect the country's airlines could use another 100 to 150 planes right now," one source commented. "Why, if we had them, we'd be carrying light and even some heavy defense machine parts, there'd be more freight sent by air and maybe all first class mail could go by air."

The rumors that 75 planes might be made available stemmed from reports of a meeting in California between airline presidents and a Congressional aviation committee.

The group, it was said, studied the need for new equipment to replace that sent to Britain, and the question of how many planes could be released to the airlines without interfering with the national defense program.

No More Sacrifices

From other quarters there were reports that the airlines had received definite assurances that they would not be asked to transfer more planes from commercial to military purposes.

One line, which has given up several planes to the army, was assured that it would receive four Douglas DC-3 transports early this fall.

Sugar Futures

New York, July 16 (AP).—World sugar futures prices declined as much as 5 points today under profit taking, but recovered for net losses of 1 to 2 points on sales of 27,700 tons.

Domestic sugar closed unchanged to 4 points lower on sales of 6,450 tons on weakness in the raw market.

Raw offerings were held at 3.55 cents a pound and refined on a basis of 5.05 cents a pound. An offer at 4.90 and 4.95 cents was withdrawn, and National Sugar Refining Co. set July 31 as a deadline for withdrawal of 4.95 sugars.

Farm Staples Bought by U. S. For British Aid

The Agriculture Department disclosed yesterday the purchase from Government Crop Loan Stocks of 75,000 bales of cotton, 30,000,000 pounds of tobacco and 2,544,160 bushels of corn to be made available, authoritative sources said, to Great Britain.

This is the first of these farm commodities to be acquired by the department for use in aiding nations resisting aggression since the lease-lend act was passed.

The department's announcement of the transaction was limited to the bare statement of the purchase from the commodity credit corporation, agency which controls commodities taken over by the Government under grower crop loan programs.

How much money was involved was not disclosed, but at current market values the commodities should be worth roughly $13,000,000.

The tobacco was said to be fluecured type, the kind used principally for cigarettes.

Announcement of these purchases came a few days after other government sources had stated that the British, supplied with ships made available by the United States, desired to secure American cotton and tobacco to supplement declining stocks. These sources said the British hoped to take up to 600,000 bales of cotton during the coming season.

Up until this time the British had taken only concentrated food products because, officials said, of shipping shortages.

Later in the day the Agriculture Department announced it would continue to subsidize exports of wheat flour for an indefinite period. Authorization for previous subsidy payments expired June 30.

The subsidy program is designed to enable exporters to meet lower prices of other countries in export markets. American wheat prices are pegged above world levels by Government farm programs.

Food Chain Adopts 5-Day Week Policy In Washington

Washington employes of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. will be put on a five-day, 48-hour work week as soon as possible, it was announced here last night by President John A. Hartford. At present, the grocery chain's workers here put in 54 hours a week.

Approximately 250 employes in 21 stores in the District of Columbia and vicinity are affected.

The reduction in hours is being made nationally following a two-month experiment in New York City, Mr. Hartford said. He added that wages would continue to be the same as for the six-day work week.

A local official said all stores here are expected to conform to the new schedule by Labor Day. The change, he pointed out, may be slow in some stores where additional personnel will be needed.

Stores will continue open six days a week.

Output of 1941 Motor Cars To Run Over July 'Deadline'

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, July 16.—The end of the current month may mark the theoretical termination of the automobile industry's 1941 model year, but some 1941 model cars still will roll off assembly lines during early August.

At least one company, reporting itself far behind in the filling of orders, has made tentative plans to continue assemblies for at least a fortnight after the much-talked-about conclusion of the present model period.

The motor industry's model year, as a matter of fact, has no fixed date, being controlled normally by consumer demand. It is because of a sustained volume of retail demand that the various producing units of the industry will assemble an aggregate of close to 400,000 cars and trucks this month.

When the Office of Production Management announced its initial production curtailment edict it made it effective as of August 1, when a majority of manufacturers would have completed their 1941 model output. Thus any company producing 1941 models after August 1 still will have to figure them as part of the output volume of the curtailed production period.

Two of the car manufacturers have closed down for a couple of weeks, having concluded 1941 model output. Presumably they will be the first to have their 1942 models ready for presentation, although the exact date has not been disclosed. In this respect the start of the new model year is going to be little different from previous years, the new units being brought out at various dates between the middle of August and mid-September.

And despite the motor industry's lack of new machine tools for passenger car production the car engineers have made some startling alterations in 1942 model styling. Final approval of course, has been given the design of all these new types.

New sweeping lines characterize most of them, with fenders tapering off into front door panels in some instances. Contrary to some expectations there has been no general trend toward shortening wheelbases.

The seventh inning of last night's "grudge" softball game between Kavakos Grill and Senate Beer turned into a hotbed of discussion and argument after a disputed umpire's decision that allowed Senate's Phil Fox to score from second on an overthrow to first, tieing the score, 1-1. Umpire Bernie Coleman (extreme left) is talking to John Kavakos, second in command of the Grill team. Bill Kavakos, head of the outfit, has his back to the camera as he argues with a group of Senate players

Veterans Lead Giants to Win Over Reds, 7-4

By the Associated Press

New York, July 16.—Two old-timers, Gabby Hartnett and Dick Bartell, led the New York Giants to a 7 to 4 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds today.

Hartnett doubled with the bases loaded to spark a four-run blast against Bucky Walters in the first inning and hit another two-bagger leading to New York's last run in the seventh.

Bartell hit three singles and batted in three runs for a perfect day at the plate and also starred in the field.

Walters, in absorbing his seventh defeat against 11 victories, was the victim of a couple of errors which made four of the Giants' runs unearned, but he also was hit hard, giving up ten hits in seven innings before removed for a pinch hitter.

Bob Carpenter had to be rescued in the seventh, but received credit for his seventh win against one setback.

was held scoreless until the disputed stanza by Kavakos' blond Jack "Cannonball" Smith who was given loud backing. One large gentleman was armed with a shrill whistle that he blew at top blast whenever a Smith ball was about to let fly, and other opposition fans were equipped with various brands of noisemakers.

Braves Beat Bucs, 4-1, Bow In Second, 13-5

By International News Service

Boston, July 16.—Jim Tobin pitched his fourth victory in a row today when he turned back the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4 to 1, in the opener of a double-header, but the visitors came back in the nightcap to down the Braves, 13 to 5.

Tobin allowed eight hits and took the decision over Lanning, who was relieved by Bowman.

Dietz, one of three Pirates used on the mound, won the nightcap over Hutchings, third of five men sent to the mound by the Braves. The Pirates sewed it up with seven runs in the eighth, as part of the fruits of a 15-hit attack.

Yanks Down Indians, 10-3; DiMag Hits

The victory means the Yankees can lose one of their remaining two contests here and still leave with a six-game margin. It was their sixteenth triumph in their last seventeen starts.

Final Rites Tomorrow for M. C. Hazen

Final rites for Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will be held at 1 p. m. tomorrow at the Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest.

Friends and District Building associates have arranged elaborate last tributes to the "Grand Old Man" of the municipal government. His body will lie in state today—and until an hour before the services—at Hysong's funeral home, Thirteenth and N Streets Northwest.

Because of Mr. Hazen's multitude of friends, the funeral committee, headed by Tax Assessor Edward Dent, decided yesterday to limit honorary pallbearers to those who served with him on the Board of Commissioners. The list includes:

Commissioners John Russell Young and Charles W. Kutz and former Commissioners George Allen, Dan I. Sultan, David McCoach, jr., and John G. Gotwals.

Active pallbearers will be H. Lynn Colvin, E. Melburn Colvin and Melvin Hazen Colvin, nephews, and Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, Kenneth G. Fernald and Tax Assessor Dent.

Burial at Manassas

Mr. Hazen will be buried beside his wife in the family plot at Manassas, Va.

Following the Hamline Church services, the funeral procession, escorted by a detail of Metropolitan police, will move south along Sixteenth Street to H Street, west to Seventeenth Street and then south to Constitution Avenue and over Lincoln Memorial Bridge.

On the Virginia side of the Potomac, the procession will be met by Arlington County and State policemen who will act as escorts to Manassas.

Uniformed policemen will be stationed at each intersection along the funeral procession route.

Talk of a succesor to Commissioner Hazen was heard on all sides at the District Building yesterday. Most frequently mentioned was Sefton Darr, attorney, civic leader and former president of the District Bar Association.

He is known to have supporters on Capitol Hill and is strongly favored by citizens groups and District officials.

Melvin D. Hildreth, also an ardent civic leader and head of the national Circus Fans' Association, is another prominently mentioned.

Other Suggestions

Some of the others suggested are Malcolm McConihe, Democratic National Committeeman for the District; Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways; Thomas Lodge, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, and Richmond B. Keech, corporation counsel.

Commissioner John Russell Young, meanwhile, is acting chairman of the present two-man Board of Commissioners. The District Building will close at 1 p. m. tomorrow to permit municipal employes and officials to attend the funeral services.

Hazen's Service Praised By Board of Trustees

The board of trustees of the Health Security Administration praised Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen's "long, faithful and outstanding service to the City of Washington" last night in a resolution of sorrow over his death. Mr. Hazen, said the resolution, "uniformly served the cause of good government in the District of Columbia and of the health and welfare of the community." The resolution was signed by Dr. Henry C. Macatee, president of the board, and Willard C. Smith, secretary of HSA.

Bill Didn't Provide Statehood For Washington, Sumners Says

The Capper-Sumners District suffrage resolution is an "enabling act" and would not have endowed the Capital with a kind of "quasi-Statehood," Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, declared yesterday in commenting upon decision of the Senate Judiciary Committee to recommend indefinite postponement of consideration of the bill.

The measure proposed amendment of the Constitution to authorize Congress to give the District Congressional representation and to delegate self-governing powers.

"This is an enabling act to permit Congress to do as its judgment dictates," Summers declared. "It proposed, only, to give Congress the right to permit the District to send a representative, or representatives, to Congress.

"The question is whether Congress, which has the power of governing the District, should be given the opportunity to have, if it deems advisable, a representative or representatives of the people of the District available for information and advice and with authority to speak and vote for the people of the District in National matters and, especially, in matters affecting the local government.

Democrats' Choice For N. Y. Mayor

WILLIAM O'DWYER, Irish-born Brooklyn district attorney, is the Democratic candidate for mayor of New York

G. W. Summers Dies in W. Va.; Ex-D. C. Writer

By the Associated Press

Charleston, W. Va., July 16.—George W. Summers, 73, former publisher of newspapers in Charleston and Huntington and for 25 years a Washington correspondent, died early today.

Summers, member of an old Charleston family, was publisher of the Huntington Advertiser and Charleston Gazette during the last decade of the nineteenth century.

He later worked on papers in Wheeling, Parkersburg and Pittsburgh and for a brief period was night manager for the Associated Press in Pittsburgh. After leaving Pittsburgh he was Washington correspondent for several newspapers for a quarter of a century.

Summers was the author of two books on West Virginia which were distributed at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1982.

He retired several years ago and returned to Charleston.

Cyrus Kehr, 85, Attorney, Buried At Cedar Hill

The Rev. Dr. William L. Darby officiated yesterday at funeral services for Cyrus Kehr, 85, patent attorney and pioneer city planner.

Following last rites at the Hines funeral home, a commitment service was conducted at the grave in Cedar Hill Cemetery by Albert Pike Masonic Lodge.

Born in an Indiana log cabin of Swiss-German parentage, Mr. Kehr was widely known for the "Nation Plan" which he published in 1926, setting forth a system of coordinated physical development of the United States.

The plan was the outgrowth of an address which he delivered before the American Civic Association in Washington on December 31, 1915. Many of his proposals, such as the construction of super-highway networks, have been translated into reality.

Ex-Hod Carrier From Ireland May Rule N. Y.

By the Associated Press

New York, July 16.—Twenty-eight years ago an Irish immigrant was industriously carrying plaster to skilled workmen erecting the Woolworth Building. This fall that same immigrant may sit in the City Hall as mayor and gaze across at the finished product.

Such is the saga of success William O'Dwyer, 51, will have builded of himself, for today O'Dwyer, presently the district attorney of Kings County (Brooklyn), was named to lead the Democratic slate in the municipal election.

But between the plaster carrying days and a county judgeship from which he resigned to win election as district attorney, O'Dwyer, born in Bohola, County Mayo, strove to make something of himself by diligent workmanship and hard study.

Stoker on ships plying the South American run, day laborer, longshoreman and finally policeman, this Irishman 24 years to the day after receiving his appointment as policeman was named to aspire to the job as commander in chief of all the 18,000 policemen in the city.

As a policeman O'Dwyer studied nights for a law degree. Seven years later he was admitted to the bar by way of Fordham Law School. Resigning as patrolman, he entered private practice. When James J. Walker resigned as Mayor, in 1932, his successor, Joseph V. McKee, appointed the erstwhile cop to the magistrate's bench.

Within six years Gov. Herbert H. Lehman appointed O'Dwyer to the county bench and the following year O'Dwyer was elected district attorney of Kings County.

What Thomas E. Dewey was to racket-busting in Manhattan O'Dwyer was to "Murder Incorporated" in Brooklyn. During his 18-month tenure he has solved 85 murders, including more than 45 attributed to Murder, Inc., and also contributed to the conviction of Charles (The Bug) Workman, slayer of Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer, hoodlum and gangster.

O'Dwyer, whose parents were country schoolteachers in the cattle-raising county, Mayo, married Katherine Hinihan in 1916. They have no children.

Two brothers gave their lives to the city, James, a fireman, while answering a false alarm; John, while assisting a detective during a Brooklyn holdup.

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, who has not removed himself from the field for reelection to a third term, said in advance of O'Dwyer's designation by the Democrats:

ODD BODKINS — By FRED FOX and CHASE CRAIG

I CAN BARELY SEE THE GOAT!
WELL, WE HAVE TO KEEP A SAFE DISTANCE! EVEN THOUGH "GLUMITE" EXPLODES UPWARD!
WILL IT MAKE MUCH OF A HOLE?
HARDLY ANY! IT'S MAIN POWER IS CONCENTRATED UPWARDS AND SIDEWAYS! BUT THERE'S A BOX-FULL OF IT!
WHEN I GIVE THE SIGNAL, PUMP THE HANDLE!
I THOUGHT THEY WERE TRYING TO HARM YOU, SYLVESTER! BUT I GUESS THEY ONLY GAVE YOU SOMETHING TO EAT! YOU SEEM TO BE ENJOYING IT!
GLUMITE
DON'T PUMP THAT HANDLE! PLEASE DON'T!
I CAN'T HEAR HER! WHAT'S SHE SAYING?
PUMP THE HANDLE, AND WE'LL ASK HER WHEN SHE GETS CLOSER!

FIRST LET ME FLASH THIS STORY TO MY OFFICE—
THEN I'M COMING ALONG!
SWEET DREAMS!

With all the talk about man-hours and such things that's going around these days in the labor situation, it might be interesting to note that for a single half-hour on the air, a network radio program consumes something like one thousand hours of solid work.
Take Andre Kostelanetz's "Pause That Refreshes," which you hear over WJSV and the Columbia network every Sunday. Kostelanetz himself starts working on a program as much as 20 days before the actual broadcast, when he begins poring over the many compositions, old and new, that are available. After a lengthy process of elimination, he decides on the few that balance best.
Kostelanetz then discusses with the singer, who's usually a famous star of the "Mef," what sort of arrangements they want. From there he goes on to a series of conferences with his staff of arrangers. Four of these specialists work for a week under his meticulous supervision to see that every measure is just right.
After many revisions, copyists spend another few days completing all the parts for the 45-piece orchestra. A full day's rehearsal brings to the scene the cooperation of a technical staff of sound-men, electricians, production and script workers. And, of course, Kostelanetz himself and the principals also spend the entire last day in rehearsal, perfecting things.
What it all adds up to is that nearly sixty people have contributed a total of more than 60,000 minutes for the half-hour program.

Contract Bridge

◇ K 7
♣ A K J 9 5 2

The bidding has gone:

East	South	West	North
3 ♡	?	—	—

The Answer

This looks like a hand that should be played at three no trump. If South doubles, North will probably bid three spades or four diamonds. If he mentions the spades, South will go to three no trump anyway; but if the call is in diamonds, the bidding is beyond the three-no-trump level. South should therefore immediately go to game in no trump. He seems to have the opponent's suit doubly stopped and may be able to take either five or six clubs. If partner can help out a bit in the other two suits, the contract should be safe.
